MORRO CASTLE DEATH LIST MAY REACH 225; 127 BODIES FOUND AFTER FIRE AT SEA

85,000 HOSIERY WORKERS CALLED ON TO JOIN IN TEXTILE STRIKE

Wednesday Is Date Set for Their Walkout — Upholstery, Drapery and Rug Plant Workers Ordered Out Tomorrow.

UNION LEADER'S PEACE PLAN

Gorman Suggests President's Board Arbitrate Dispute — Both Sides Preparing for Test of Strength.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Hosiery workers were called on strike tonight by their union officers. The call affects 85,000 workers in a dozen states, with the principal center in North Carolina. Representatives of local unions met this afternoon and voted for the strike. The call was set for Wednesday night, but officials predicted the walkout would begin on Monday. After the meeting they left for their home cities to begin activities.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the National Strike Committee, today ordered the textile strike extended on Monday to all workers in the upholstery, drapery, carpet, rug, pile fabric, plush and velvet plants. Gorman said that textile dyers also would be told to quit next week unless their employers met union terms.

Offers Mediation Plan.

Gorman in a radio speech tonight said: "We propose that the present presidential board become a board of arbitraion. We propose that arbitration begin not later than Monday, Sept. 10, 1934. We propose that both sides agree to accept the findings of the arbitration."

He proposed that all mills should be closed meantime. (Previously he had said he would not consent to arbitration unless all mills were closed in order that the ensuing negotiations be conducted "in an atmosphere of peace.") He said in his radio speech: "We challenge the management to agree to this orderly procedure toward peace."

Gorman announced that a reward of $1000 was offered by the United Textile Workers for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death or injury of any striking textile worker.

Arbitration Discussed.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, after a two-hour conference with the President's mediation board, said: "We discussed the possibilities of arbitration and a plan of arbitration but no definite line of procedure. The matter seems to be moving to a point where something definite will happen. I want to do anything I can to help settle this strike as soon as possible on a fair and just basis."

Green said he would call a meeting of representatives of the federation's 108 international unions to discuss its position in the textile strike.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, representing the employers, after conferring with the board last night, told newspaper men that in several mill centers the townspeople had organized themselves as mill guards and would lend assistance in the effort to set idle machinery to turning on Monday.

He was asked if such a situation might not result in more deaths and disorders than if National Guard troops, accustomed to discipline were used. "It is hard to tell," he replied.

Labor's preparations consisted of the organization throughout the South of flying squadrons in groups of 10, at meetings at which union officers gave them instructions to refrain from violence.

Mediators Report Progress.

Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, chairman of the presidential mediation board, said he was encouraged by what had been done and that he and his colleagues were making "satisfactory progress in enlightening ourselves on the situation."

Thus far all the work of the board has been exploratory. No proposals for a settlement have been conveyed to either side on behalf of the other. Other members of the board are Raymond V. I[illegible], Brooklyn borough presi-

MAJOR GETS 13 YEARS FOR KIDNAPING WOMAN

Scion of Prominent Virginia Family Also Indicted on Murder Charge.

By the Associated Press.

FINCASTLE, Va., Sept. 8.—Maj. Robert C. Kent Jr., World War veteran and scion of a prominent Virginia family, was sentenced to 13 years in the State penitentiary here today after having been convicted of kidnaping Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, Blue Ridge Springs hotel proprietor.

The bullet-pierced body of a woman, identified as Mrs. Hastings, was found near Stroudsburg, Pa., three days after she had left with Kent on an automobile trip, but Prosecuting Attorney Phillip Kohen said that he was undecided whether to prosecute Kent under an indictment for the murder of the woman, which is still outstanding.

Kent, at times apparently oblivious to proceedings of the trial, heard the jury's verdict and the Judge's sentence calmly.

After pronouncing sentence Judge A. C. Buchanan allowed 60 days' stay of execution of sentence to allow defense counsel time to prepare and file and appeal.

Theresa Kent, the 24-year-old wife of the defendant, sobbed as the verdict was read to the crowded courtroom. Kent said: "I had expected acquittal. I am an innocent man. Some day the truth will be known."

It took the jury of Blue Ridge Mountain men one hour and five minutes to reach their verdict. By their verdict the jurymen expressed their belief that Kent had kidnaped Mrs. Hastings from the hotel she operated, on June 24, and that he had expected to reap monetary gain from the act.

FARMERS' PARADE IN MADRID ENDS IN RIOT; SEVEN KILLED

Police Tried to Let Catalonian Group Demonstrate Undisturbed; Radicals Start Violence.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—Seven were dead tonight and many wounded after a day of political rioting in Madrid over the arrival of Catalonian farmers who came to ask for agricultural legislation.

Three laborers were killed tonight in the lower district of the city, where guards and strikers had a fight. Radicals were behind most of the violence, fighting with police, municipal guards and other officers who tried to let the farmers demonstrate undisturbed.

The Socialists had declared a general strike in the Capital, which was partly successful. They issued orders to stop the strike at midnight.

Despite the attempts to prevent them, the farmers paraded into the capital. About 15,000 of them arrived by train and automobile from the Province of Catalonia. As the agricultural representatives' meeting began, word was received that a general strike had been declared at Oviedo, protesting against a social and religious reunion at the sanctuary of Covadonga tomorrow. The extremists opposed the assembly on the grounds it is a political rather than a religious gathering.

COSTLY JUNKETING BY SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS SHOWN

Howard G. Cook Defends Recent Trip by Saying Colleagues Go on Similar Journeys.

THOUSANDS SPENT IN LAST FEW YEARS

Sometimes Families Go Along in Official Autos, With Chauffeur Paid from Board Funds.

Persons opposing the candidacy of Howard G. Cook for president of the Board of Education at the board's October meeting called attention last week to a trip he made at the board's expense last month. Cook, now vice-president, freely discussed this journey and pointed out that all other members of the board had gone on various junkets in recent years.

Inquiry by the Post-Dispatch showed that the members had traveled thousands of miles by rail and in board automobiles, at a cost of thousands of dollars to the board in the last few years. Where board cars were used, expenses of the board-paid chauffeurs and of operating the machines were paid from school funds, in addition to the traveling costs of the members.

Many of the trips were made to conventions of school organizations, which the paid executive officers of the board customarily attend also. In some instances members did not recall the names of the organizations whose sessions they attended. One or two members privately questioned the value to the schools of attendance at educational conventions by the members, although others insisted the board thus obtained useful information.

Some Trips of Real Value.

Other trips were made by members in connection with board business or to inspect specialized schools before erecting buildings here. The members declared these journeys were of real value to the board, often resulting in a saving of money. The 12 board members receive no salary. They pointed out that they gave much time to its affairs, sometimes at the expense of their private business, and some of them said they spent more on the junkets than the board allowed them. Several said it was necessary to spend money in entertaining officials whom they consulted on their journeys.

Cook went to the convention of the National Association of Public School Business Officials at New York last month to invite the organization here for its next meeting. He drew $350 for his own expenses and $200 for the car and the board chauffeur. He took his wife and four children along, going by way of the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and staying about two weeks. The chauffeur was on vacation. Two other members, Henry P. Schroeder and Dr. Francis C. Sullivan, also drew $350 each and went to this convention by rail.

At the regular meeting of the Finance Committee in July the executive officers were authorized to attend this gathering, but the committee said it was unnecessary for board members to go at public expense. Later, in the absence of Richard Murphy, chairman, the committee appropriated $2000 for members to make the trip, allowing $350 for each member desiring to go.

Another member, Dr. Solon Cameron, used a board car to take his wife and twin daughters to a meeting of the National Educational Association in Washington during the summer. He said he drew $250 for his own expenses, besides an allowance for the car and driver's expense. Eight members went to another N. E. A. meeting at Cleveland last February, by rail. Their recollections of the amount they drew varied from "$90 or more" to $250.

Other Trips in Recent Years.

Numerous other trips, to points as distant as Los Angeles, have been made in recent years by board members. Generally they had no balances to return to the treasury when they got back, although some of them reported turning in balances in certain instances. Some of the junkets have been provided for by direct appropriations by the board and funds for others have been drawn, by arrangement, from the cash contingent funds of the executive officers, of which open records are not kept.

The board owns two Pierce-Arrow limousines and a Packard. These were assigned, when acquired, to the Superintendent of Instruction, the Building Commissioner and the secretary-treasurer. It has become customary for most ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 8.—Thirty white-faced men and women, rescued from the blazing decks of the Morro Castle, lay on cots in Fitkin Memorial Hospital at Neptune City today.

Martha Bradbury, a New York nurse, sobbed as she inquired for news of her companion, Lillian Davison, with whom she tried to swim ashore.

"I am afraid Lillian was lost," she said. Miss Bradbury, huddled in a brown blanket, is suffering from submersion and shock.

"Everyone on the boat behaved well after the fire broke out," she said. "There were crowds on the deck but no one seemed excited.

"I heard one man singing, 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here;' then someone else said, 'Don't sing that at a time like this; say your prayers instead.'

"Everyone began praying. When we saw we could not get in a boat, Lillian and I decided to jump.

"At first, though, we had a hard time getting to the rail because of the throng of other people who could not make up their minds. Finally we were able to jump. It must have been about 4 o'clock.

Loses Sight of Friend.

"In a moment I could see Lillian swimming beside me in the water. It was a tragic thing. We could see land, and when other ships arrived, we could see them.

"We swam as hard as we could but didn't seem to get anywhere, because the water was so cold and we didn't have anything to hold on to.

"At first there were a lot of peo-

MAN THOUGHT TO BE DANCER KILLS SELF IN HOTEL AT RENO

Authorities Trying to Identify Victim Known as C. H. Baker.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 8.—Authorities were attempting today to identify the body of a man known as C. H. Baker, about 25 years old, who they said, committed suicide in a Reno hotel Thursday night. It is thought he was a professional dancer.

Police said they found the initials "V. N. 2" on expensive luggage in the man's room and part of an address which included "Fifth Avenue, New York." The leg muscles, physicians said, were highly developed.

The man shot himself in the head with a pistol, leaving a note saying, "There isn't anybody that you can notify about my death; just put me out in Potter's field."

REPORT LIGHTNING STARTED BLAZE

Owners of Craft Lack Details on Cause — Commerce Department Directs Inquiry Into Disaster Off New Jersey Coast

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9. (Sunday).—The luxurious liner Morro Castle was destroyed by fire off the Jersey coast Saturday in one of the most tragic sea disasters of recent years, and early today between 127 and 225 passengers and crew were dead or reported missing.

The liner, flames still crackling over the mass of superstructure wreckage, was beached last night at Asbury Park, N. J., towed to shallow water by the Coast Guard cutter Tampa.

Of a total of 558 persons aboard, bound for New York from a Havana cruise, 441 had been tentatively placed in the list of survivors compiled by Associated Press reporters from groups blown ashore along the gale-swept Jersey coast or brought to docks here by rescue ships.

127 Bodies Reported.

Up to 9 o'clock tonight, 127 bodies of victims of the disaster, washed ashore or picked up by rescue boats, had been reported at the National Guard barracks at Sea Girt, N. J., which was turned into an improvised morgue. Of the dead, 57 were from the Coast Guard station at Mauasquan, 32 from Point Pleasant and 38 from the immediate vicinity of Sea Girt.

The Ward Line, early last night, placed the list of survivors at 333, leaving 225 unaccounted for. Line officials said the list, of course, was not complete, and they made further tabulations throughout the night.

As rapidly as possible, the militia and Coast Guardsmen were transporting the bodies to a central morgue hurriedly set up in the National Guard barracks at Sea Girt, N. J., to facilitate identification by relatives and friends. It will be at least two days, Coast Guardsmen said, before all the dead will be identified.

Throughout the night, the nor'easter through which the

CREW BROKE INTO CABINS TO ROUSE SLEEPING PERSONS

Episcopal Bishop and Wife Among Those Rescued—Three Ships Went to Aid of Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Saved from death by flames or drowning, more than 150 men, women and children—some hysterical, some injured—were brought to New York today by three ships that sped to the rescue of the passengers and crew of the Morro Castle.

The Monarch of Bermuda brought in 72 persons alive and one woman passenger dead; the City of Savannah, 60, and the Andrea F. Luckenbach, 22. The ships stood by the stricken liner until it appeared all had been rescued. Then, with their scantily clad groups of rescued, they set out for New York harbor.

Among the persons removed to hospitals from the Monarch of Bermuda were Bishop Hiram Richard Hulse, 66 years old, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and his wife, the former Frances Seymour of Northampton, Mass.

"If they (the Monarch of Bermuda) hadn't come along I don't know what we would have done," said Bishop Hulse, whose home is in Havana. He and his wife were picked up from the water, semiconscious.

Father and Son Missing.

Wandering through the groups of rescued on the Monarch of Bermuda was Robert Lione, 4, looking for his mother, who was in a stateroom under care of physicians. His brother, Raymond Lione, 8, of Long Island City, and his father, Anthony, were missing. An uncle hurried aboard as the liner docked.

"Where's daddy?" the uncle asked.

"Don't know," said Robert. "Guess he drowned." Robert was unable to say how he got aboard the Monarch of Bermuda. He had been sleeping with his mother. Raymond was in a stateroom with the father.

Sheet of Flame.

E. Rhinehart of Philadelphia said he was not awakened by anybody.

"The noise and clatter aroused me", he said. "I smelled smoke and knew something was wrong. I tried to get out into the passageway and a sheet of flame leaped into my room. I crawled out through a porthole and onto the deck.

"I saw people jumping off and finally I jumped myself. The next thing I knew I was on this boat. When I became unconscious I don't know, but it probably was soon after I struck the water."

Herman Torberg and his nephew and niece, John and Ruth, said that when they were awakened there were no lights, and that flames and smoke made it impossible for them to get up where the life boats were.

"I'm sure it wasn't lightning that started the fire," said Torberg. "I think the fire started in the lounge."

Crippled Woman Drowns.

Efforts to save a crippled woman, thought to be Mrs. William Price of Brooklyn, proved futile. She was lowered to a lifeboat by ropes, but just as she was near the water's edge she collapsed and toppled into the sea. Her husband, William Price, was saved.

Members of the crew said in some cases it was impossible to get to passengers' cabins, and that they had smashed in portholes to awaken the sleeping inmates. Many of the crew ripped off their shirts, soaked them in water and used them for masks to aid the passengers through the swirling masses of smoke.

Ten of the 22 persons on the Andrea F. Luckenbach, a freighter, were taken to hospitals. The ship was one of the first to reach the scene of the disaster.

"I am happy to be alive," said Mrs. Dorothy Cole, 22, of Jersey City, N. J., who jumped into the water after the fire cut off other means of escape.

Until the ship arrived in Brooklyn she had only a flimsy nightgown and a blanket for protection. Her husband, James Cole, was missing. "Where is James? . . . Where is James?" she mumbled over and over.

Mrs. Clara Siegmund, 57, of Bardonia, N. Y., said a steward awakened her by pounding on the cabin door, and that her roommate helped her put on a life preserver. "I swallowed lots of smoke," she said. "Before we got off the fire was raging over the whole boat. I don't remember much what happened afterward."

Capt. Hill's Story.

Capt. Henry Hill of the Andrea F. Luckenbach said: "I first saw the flaming ship about 4 o'clock. It was seven miles away. We set out for her, and about a mile away put out two lifeboats. The first picked up nine persons, the second boat four.

"The coast guard turned over to us the rest of the persons we brought in. Before we left, the superstructure of the Morro Castle was almost burned away."

Capt. Robert E. Carey of the Dollar Liner President Cleveland described the ship as "a mass of flames" at the time his liner reached the scene at 6:10 a. m. "Everything was on fire from the bridge clean aft," he said. "The interior was burned when we got there. All that was standing were the steel frames of the deck housing.

"We launched two lifeboats, and both scouted for an hour and a half. Neither found a survivor or body."

"Every Porthole Ablaze."

Miss Catherine Clifford of Boston, a passenger on the Dollar liner, said "every porthole was ablaze" when she first saw the ship.

"We could see people moving on the forecastle head, and it wasn't long before the Morro Castle began to list to one side. There were lifeboats bobbing in the rough sea. Later we could see nothing but smoke and fog which enveloped the wreck."

Among the survivors on the City of Savannah was Miss Margaret Cotter, 23, of Springfield, Mass., who swam in the water for five hours before she was picked up.

"I was in my stateroom on D deck," she said. "I smelled smoke, saw people running and then the flames. I jumped overboard and swam for five hours, and then I saw a lifeboat. The boat had 23 people in it. The crew was in a bad way because of the four and five foot waves. They had difficulty in keeping the boat from being swamped."

Miss Cotter was furnished clothing by passengers on the City of Savannah. She wore a brown suit and men's shoes.

Captain Francis' Story.

Capt. Albert R. Francis of the Monarch of Bermuda said his first word of the disaster was a message saying: "The Morro Castle's afire, and assistance is needed immediately."

"We were 20 miles away," he related. "After an hour, through the fog we could see the flames licking up into the sky. Then the dim outline of the ship.

"We made the 20 miles in an hour, and as we approached it seemed to us the whole ship was in flames. Smoke and fire curled up half way round the giant smoke-stacks. We saw that the Morro Castle was anchored, its bow into the wind and the only part clear of the flames. The gale swept them back.

"I ordered five lifeboats down and we picked up our survivors from the poop deck and from the water, into which they had dived in a frenzy of terror.

Engulfed in Flames.

"At one time we were less than 60 feet from the Morro Castle, almost atop of her, and she seemed engulfed in flames. The wind whipped the sea into a choppy swirling mass of water.

"Many of those we rescued slid down to our lifeboats on ropes. Others were picked up unconscious from the water. We could see and hear the poor devils screaming and shouting for assistance. We put down our boats and went to them.

"Staff Capt. Leslie Banyard in one of our boats picked up 32 persons. Most of them were hysterical and some were unconscious from being in the water so long. Some of the victims were in night clothes and all were scantily clad. As soon as those poor devils put down, they hit a heavy sea, and the life boats were tossed about like toothpicks.

"Through it all was the beating rain, the fog and the whipping gale, making any effort to aid the passengers and crew doubly difficult."

Troops Help Firemen Fight Flames in Japanese City.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 9.— (Sunday) — Four hundred houses were destroyed by fire today during a typhoon, in Daishoji, a city of 50,000 in Ishikawa perfecture.

No casualties had been reported up to late this morning. The storm handicapped fire-fighters and troops were called out to assist them.

Death List May Reach 224 on Burned Liner

Coast Guardsmen were forced to keep their boats ashore. Search would have been futile in the heavy seas.

Around midnight, the storm abated somewhat and early today the rescue parties all along the shore prepared to search the waters again.

Cause of Fire in Doubt.

Most survivors were in agreement that the fire started in the library. There were reports from them, too, that lightning had struck the ship.

The commodore of the Ward Line, J. E. Jones, in Havana, however, said it would have been impossible for lightning to have caused the fire.

The liner was fitted out with the newest automatic fire fighting equipment. None of the survivors, however, said the apparatus was in operation.

10 Taken Off by Cutter.

Acting Capt. E. F. Warms who was in command of the Morro Castle when it was swept by fire was taken off the liner tonight by the Coast Guard cutter Tampa, the towing ship. Nine others were taken off with Warms.

The Tampa's propeller was fouled when the tow line parted and the cutter suffered some slight damage. The Tampa proceeded toward New York under convoy of another cutter, the Sebago.

The master of the ship, Capt. Robert R. Willmott, died at 7:45 o'clock last night, before the fire, stricken on the bridge with acute indigestion. His body lay in the quarters aft the control room when fire broke out in the early morning hours. What became of it has not been determined.

Beached at Asbury Park.

The Morro Castle went aground close to the Convention Hall in Asbury Park. Fire still raged amidships and on the upper decks, and the blaze on the lower decks aft sent showers of sparks shoreward on driving sheets of rain.

Seventy-five firemen were ordered on duty at the Convention Hall and played searchlights on the building.

There was no fire on the forward decks of the Morro Castle, but through the portholes it could be seen that the entire inner structure was ablaze. All the paint was burned off the upper decks amidships. Two boats on the port side were still on their davits. One was badly charred and the forward end of the other was burned off. No one was aboard the vessel.

An investigation of the fire was started tonight by Dickerson N. Hoover, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, who was sent here by Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce to take charge personally.

An independent investigation was commenced by Martin J. Conboy, United States Attorney, who met the City of Savannah and listened to the stories of the captain of that rescue ship and of the survivors.

Ward Line officials refused to speculate on events aboard the liner in view of the numerous conflicting stories of the origin of the fire. The line carried the latest automatic fire equipment, but none of the ship's survivors could say it was in operation.

The Morro Castle was returning from an eight-day cruise to Havana. All but 60 of the passengers were tourists.

Leaving Havana Wednesday evening, all was gaiety aboard the Morro Castle until news of the captain's death spread last night. By midnight, all was quiet. Most of the passengers were asleep in their cabins.

At 3:23 a. m., in a fog and a heavy Nor'easter, the Morro Castle's wireless sent out this message:

"SOS! SOS! Morro Castle afire 20 miles south of Scotland lightship."

Scotland Light is the welcoming beacon for ships plying north in New York on the coast routes. Wireless stations notified Coast Guards.

A few seconds later the Morro Castle repeated the SOS call adding: "Fire just outside radio room."

No further message was received from the ship.

Accounts of what occurred on the blazing ship are conflicting. Some survivors said there was no disorder, others said the decks were filled with milling, screaming men, women and children.

Members of the crew in their quarters forward of the library—some of whom say the fire spread first to a fuel tank nearby—scrambled to the decks, smashed in windows of the cabins and hurried to the lifeboats.

Many Driven Back by Flames.

Passengers, clad in night clothes, some wearing bathrobes, opened their doors, seeking to gain the decks. Many were forced back by the flames that raged through hatchway and passageway. They used the windows.

To reach the upper deck and the lifeboats meant braving the flames and the dense smoke, made all the more suffocating by the drizzle and fog that held it low.

Some passengers paid no heed, members of the crew said, to their orders to break through and head for the upper deck. They stayed on the lower deck. The B deck was one of the most crowded.

Only eight boats put away from the ship. These were capable of carrying upward of 50 persons each, but some had only a handful aboard.

Many persons jumped or slid down ropes to the sea and started to swim for the shore eight miles away.

The fire was worst, apparently, on the port side. Here, only two boats were lowered from the davits. Six put off from the starboard side. All the boats which put off have been accounted for.

Most of those who made the New Jersey shore in the lifeboats were members of the crew. They said, repeatedly, that they called for passengers to run through the flames to the upper deck; that they were finally forced to lower the boats with what few passengers were aboard after the flames started to burn through the davit ropes.

Crew Criticised.

Some survivors picked up from the waters severely criticised the conduct of the crew.

Benjamin Hirsch, Philadelphia haberdasher, declared members of the crew "never turned a hand to help us."

"When the alarm was sounded," Hirsch said, "there was a banging of tin pans and whistles and bugles were blown. On the deck, men and women were running from one side of the boat to the other. My wife and I ran to the rail. It was hot as a furnace. I lost track of my wife in the confusion. I searched for her but to no avail. When it was too hot to stand on the deck, I jumped. I was picked up by a Monarch of Bermuda lifeboat. I don't know where my wife is."

There were many similar tales of tragedy. Mothers were separated from children; wives from husbands.

Rescue Boats Stand By.

Liners in the immediate vicinity raced toward the Morro Castle when the S O S was sent out.

Three of them stood by hours, searched the water for the scores of passengers who jumped, then steamed on to New York with those rescued. The boats were:

The Monarch of Bermuda, with 72 rescued. One of those picked up died. Others were sent to hospitals on arrival in New York.

The freighter Andrea F. Luckenbach, 22.

Throughout the day, fishing boats, pleasure craft and tugboats put out from the Jersey shore, wallowing through the heavy seas to join the rescue. Many were forced back, unable to stand the buffeting.

The fishing schooner Paramount rescued 70 persons.

Airplanes Guide Rescuers.

To guide the rescuers, airplanes mobilized by the New Jersey National Guard flew over the waters, dipping when a swimmer or a body was sighted.

In one of these planes was Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey. He left his summer home at Sea Girt to help mobilize the rescue forces.

As bodies floated to the shore or were picked up, a morgue was opened by the National Guard in Sea Girt. Bodies were carried in two and three at a time. Coffins were sent from New York and other towns.

Several persons swam through the battering swells to the shore.

A trainload of the rescued, administered aid by hastily-summoned physicians, was sent to hospitals in New York.

Thousands of persons crowded the shore line during the day.

Ward Line's Statement.

A statement, issued by the Ward Line through Henry E. Zabaud, executive vice-president, follows:

"Officials of the Ward Line were informed shortly after 4:15 a. m. this (Saturday) morning that the Morro Castle was afire about 20 miles south of Scotland Light.

"Later wireless announcements confirmed this information and added that passengers and crew were abandoning ship, the Furness-Bermuda liner Monarch of Bermuda, the Savannah liner City of Savannah and the Luckenbach liner Andrea S. Luckenbach being in the immediate vicinity.

"We have not since been in communication with W. F. Warms, first officer of the Morro Castle, who assumed command after Capt. R. R. Willmott died suddenly Friday night about 7:45 of acute indigestion.

"Our information regarding the fire has come from innumerable and confusing sources including the coast guard, Spring Lake police department and the masters of vessels in the neighborhood, who, arriving after the fire, were unable to furnish accurate and reliable information of anything except the scene on their arrival.

Accurate Information Lacking.

"1. What difficulty the passengers encountered in reaching the lifeboats after the fire was discovered is still a matter for later inquiry and investigation. We are unable to comment on this, obviously, until such authoritative investigation has been made.

"2. We also feel that to comment on the cause of the fire would be inadvisable until we have received complete information.

"3. Questions regarding the functioning of the automatic fire control apparatus must also of necessity be delayed until proper information is obtained. Every safety facility for warning and extinguishing was available, including control with watertight doors in the bulkheads and automatic sprinklers in the cargo holds.

"4. It is impossible to determine the actual damage to the Morro Castle until she has been towed into harbor and a proper survey has been made. It is difficult, if not impossible, at this time to hazard a guess.

"5. Capt. Warms and a skeleton crew are still with the ship and until such time as communications are established with him further comment would be only guess work on our part."

SHIP FIRE REPORTED ON PREVIOUS VOYAGE

Two Passengers Say Blaze in Hold Was "Common Knowledge."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Fire was smouldering in the hold of the ill-fated liner Morro Castle on the voyage preceding its last disastrous one, two passengers who missed the tragedy by a week said today.

Lawrence Reid, magazine editor, and Dr. Robert M. Colbert, both of New York, who returned from the Havana cruise last week, said it was common knowledge among the passengers aboard that somewhere in the depths of the liner cargo was aflame, permeating the ship with a smell of smoke.

They also charged that the liner was undermanned, that the crew was careless, and lifeboat drills so neglected that paint was encrusted on ropes and davits long unused. Reid said:

"The Morro Castle is really a ferryboat. It leaves New York every Saturday, arrives in Havana every Tuesday, leaves Havana every Wednesday and returns to New York the following Saturday, to depart on the schedule nine hours later. Naturally, if something is wrong there is little time for repairs in port.

"On the last trip to Havana I smelled smoke one night while at sea. The next morning I spoke of it with several other passengers, and they agreed. Some said there were reports a fire had been smouldering in the ship's hold for 14 hours."

Dr. Colbert said:

"We were impressed by the careless and indifferent attitude of the crew. The ship appeared to be undermanned. During the entire trip there and back we did not see a single lifeboat lowered."

He added that he saw the burned cargo when the ship reached port.

ple swimming around us. They had on nothing but their night-clothes. About two hours later I heard my friend say, 'I can't keep up very much longer.' I didn't see her any more.

"The sea was very rough, and it was not until 9 or 10 o'clock that a tugboat picked me up. There were times I started to give up and said, 'What's the use?' But then I reminded myself that while there is life, there is hope. So I said a prayer and kept on.

"I never thought I was much of a swimmer, but there was nothing else to be done, so I kept on swimming."

Sisters Cling to Plank.

Two sisters, Ruth and Agnes Printz of Pottstown, Pa., who became separated after supporting themselves on a plank in the water, were reunited at the hospital hours later. They jumped from the top deck of the blazing ship and struck out through the waves. They found a large beam floating near the ship and got hold of it.

For more than an hour they were tossed about. Then Agnes lost her grip and disappeared. Ruth was picked up by a fishing boat. She had been at the hospital only a short time when Agnes, rescued by another group of fishermen, arrived for treatment.

In another room William Kitchen of Cleveland, an engineer on the liner, lay swathed in bandages covering second degree burns.

"I was in my cabin in the engineer's house aft of the bridge when I was awakened by the sound of the alarm," he said. "My cabin was filled with smoke and I could hear the crackle of flames outside. I was dazed and almost suffocated, but I fought my way down to my boat on A deck.

"Most of the flames at that time were on B deck, but they were licking up about us. I scarcely remember how we got the boat into the sea, but I do remember that we were able to launch it.

"I do not believe the fire was caused by lightning as some say."

Phillip Gefert of Jersey City, N. J., said he was awakened by the smell of smoke and, stepping out of his cabin, saw flames at the end of the corridor.

"I immediately told my wife, Lillian, to put on a life preserver and got one for myself," Gefert said. "We then awakened Regina and Marguerite Gilligan (sisters from Philadelphia) in the cabin adjoining ours. I heard no alarm and no one apparently came through the corridor to awaken the passengers."

Marguerite Gilligan said there was no disorder on deck.

"Everybody realized what was happening," she said, "but everyone was quiet. The officers were wonderful and helped us keep our heads. The crew fought the flames to the last minute."

Doctors and nurses from all sections of New Jersey hastened to the Fitkin Hospital when rescuers began bringing in survivors. More than 70 nurses and 40 physicians were assisting in the treatment of the victims.

Dr. James Ackerman, hospital superintendent, set up emergency headquarters in the building to serve sandwiches and coffee to survivors who were able to eat.

"We have 30 cases here," he said, "18 women and 12 men. None of them is seriously injured except one woman whom we have been unable to identify."

A turbulent surf, sweeping before a northeaster, continued to bring in more survivors this afternoon.

Those rescued told of heroism and terror as passengers and crew sought to escape the flames.

The ship's purser, Robert G. Tolman, said 10 women wearing life belts cowered on E deck aft, moved away from the flames, but were afraid to leap into the sea.

"Several of the crew were with me," he said, "and as the flames spread nearer, I ordered the men to throw the women overboard."

Mrs. Renee Mendez Sapot, daughter of a high Cuban Government official, gave credit for saving her life to a ship's waiter, Carl Pryor of Newark, O.

"I was trapped in my cabin," she said, "and I did not think I could escape. Pryor saw me, broke the glass in my cabin port hole and pulled me through."

The New Jersey shore colonies of residents and vacationists were mobilized in rescue squadrons. John Wagner and Richard Myer of Paterson, N. J., reported they had pulled 11 survivors from the surf.

Mess Boy Drifts Six Hours.

One rescued was a mess boy, Antonio Maca, who had been drifting in his life belt for six hours. He was unconscious when the surf tossed him on the beach near Seagate.

A lifeboat that landed at Spring Lake carried 7-year-old Benny Ruela, who had become separated from his mother and brother in the confusion.

Robert J. Smith, cruise director, said that it was only by a miracle that he escaped, as he was nearly surrounded by flames.

First Assistant Engineer Anthony Bujia was one of the first to see the fire which, he said, was discovered by Night Watchman Joseph O'Connor.

"The passengers did not seem to realize what the fire alarm meant," Bujia said. "The alarm continued to sound, and orders were given for the crew to start smashing in cabin windows to arouse the passengers."

MANY IN WATER CLING TO BODIES

By the Associated Press.

BRIELLE, N. J., Sept. 8.—Members of the crew of the fishing boat Paramount told how they rescued 67 persons.

"It was the most horrible sight I ever saw," said John Bogan, owner of the little craft. "The water seemed to be full of dead people. There were so many bodies floating around we had to plow right through them."

The skipper of another rescue craft, the Diana, which brought in 12 bodies, said he saw three sharks in the area where survivors were struggling.

Jeff Bogan, 21-year-old captain of the Paramount, said he saw the blaze from the Morro Castle as his craft started out on its daily fishing trip. He turned back to Brielle, notified the coast guard and then made for the burning liner.

He said there were several instances of groups of persons in the water clinging to a body of a relative, and that the living had to be torn from the dead before they could be pulled into the boat.

"People screamed terribly," he said. "We told them: 'We'll get you; stop screaming.'"

All the while the Paramount was on its mission of mercy it kept blowing its horn to call out other boats, because the crew feared the craft was not large enough to hold all the survivors.

"We didn't stop until we heard no more screaming," said John Bogan Jr., son of the owner of the boat. "By that time we had 67 on board, many more than the boat could hold normally. The people we picked up were so exhausted they just lay in heaps on the deck like dead people."

During the rescue efforts, the father of the Bogan boys was dragged overboard and knocked unconscious when his head hit the rail. It was all the boys could do to rescue their father.

The boat was aided in its rescue work by a Navy flyer, Commander Thomas Mulroy, in a National Guard plane. Flying over the water he signaled the boat by dipping over groups of survivors he saw.

The Paramount's crew said that they came across a mother and her daughter clinging to the body of a man. As they pulled the woman and her daughter to safety the woman screamed to them to save the body, but when they pointed to the living still to be rescued she became quiet.

Another fishing boat, the Doris, picked up a woman and seven men, but all of them died on the way to Brielle. The woman clung to a baby as she was hauled aboard the Doris, but when she saw it was dead she flung it into the ocean. She died a few minutes later.

SAYS CREW "NEVER TURNED A HAND"

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Sept. 8.—A passenger who leaped from the Morro Castle and was rescued after swimming half an hour in the before-dawn dark charged that members of the crew "never turned a hand to help us."

Benjamin Hirsch, 38-year-old Philadelphia haberdasher, made this assertion several hours after he was brought ashore after being picked up by a lifeboat from the steamer Monarch of Bermuda.

With him on the liner was his bride. They were returning from their honeymoon trip. In the confusion, he lost track of Mrs. Hirsch and does not know if she was saved.

The ship, Hirsch said, describing his escape from the flames, "was hot as a furnace."

"When the alarm was sounded," he continued, "there was a banging on tin pans and whistles and bugles were blown." He and his wife were in their cabin. She aroused him. They snatched their lifebelts and made their way toward the deck.

"Mrs. Hirsch had her lifebelt on wrong," he said. "I fixed it and then put on my own. We ran out into the hall. I pushed Mrs. Hirsch ahead of me toward the stairs.

"On the deck men and women were running from one side of the boat to the other. A member of the crew stopped me as I pushed Mrs. Hirsch over toward a lifeboat.

"'Give me that belt, I'm going to give it to a woman,' the seaman said. I didn't believe him, but he took my belt and ran.

"Meanwhile I had lost track of my wife somehow. Boats were being launched, and I ran frantically about looking for her. When the flames got so hot I couldn't stand it any longer I jumped.

"I could see boats pulling away from the Morro Castle, but it was too dark to see who was in them. I swam around until I was picked up."

At a hospital in Point Pleasant, Mrs. Abraham Cohen of Hartford, Conn., told how she and her husband swam for six hours to reach land after jumping overboard.

"I heard screaming outside our cabin," she said. "At first I thought I was dreaming. I rushed to the door, opened it. Flames filled the hatchway. My husband awakened. We put on our bathrobes.

"We went out through the flames and finally made our way to the B deck. The decks were filled with screaming people. Everyone seemed excited.

"The smoke hung low. The fumes almost suffocated us. People were milling and jammed close together. There didn't seem to be anyone who could keep the people quiet.

"My husband and I made our way to the crowded railing and decided the best thing to do was to jump. We did. I guess we were plenty scared all right, but there wasn't time to think about it.

"Once in the water, our first thought was to get away from the boat. There were others struggling in the water around us. But after we got started and swam awhile we didn't see any more. We saw no life boats about us.

"We saw the lights on the shore. We struck out for the shore. The water was warm. The waves seemed to help us along toward the shore. Best of all, we kept side by side all the way.

"We'd help each other keep afloat now and then, one of us taking it easy for awhile. I guess we swam for six hours or so. Then we reached the beach. People on shore rushed into the surf to drag us out."

Side by side, the Cohens rested in the hospital. They thought they would be able to return home tonight.

There was another couple on board who, like the Cohens, stuck together and escaped. They are Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bodner of Elizabeth, N. J. Without waiting for life boats, they grabbed ropes that were hanging from the top decks, slid part of the way to the water and jumped.

"We swam around and floated for five hours," Bodner said, "and were finally picked up by a lifeboat."

Summer estates of the wealthy were thrown open to survivors. Tonight, rain beat down; the seas still surged high. Fishing boats plied back and forth—still looking for survivors and bodies. All along the shoreline were watchers.

One group, on the beach near Sea Girt, saw a raft tossed by the waves. A man was on it. The waves would wash it a bit nearer; many persons would rush into the water to aid; then a wave would carry it back out. The man was in a weakened condition; he could hardly hang on. A huge wave upset the raft. The man wasn't seen again.

One man reached land, dragging with him the body of a woman.

How five passengers clung for hours to a charred piece of wood from the liner was told by Miss Sidney Folkman of New York, one of those saved by the fishing boat Paramount.

"I was awakened about 5 o'clock by the smell of smoke," she said. "There wasn't much time to get into clothes. The passengers were huddled on the rear of B deck waiting for the fire to diminish but soon the flames got higher and we began to realize how serious it was.

"There was no chance to get a life boat, so I jumped. That took a lot of nerve, but I would have been burned to death if I had stayed on the boat much longer. I had on a life preserver and floated around awhile until a big piece of burned wood floated by.

"At first there were three of us and later two more grabbed for it. One was an old woman who said she couldn't hold on much longer. Finally she said, 'I can't make it.' Then she slipped off into the water.

"We seemed to be in the water all morning until the fishing boat came along and picked us up. I never felt better in my life as I was pulled into the boat."

Charles Hoffman of New York lost his wife and two daughters. With a son they had been returning from a vacation trip.

"I don't know much what happened," Hoffman said, as he lay on a cot, his eyes, injured by heat of the flames, covered with gauze.

"My son and I, who occupied one room, were awakened by smoke. He awakened the rest of the family and we went on deck. Soon we saw the flames grow bigger and we all jumped overboard together.

"I was picked up by one boat and my son by another, but where are my wife and daughters?"

ALDERMEN LIKELY TO VOTE ON SALES TAX WEDNESDAY

POLL SHOWS 13 FOR, 10 AGAINST MEASURE

Five Refuse to Commit Themselves and One Is Out of City—15 Votes Needed for Passage.

The Board of Aldermen, meeting tomorrow, will start consideration of the proposed 2 per cent tax on retail sales and services. The bill probably will be referred to committee Tuesday and put to a vote of the entire board Wednesday.

Indications are that the vote will be close. A poll taken by the Post-Dispatch yesterday showed 13 aldermen for the tax, 10 opposed, five non-committal and one (Alderman Genteman, First Ward) out of the city. A majority of the 29 members, or 15 votes, is required to pass the bill.

All members have received numerous telephone calls and letters on the measure, most of them protesting against it. The large downtown retail stores have organized a Citizens' Committee to fight the bill, and as a demonstration against the proposed tax most of the stores halted business for five minutes yesterday afternoon while circulars and leaflets containing arguments against the bill were distributed to customers.

Purpose of Measure.

The sales tax bill emanated from a special bipartisan aldermanic revenue committee and is intended to raise revenue for four purposes: Helping to meet the anticipated deficit of $2,452,900 in the city sinking fund for retirement of present bond obligations; the raising of a sum sufficient to pay interest and sinking fund charges on the $16,000,000 public improvement bond issue passed May 15; wiping out the anticipated deficit of $2,000,000 in municipal revenue, and for relief of the needy and unemployed.

The tax would remain in effect three years and the rate would be reduced to 1 per cent after the first year.

Leaders of the Democratic majority are hopeful the measure will pass and thus solve the most perplexing problem the city administration has had to deal with since it came into office in April. 1933. The special revenu committee also discussed a municipal income tax, but finally decided to recommend the sales tax. There has been little support of an income tax among the Aldermen, although three members of the revenue committee, Aldermen Eilers, Kralemann and Waldman, said they preferred it to a sales tax.

Aldermanic Vice-President Collins thinks 11 of the 16 Democrats will vote for the sales tax bill, while President Neun, a Republican, thinks a majority of the 13 Republicans will vote for it.

10 Democrats for Levy.

The poll taken by the Post-Dispatch showed 10 Democrats and three Republicans in favor of the tax. It is understood, however, that Alderman Genteman, who was out of the city and could not be reached, may favcr it, thus making the eleventh Democrat vote. Of the other five Democrats, two—Lietchen and Golden—are opposed to the bill, and three—Brown, Israel and Pahl—are undecided.

Among the Republicans, Neun, Neumann and Schwartz favor the bill. Democrats who say they will vote for it are Slay, Hennerich, Gummels, O'Toole, Hastey, Hoeflinger, Collins, Scott, Petersen and Terry.

Republicans who have not decided how they will vote on the measure are Lange and Wetzel. Lange told a Post-Dispatch reporter that, if the sales tax was passed, he believed neighboring communities should pass a similar tax so that St. Louis merchants would not be at a disadvantage.

"But that doesn't mean I am going to vote for the sales tax," he added.

The Republicans and Democrats who favor the bill agree that the sales tax seems to be the only solution to the revenue-raising problem. Most of them told reporters that while they were not in favor of a sales tax, they realized that there was a financial emergency to be met, and the raising of the revenue by the sales tax would enable the new bond issue to be sold and work provided for unemployed men on a number of public improvements. Others are supporting the bill because of the necessity of providing funds for public relief in view of the fact that the proceeds of the $4,600,000 relief bond issue, voted in November, 1932, will soon be exhausted.

Several for Lower Rate.

Several of the Aldermen who oppose the measure think the rate is too high. Alderman Otto, Fourth Ward, Republican, thinks a tax of half of one per cent should be sufficient for the city's needs. Alderman Lietchen, Democrat, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, opposes the bill because he believes a sales tax will be too heavy a burden on poor people and small wage-earners. As has been told, several Republican Aldermen plan to vote against the sales tax because they think an income tax would be a fairer way to obtain the needed revenue.

While the bill has not been officially indorsed by the city administration, Mayor Dickmann has said that he considers a sales tax or an income tax the only possible solution to the city's revenue problem. Both the Mayor and City Counselor Hay, who drafted the sales tax bill, emphasized that the special revenue committee and not the administration recommended passage of the bill.

Business Stops in Stores for Five Minutes as Tax Protest.

Bugle blasts, in department and chain stores at 2 p. m. yesterday, notified clerks and customers of a 5-minute suspension of business, in protest against the sales tax measure.

Clerks laid down the goods they were showing to prospective buyers and handed the customers the 4-page leaflet, "What a 2 Per Cent City Sales Tax Will Cost YOU." The leaflet contained arguments against the tax measure, to the effect that it would "constitute a salary cut" for wage-earners, and would take $24 a year from the person with an annual income of $1500. The leaflet also showed the name, address and telephone number of each member of the Board of Aldermen, and urged that individual protests be made to them.

Most customers took the interruption in sales service goodnaturedly, and some read the leaflets on the spot, while others thrust them in pockets or shopping bags and drummed on the counter until the second bugle blast, at 2:05, gave notice for the resumption of store activity.

of the members to use the care occasionally when they desire to visit schools or attend board meetings. They say they do not use he machines for private affairs.

The members for a number of years have held a private dinner at a downtown hotel on the night of the monthly formal board meeting, in order to discuss affairs intimately. The meals and the waiters' tips, amounting to about $40 a month, are paid for by the secretary-treasurer from his contingent fund. Members declare there are no other perquisites of office, unless occasional pencils picked up at committee meetings are counted, "but there is a lot of grief."

MORRO CASTLE RATED WITH BEST IN CLASS

Turbo-Electric Liner's First Voyage in 1930; Rode Out Hurricane Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Morro Castle is a long low liner with rakish lines and two funnels bending back before the wind. When is set out on its maiden voyage from New York to Havana, Aug. 23, 1930, it already had won the rating of one of the fastest turbo-electric liners afloat, by maintaining an average speed of 21 knots in trials. It failed to set a record for the run on its first voyage, making the trip in 59 hours, while the Cunarder Mauretania had made it in less than 50 hours. It made the trip back in 58 hours—a new mark for ships in regular service on the run.

It is 508 feet long and has 11,520 tonnage. It has accommodations for about 500 passengers.

The Morro Castle went through 48 hours of turbulence last September when it ran into a hurricane off Cape Hatteras. For two days the ship was buffeted by wind and waves while its radio was unable to communicate with the rest of the world. Finally the vessel rode through to safety.

In gratitude for the bravery and seamanship displayed by Capt. Willmott passengers on that trip awarded him a watch and chain last December.

A set of resolutions memorializing the bravery of the Captain and the crew, framed and surmounted by a photograph of the ship, was also presented to the Captain.

The burning of the Morro Castle is the second major shipping disaster off the Eastern coast of the United States in the past 80 years. The Vestris foundered in a storm off the Virginia Capes on Nov. 12, 1928, with the loss of 110 lives.

JURY GETS CASE OF MAN CHARGED WITH KILLING GIRL

State Asks for Death Penalty in Case of Birmingham College Student.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 8.—eight and one-half hours of deliberation on the case of Harold Taylor, 28 years old, charged with slashing the throat of Faye New, 19, college student, a few hours after he met her on the night of Aug. 20. The state asked for the death penalty.

Judge J. Russell McElroy told the jurymen that if they believed Taylor guilty a verdict of second degree murder carrying imprisonment of from 10 years to life, or first degree murder punishable by life imprisonment or death, could be returned.

When the girl was missing on Aug. 21 Mrs. Lon New, the girl's mother, went to Taylor for information about her. He told her the girl had jumped from his car on a lonely road about midnight, indignant at his advances. The girl's body was found in a ditch beside a cotton field. An autopsy disclosed that she had not been attacked, but had died from knife wounds in the throat.

PROGRESSIVES HALT OPENING OF FREEBURG MINE

Mass Picketing Causes Operators, Who Employed U. M. W. A. Members, to Arrange 30-Day Truce

Mass picketing by Progressive miners yesterday defeated an attempt of the United Electric Coal Co. to reopen its Red Ray mine near Freeburg, Ill., with a crew of United Mine Workers of America.

When it appeared that the Progressives were prepared to maintain day and night picket lines, making it impracticable to operate the strip mine, a truce was arranged.

The company agreed not to attempt to operate for 30 days; the Progressives to permit a crew of about 35 men, several executives, and seven watchmen to return unmolested to their homes.

The men in the mine, who had been there since Friday morning, many of them sleeping in their automobiles, clambered into their cars and drove off between pickets, who silently eyed them, in contrast to the "boos" and epithets hurled at them when the picket line assembled early in the morning. About 1000 men were massed about the mine property, a mile east of Route 13, while perhaps 2500 others were stationed along roads leading to the mine.

Regarded as Test Case.

Progressives regarded the attempt to open the mine as a test case since every mine operating in St. Clair County employes members of their union. The crews of the 36 mines operating in the county declared a holiday yesterday in order to picket.

The company, which has not attempted to operate the mine since April 1, 1933, when it refused to comply with the Progressive request for a contract, operates four other mines in the State with U. M. W. A. labor. It based its attempt to open the Red Ray Mine on a decision of Divisional Coal Labor Board No. 2 that it could reopen with a crew of United Mine Workers.

Taking advantage of the absence of Progressive pickets, some of whom had been present consistently since Aug. 11 last, when a mass picket line appeared in response to a report the mine was to attempt to reopen, the crew arrived at the mine at dawn Friday, operated for a few hours.

Men Stayed in Mine.

When quitting whistle blew, the men elected to stay in the mine rather than leave in the face of assembling pickets. A few pickets lurked all night near a barbed-wire fence erected around the mine.

Faced by the big picket line yesterday morning, no attempt was made to run cars from the mine to the tipple, through the pickets. Finally the guards, obtained from an East St. Louis detective agency, began to desert, explaining they "didn't realize what they were up against." Half of them were allowed to pass through the lines, as were two miners, before the truce was arranged.

The telephone in the mine office was busy throughout the day as wives and relatives of the besieged men called up to inquire as to their safety. The men left the mine about 2:30 p. m.

Eight highway police were stationed on Route 13 and as many deputy sheriffs mingled with the pickets.

NORMAN THOMAS MEETS LEADER OF ONION STRIKE

He Tells Okey Odell and Others "Believers in Liberty Have Got to Rally."

By the Associated Press.

KENTON, O., Sept. 8.—Norman Thomas, the Socialist, met Okey Odell, Scioto marshland onion strike leader, today and said: "You have done more with your five broken ribs than most men can with all of them."

Thomas came here to address a small group of onion field strikers on the steps of the Hardin County Courthouse. Odell, still nursing injuries received Aug. 25 when he was abducted and beaten by a crowd of anti-strike workers, hobbled up to the steps on crutches. Thomas said he was interested in the marsh strike because he was reared in Marion County, but the biggest reason for his interest was, he said, that "all good Americans who believe in liberty and justice have got to rally around."

WHITES DRIVE NEGROES FROM MARYLAND TOWN

Race Riot at Princess Anne Follows Clash on Street Between Two Men—Call for State Police.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Sept. 8.—A race riot between 200 white men and more than 400 Negroes was in progress on the streets of this small town on the eastern shore of Maryland at 11:30 o'clock tonight. All Negroes were being driven from the town.

The trouble started when a Negro cursed a white man on the street. The white man beat the Negro and drove him from the streets.

A few minutes later the white man started gathering his friends and, rapidly increasing as it marched down the streets, the crowd started for the Negro section.

Forcing their way into a Negro restaurant, the men found the already beaten Negro, dragged him out, and began beating him again. In a few minutes, other Negroes were attacked.

The Negroes scattered. A short while later the white men made a rush into Negro town and began scattering men, women and children. Negroes fled in all directions—afoot and in automobiles — the whites after them with fists, clubs, bricks and knives. Some of the Negroes tried to fight back.

The town has three policemen, headed by Chief Marion Austin. It was learned that word had been sent to Salisbury, 15 miles to the north, for State Police.

How many were injured and whether any were killed could not be learned.

CADDIES' STRIKE QUICKLY SETTLED AT TWO CLUBS

Boys Quit in Morning, Back on Job in Afternoon; Pay Demands Partly Met.

Caddies at Algonquin Golf Club and Westborough Country Club, both in Webster Groves, went on strike for higher pay yesterday morning, but the club managements settled the differences in time for the caddies to go to work for Saturday afternoon golfers.

The caddies had demanded $1 for each round of 18 holes instead of the 75 cents paid at Westborough and the 25-cent-an-hour rate at Algonquin. At Algonquin an increase of 5 cents an hour was granted and at Westborough a temporary arrangement was made under which Class A caddies are to receive $1 a round and Class B caddies 75 cents. The fees are paid by members.

About 150 caddies have been reporting for work at Algonquin, according to Don Harrison, one of the club's golf professionals. Caddies at Westborough are to discuss a permanent wage scale with the management this week.

Mrs. Martha Gorman, 45, Said by Husband to Have Been in Poor Health.

Mrs. Martha Gorman, 45 years old, ended her life with gas yesterday in the kitchen of her home, 1907 Newhouse avenue. The body was found at 2:30 p. m. by her husband, J. P. Gorman, a machinist.

Mrs. Gorman was seated by the stove, her head resting on top of it and three burners were turned on. An oil cloth was draped over her head.

Gorman, who works at night, said he last saw his wife before he retired at 8:30 yesterday morning. He said she had been despondent because of ill health.

DR. WYNEKOOP TAKES APPEAL

Asks Illinois Supreme Court to Reverse Murder Conviction.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 8.—Giving 25 reasons for reversal, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, aged Chicago physician, today appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court from her conviction of the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Wynekoop. Dr. Wynekoop is serving a sentence of 25 years' imprisonment in the women's penitentiary at Dwight, Ill.

One of the reasons cited in her appeal is the refusal of the court to permit the jury to know of her physical condition in the court room. She made her court appearances in a wheel chair, but the jury was never permitted to see the chair.

Ex-St. Louisan Helps Save Survivors of Fire at Sea

Commander Mulroy, U. S. N., Tells of Using Plane to Locate Victims in Water and Signaling Boats to Pick Them Up.

COMMANDER T. B. MULROY

Commander Thomas B. Mulroy, U. S. N., formerly of St. Louis, had a prominent part in the rescue work off the northern New Jersey coast, by which survivors of the burned Morro Castle were taken ashore yesterday.

As an ensign, Mulroy was with the Byrd expeditions to the Arctic regions and later to the Antarctic. He was here with Commander, now Rear Admiral Byrd in 1928, when th Antarctic expedition of that year was in preparation. His father, then living, was T. B. Mulroy of 3705 Evans avenue. The elder Mulroy has since died. An aunt, Mrs. Mary McNulty, lives at 5106A Easton avenue.

He is now naval aide to Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, and in that capacity has been with the Governor this summer at Sea Girt, N. J., at the camp of the New Jersey National Guard.

Went in Plane.

Talking by long-distance telephone to the Post-Dispatch last night, Commander Mulroy told of his day's experiences.

"I had just got back to Sea Girt from Atlantic City," he said, "when word came that the Morro Castle was afire a few miles out. Capt. John Carr, 44th Division Air Corps, took off with me in a plane, he as pilot, I as observer.

"We located the burning boat, and made observations which convinced us that no one on board was alive.

"Flying about 30 feet above the water, we saw many survivors, I believe 100 or more in the water. The sea was very rough, but we waved to the people in the water and tried to make them understand that we would bring help.

Signals Fishing Boats.

"We saw a fishing boat, which proved to be the Paramount, and signaled to them, directing them to the place where the people were. They went to the place, and got all the people who were alive there, so far as I know. They did not take bodies at first, but boats I saw later took many bodies, and carried them to the camp at Sea Girt, where we now have the rescue headquarters and morgue.

"We notfied the Coast Guard at Sea Girt, at 9:20 a. m., to send all boats to the rescue. Then we went to Spring Lake, and I notified the Coast Guard personally.

"Gov. Moore went out with one of the planes from Sea Girt, and personally directed the rescue of two men, who were taken from the water by a small boat, and were brought to this camp.

Smoke Bombs as Guides.

"When we took to the air again and went back, we took smoke bombs with us, and used them to show the small boats the location of survivors whom we saw in the water. Soon there were fishing boats and Coast Guard boats out in several directions, and two other National Guard planes were taking part in the search.

"When we saw no more living persons, we began signaling the location of bodies. We flew over about a five-mile area, locating 12 bodies. I understand 35 or more bodies were brought in.

"The weather was bad for flying, and we had to go close to the water to signal the boats. They were swimming about, supported by life belts. Capt. Carr and I didn't come into personal contact with the survivors until we came back to camp."

MRS. MOONEY BURIED NEAR SON'S PRISON

Services at San Francisco After San Quentin Refuses to Admit Cortege.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—A "working man's" funeral ceremony was held today for Mrs. Mary Mooney after the cortege had been refused admittance to San Quentin prison where her son, Thomas J. Mooney, is under life sentence.

The small procession, consisting only of members of the family, a few friends and the pallbearers, crossed the bay by ferry to pass before the gates of San Quentin. Denied entrance, they returned to San Francisco.

At the Ferry Building they were joined by several hundred workers and went up Market street to the civic auditorium for the services. The procession took 15 minutes to pass.

Several funeral orations were made over the body of the 86-year-old mother of the man convicted of San Francisco's 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in which 10 persons lost their lives and 40 were injured.

Speakers included Harry Bridges, leader in the recent longshoremen's strike; Leo Gallagher, Mooney's attorney in his long fight for pardon, and Robert Whitaker, Los Gatos lecturer.

While the cortege was at San Quentin some of the prisoners in the yard could see the automobiles through the gates, but the warden's office said Mooney was in the kitchen, and did not see any part of the procession.

After the services in the auditorium here, Mrs. Mooney's body was escorted again across the bay to San Rafael for burial in Tamalpais Cemetery, seven miles from San Quentin prison.

John Mooney, the woman's other son, who said the last words at her grave, explained Tom Mooney had requested that he be buried near the prison so "she could be close to him in death, as she had been to him in life."

Mrs. Mooney died last Sunday at her San Francisco home.

TEXTILE STRIKERS' LEADER SUBMITS HIS PEACE TERMS

Proposes Arbitration by President's Board With Both Sides Agreeing to Accept Decision.

GORMAN SAYS CODE AIMS HAVE FAILED

Union Recognition, 30-Hour Week Without Pay Cut and End of Stretch-out Demanded.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the Textile National Strike Committee, proposed tonight in a radio address that the presidential mediation board become a board of arbitration with both sides agreeing to abide by its decisions.

He said that all mills should be closed meantime. Previously he had said he would not consent to arbitration unless all mills were closed in order that the ensuing negotiations be conducted "in an atmosphere of peace."

"This is our proposal," Gorman continued. "If the employers accept it at once and if the President's board of mediation approves it, all conflict can be brought to a stop.

"But I say this, and I say it with all the emphasis I can command: We have struck and we shall remain on strike until we have achieved relief from the injustices that caused the strike. We have shown the way. It is a way that has been open always. The only thing that has stood in the way has been the arrogance of the employers."

The Strikers' Demands.

Gorman outlined the demands of the strikers as follows:

"First: We demand recognition of the union, the United Textile Workers of America, and the right to collective bargaining. This right is guaranteed by law, but the employers scorned the law and discharged our members by the thousand for joining the union.

"Second: We demand a reduction of the work-week to 30 hours. The industry itself has shown that the 30-hour week is sufficient. The industry's own curtailment plan proved the justice of our demand.

"Third: We demand that there be no reduction in the weekly wage, so that our pay shall be the same for 30 hours that it has been for 40 hours. When we know that the average wage today is less than $10 per week, that demand seems moderate indeed. Under this heading there must be some protection for wages in the higher brackets.

"Fourth: We demand that the stretchout be abolished. The stretchout is the work-load. The work-load has been so increased that in many mills our members have been doing four times the normal amount of work. They fall from exhaustion.

Most Aggravated of All.

"This issue is the most aggravated of all and it must be remedied without delay and without equivocation. We have a plan designed to meet this problem and lift the load from the backs of the workers.

"When the strike was called our workers were producing more per day per worker than ever in history. Their wage had sunk to the bottom and employment was at the lowest point since the code went into effect.

"The code, intended to raise wages and increase employment has failed in both. We are for the code, but the aims intended by the administration have been nullified by management. That is why we struck against management. We did not strike against the code or against the Government. We are Americans and we think we know what constitutes Americanism.

"Americanism does not mean shooting workers in the back and that is what has been done by the hirelings of the employers."

"Misled Legion Members."

Gorman went on to denounce the hiring of guards by the mill owners, adding that "in some places misled members of the American Legion are reported to be working with these private armies of so-called guards."

He disclosed a telegram to Edward A. Hayes, National Commander of the Legion, asking that he issue orders against such activities. Meanwhile, strike headquarters made public a reply from Hayes giving "assurance" there would be no action "by the Legion inimical to labor."

Of the personnel of the mediation board and his contacts with it thus far, Gorman said: "It is composed of high-minded men. We have given the board information in answer to questions. We have not negotiated. We have had conversations. We have always been ready to talk to any sincere body of men and that will always be our position. Discussion is one thing, negotiation is another.

"Hold Your Lines."

"The mills are not going to open on Monday. Reaction is not going to be allowed to thrust the millions of workers in the textile industry back into slavery.

"To the men and women on strike, this is the word: Hold your lines. Maintain discipline, provoke no disorder, but do not desert your cause. No nation and no cause ever pays tribute to those who desert. You have been magnificent. Stay that way.

"I charge that certain states have leased or given away their police power into the hands of corporations. Some have sent state troops into the field. Though the heavens fall, stand your ground.

"You have the lawful right to strike and you have the right to picket. Do not give up any lawful right.

"We have made a solemn proposal. We have made it in good faith. But meanwhile we shall not now or at any other time abandon one single right that is ours under the law and the Constitution."

10,000 AT FUNERAL SERVICE FOR STRIKERS

Six Clergymen and Labor Group Speakers at Honea Path (S. C.) Rites.

By the Associated Press.

HONEA PATH, S. C., Sept. 8.—Ten thousand men and women from widespread sections of the Southern textile belt attended the joint funeral services here today for the six strikers slain Wednesday in a gun battle before the Chiquola Mill here.

A sunlit field was the scene of open-air services for Ira Davis, Lee Cannon, Maxie Peterson, R. T. Yarborough, E. M. Knight and Claude Cannon, the strikers killed when pickets gathered at the mill in an attempt to close it.

While the service was being held, national guardsmen on the other side of the valley patrolled the mill property. A rough pine platform at the end of the field served as a pulpit for the six clergymen, including the Rev. James Myers of New York, of the Federated Churches of Christ in America, who took part in the service.

Six hearses brought the flower-banked coffins to the platform as the service began. "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" was sung by a chorus from local churches.

Mr. Myers, erect and gray-haired, came to the front and began:

"In the presence of these honored dead, it is right and proper that we should remind ourselves of the cause for which they died," the clergyman said. "They died for the rights of the hard-working man, who is close to God." The movement for improved industrial conditions, Mr. Myers said, "dates back to Jesus' conception that we are all children of God and entitled to better things than we have had so far. Had these principles of democracy been employed, these men need not have died."

The Rev. E. W. Lollis of Honea Path, and L. E. Brookshire of Greenville, president of the South Carolina Federation of Labor, spoke briefly. John Peel, director of the strike in the South, delivered a message of sympathy from the National Strike Committee headed by Francis J. Gorman, who was unable to attend the services. The message decried "the cruel and senseless death of the six strikers at Honea Path," and said "the killings at Honea Path will not have been utterly in vain if from these sacrifices we gain a new determination to carry on this greatest of all American strike struggles."

Other speakers included George Googe of Atlanta, Southern director of the A. F. of L., representing William Green, national president; R. R. Lawrence, president of the North Carolina Federation of Labor; Paul Christopher, president of the North Carolina Federation of Textile Workers, and J. A. Frier of Columbia, president of the South Carolina Federation of Textile Workers.

85,000 HOSIERY WORKERS JOIN IN TEXTILE STRIKE

dent, and Marion Smith, Atlanta, Ga., attorney.

Situation in South.

For the second successive day, the strike front was comparatively quiet. Most mills are closed on Saturdays in both North and South as a regular thing, a circumstance which served to make conditions even quieter than they were yesterday. Ten persons have been killed and many wounded or injured in outbreaks at the plants at which strikes have been called.

Nearly 100 mills have reopened in the Carolinas since "flying squadrons" forced their closing Wednesday and Thursday. These are to be made the objects of renewed sorties in an effort to close them again. Nearly all the mills reopened are in North Carolina.

A total of 222 North Carolina mills, employing 67,000, remained closed and 105 mills were operating in the main strike district, with a total of 4500 employes.

In South Carolina 90 mills were closed and 62 operating. About 43,000 textile employes were idle and 21,000 working. The survey covered only cotton textile, silk weaving or throwing and rayon manufacturing plants. One plant, the Minette Mill, employing 100 workers, signed a closed shop contract at the demand of the union.

Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood of South Carolina issued a proclamation against unlawful meetings, a preliminary move required by statute to declaring a state of insurrection. He gave no indication whether he would take further action.

151,000 Out in New England.

Additional walkouts increased the strike total to 151,000 in New England. The largest accession to the ranks of the strikers was at Woonsocket, R. I., where 4000 independent textile operatives voted to join the strike.

The Saylesville Finishing Co. at Saylesville, R. I., one of the largest in the territory, operated today contrary to custom and had no trouble.

Union leaders announced that 1000 pickets would be on hand Monday and the company replied that a deadline would be established about the property and maintained by guards. Deputies and strikers clashed twice there yesterday.

At Fall River, Mass., Mariano S. Bishop invoked a law enacted at the last session of the Massachusetts Legislature forbidding the employment in labor disputes of guards not licensed two months before the beginning of the dispute. Bishop sought to apply this statute to the Mount Hope Finishing Co. at Dighton, near Fall River, where barricades have been erected and pickets successfully barred from the plant. It has 1000 employes.

Mass meetings were held in many places throughout New England, especially in Fall River, where an effort was in progress to organize 4500 workers in tire fabric plants which are out on sympathy strikes.

Union officials claimed increasing strength at Holyoke, Mass., asserting silk and rayon workers were joining the organization in large numbers. They predicted 4000 operatives would be union members there by the middle of next week.

The mills at Holyoke and also those in New Bedford, Mass., Manchester and Nashua, N. H., Burlington, Vt., and much of the great Blackstone Valley district in Rhode Island were closed.

Shot to Death on Squirrel Hunt.

Singer Files Reply to Vallee.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Frances Singer "did meet Rudy Vallee personally and he does know me," she alleged in an affidavit filed in Supreme Court today by way of reply to the orchestra leader's statement that her $250,000 breach of promise suit is "crank litigation." The 30-year-old typist asked for vacation of an order obtained by Vallee requiring her to post a $250 bond to cover costs of her suit on the ground that she is a resident of Denver. Miss Singer said she was a resident of Valley Stream, N. Y.

BANK EX-OFFICER INDICTED SAID TO BE $20,000 SHORT

Federal Prosecutor Gives Estimate on Alleged Peculations of James J. Halpin, E. St. Louis.

The shortage attributed to James J. Halpin, former vice-president of the First National Bank in East St. Louis, totals about $20,000, said Assistant United States District Attorney Ingram yesterday.

Halpin was indicted by a Federal grand jury Wednesday at Danville, chargedd specifically with embezzlement and misapplication of $2900 of the bank's funs. A bench warrant issued for his arrest has not been served.

Halpin, 42 years old, lives at 724 North Twenty-fourth street, East St. Louis. He has not been connected with the bank for about a year. Recently, friends said, he has been in Chicago.

Details of Charges.

The indictment contains six counts, one charging embezzlement of $100, the others misapplication of the bank's funds. The embezzlement count is based on a deposit Halpin is alleged to have accepted but not entered on the bank's records. The misapplication counts are based on checks received by the bank which Halpin is alleged to have entered on the wrong accounts. Dates given in the indictment for these offenses are between March 8 and Oct. 20, 1932.

Transactions mentioned in the indictment concern the old bank, which closed in the banking holiday of March, 1933, and have no bearing on the new bank of the same name, which opened last May, after reorganization.

Hired by Bank 25 Years Ago.

Halpin entered the employ of the First National Bank 25 years ago as a bookkeeper. He had attended the East St. Louis Public High School and took night courses in commerce and finance at St. Louis University. In 1919 he was made assistant cashier of the bank, and two years later was elected vice-president. His salary in that office was $400 a month.

For six years prior to 1930, Halpin, in addition to his banking duties, operated automobile agencies in East St. Louis, Zeigler, Ill., and St. Elmo, Ill. He was interested also in an automobile finance company. Disposing of these interests in 1930, he was reputed to have taken a heavy loss.

After leaving the bank last year, Halpin was employed by the RFC for a time as an examiner for banks in the process of reorganization. Later he worked for an East St. Louis auditing firm.

STARHEMBERG HOME FIRED ON

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Sept. 8.—Gun shots were fired tonight into a wall of the home of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, Vice-Chancellor. After a Heimwehr alarm squad had withdrawn the incident was explained semi-officially as the result of the carelessness of a Heimwehr guard.

According to this version the guard bumped his rifle against a wall, causing it to discharge. At first he was afraid to admit his carelessness, so the alarm squad was called and made a search of nearby houses.

Starhemberg, head of the Austrian Heimwehr, had just finished delivering an address praising the heroism of Austrian soldiers in the World War. The excitement caused by the incident was heightened by recent measures taken to insure the safety of the Vice-Chancellor from attack by enemies of the Schuschnigg regime.

ITALY ARMING TWO COLONIES NEAR ABYSSINIA

Governors Start Back to Possessions With Troops After Japanese Entrance Into Area.

HAIL SELASSIE HAS ARMY OF 150,000

Modernized Forces Worry Mussolini, Who Wants Somaliland and Eritrea Ready to Defend Selves.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

ROME, Sept. 8.—The Governors of two of Italy's African colonies started back to their posts today as Italy made known its fear of an attack on those colonies.

A high colonial official disclosed that Italy was sending both soldiers and munitions into the colonies of Somaliland and Eritrea, possessions on the coast of the Red Sea.

Gov. Maurice Rava of Somaliland and Gov. Riccardo Astuto of Eritrea were returning hurriedly after interviews with Premier Mussolini. The Governors themselves will take charge of the extensive military reinforcements of the areas they administer.

Two reasons caused the sudden colonial flurry. Both of those reasons lay in Abyssinia upon which both Somaliland and Eritrea border. One was the penetration of Japanese interests into Abyssinia—that ancient land whose nobility claims descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

The other reason was the fact that the ruler of that land, Emperor Haile Selassie, has modernized his army with airplanes, howitzers, field artillery and other modern equipment. All this in addition to the fact that the Abyssinian cavalry already is noted as one of the finest bodies of its kind in the fighting world.

Army of 150,000.

That army was understood here to be composed of 150,000 men, and for months past there has been uneasiness over the rumors that a holy war was not beyond the realm of possibility.

Mussolini has started home from his trip to southeastern Italy and on Tuesday will attend a conference of all his army Generals. It was regarded as likely that the Red Sea colonial military situation would be discussed at this meeting.

Not only is the actual colonial situation a thing which is causing uneasiness but, according to a high official, the European situation is so fraught in the Italian mind with possible war that Italy intends to arm its colonies to such an extent that they could protect themselves in case of war without calling on the mother country for reinforcements.

This same official said that Italy did not intend to invade Abyssinia, despite rumors that such an expedition might take place. Recently, the War Department instituted courses for officers in the Abyssinian language as a help in case of conflict.

Jealous of Influence.

Italy, is was made clear, is jealous of an outside influence being brought to bear on Abyssiania. This attitude refers particularly to Japan, although the modernization of the Abyssinian army has been accomplished under the direction of the Belgian Military Mission.

The semiofficial journal "Azione Coloniale" (Colonial Action) has prepared for publication a statement of what it believes to be Emperor Haile Selassie's plan. After detailing the development of the Abyssinian army since the Belgian Military Mission went there in 1930, its enlargement and equipment with machine guns and tanks, and the creation of national militia in the provinces, the journal goes on to say that the reason for such preparations is a defiance of Europeans who surround Abyssinia with colonial possessions.

In its summing up of the situation, the article says:

"Suborned by the coptic clergy, filled to the teeth with mystic ideas of the old testament, pressed by the necessity of cementing by a holy war the different races of the country, and perhaps submitting to the influence of European counselors behind whom one sees the shadows of the big armaments companies, the Emperor thinks that a kind of crusade against one of the European Powers installed on the confines of the country would give a new glory to the throne of Solomon and renew the power of Abyssinia."

Marriage Cancellation Cited.

Because of this already ticklish situation, Italy does not relish any entrance of Japan into the scene in support of Abyssinia. The recent cancellation of the "picture bride" marriage of Miss Masako Kuroda, daughter of a Japanese Viscount, to Prince Lij Araya of Abyssinia, was reportedly at the instance of Italy. While official quarter did not confirm that Italy had anything to do with the cancellation, the idea was regarded as not illogical.

Italian Colonial publications have on several recent occasions called attention to Japanese ambitions in Abyssinia and have told the Abyssinians that their best interest would not be served by such a combination.

SAYS DILLINGER PUT SURRENDER PLAN ASIDE

Indicted Lawyer Asserts Idea Was Discussed With News Reel Service.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Louis Piquett, attorney for John Dillinger, said today the desperado had rejected a surrender plan worked out by Piquett. The fugitive killer was killed later by officers here.

Piquett, in jail under indictment for harboring Dillinger, said he had discussed the surrender and had made arrangements to nominate John Dillinger Sr. for the reward.

"We even talked with a news reel service about how we might get Dillinger to say a word about how crime does not pay," Piquett went on. "But the reason that we didn't get him to give up was that someone else—I'm not sure who—persuaded him not to."

Piquett, whose Loop office has been described by Federal agents as the "general office" of the Dillinger gang, said he believed he could find the body of John Hamilton. He said Hamilton was the "tough guy" of the gang, and that a clew to the locating of his grave was contained in a letter that had passed through his office.

Dillinger never entered his quarters, the attorney insisted, and he denied that he had arranged with two surgeons, indicted with him, to perform face-lifting operations on Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter, also killed later by officers, to hide their identity.

Piquett admitted meeting Dillinger while he was hiding from authorities, and said that he also had conferred with Evelyn Frechette, Pat Cherrington and Opal Long, the gang's women.

A group of Federal agents were reported to be hunting for the body of Hamilton in an abandoned mine shaft in Southwestern Wisconsin. Officers at Platteville, Wis., intimated they put some credence in a story that Hamilton had been killed by Dillinger who believed Hamilton had betrayed him in the Mercer (Wis.) raid.

PART OF WOMAN'S BODY FOUND

Theory It May Be That of Agnes Tufverson.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 8.—Another portion of the body of a woman thought to have been murdered was discovered today by two boys on the Sandy Beach near the spot where the mutilated torso of the woman was discovered several days ago.

There has been no identification of the body, but police are working on a theory that it may be that of Agnes Tufverson, Detroit attorney, missing bride of Captain Ivan Poderjay. The Tufverson woman disappeared after her marriage and has not been heard from since.

FINAL REPORT OF HANDLAN-BUCK RECEIVERSHIP

Total Expenses of Settlement Listed by Nelson W. McLeod as $36,165 Since July, 1932.

ASSETS $619 377, LIABILITIES $21,000

Thomas N. Dysart Also Makes Accounting as Trustee of A. H. Handlan Estate.

A final report of Nelson W. McLeod, as receiver of Handlan-Buck Manufacturing Co., railway supplies firm at 212 North Third street, shows that the total receivership expenses were $46,165.

This includes fees paid to him amounting to $19,423 and $6375 to his co-receiver, David E. Blair, who resigned. The attorneys for the receiver were paid $7500 up to last Nov. 1, while the costs incident to a referee's hearing of the case amounted to $6624. The expense also includes fees for three appraisers, who received a total of $2700.

The report was filed yesterday in Circuit Judge Hamilton's court, being a final settlement of the receivership estate. McLeod, a former lumberman, and Blair, a former Judge of the Missouri Supreme Court, were appointed receivers by Judge Nortoni, then on the Circuit bench, in July, 1932. Blair served until last November. The receivership was terminated Aug. 26, as a result of a reorganization.

Assets $619,377.

McLeod lists the assets of the company at $619,377, with liabilities of about $21,000. Among the assets are $270,000 in United States Government bonds and $3000 in Charlotte City (Va.) bonds. During the receivership, the report shows, receipts amounted to $897,527, consisting of income from the business and from assets. Total disbursements were $894,091, of which $751,955 was for raw material, merchandise and operating costs. The firm has a surplus of $347,476.

McLeod asked the court for an additional fee of 5 per cent, based on the inventory value of the business, less the amount he has already received. He figured $11,543 was yet due him on this basis. He related that due to his knowledge of mechanics he was able to devise improvements in several of the commodities of the company, principally railroad lanterns, which greatly improved their efficiency and increased sales. His interest in one patent has been transferred to the firm, and he is ready to assign his interest in another.

Another report, also filed yesterday, by Thomas N. Dysart, as trustee of the estate of the late A. H. Handlan, founder of the company, shows that since taking charge as trustee, to which position he was recently appointed by Judge Hamilton, he has effected a reorganization with a new board of directors. He was chosen president, M. Jules King, secretary, and C. Douglas Smiley, Jr., general manager. The president and general manager are to receive $5000 a year each and the secretary $3000 a year. The new board of directors is composed of Dysart, King and Carl Giessow.

Recommends Dividend.

The Handlan trust estate owns a large part of the stock of the company, which is capitalized at $250,000. Dysart points out that no dividends have been paid to stockholders since 1926, and he recommends some of the surplus be used to pay a dividend amounting to $75,000.

Dysart, who is president of the Chamber of Commerce, was appointed successor trustee after the court had removed the trustees named in the will, who were Mr. Handlan's sons, A. H. and E. R. Handlan, and their sister, Mrs. Lillian Lemp. The receivership action and the removal of the trustees were the result of litigation filed by heirs who complained of the management of the estate and the business, objections being principally to the two brothers.

Judge Hamilton recently ordered a judgment for $176,000 against the Handlans based on allegations in an accounting suit. The brothers have given notice of appeal.

AAA ACTS TO PREVENT FODDER PROFITEERING

Sets Up Clearing House to Expedite Feed Shipments to Drouth Areas.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A conservation program to provide a systematic market for corn fodder and stover (the mature cured stalks used as feed) was announced today by Chester C. Davis, AAA Administrator.

He said a central livestock feed office would be opened early next week in Kansas City. Its purposes will be to serve as a clearing house to expedite commercial shipments of feed and forage to drouth areas and to discourage speculative profiteering at the expense of drouth-stricken farmers.

The conservation plan includes a guarantee of a commercial market so as to provide farmers with an incentive to harvest, cure and prepare corn fodder and corn stover. The Government has no intention to purchase it, but will buy such amounts as have been harvested under individual contracts with farmers and remain unsold April 1, 1935.

The program will be carried on in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana, Missouri and Ohio. As a corollary program, the state extension services will conduct a campaign to show farmers the advantages of conserving and feeding fodder, thus permitting them to sell their hay, releasing increased hay supplies for shipment into drouth areas.

Lewis W. Plager of Grundy Center, Ia., has been appointed to help farmers develop plans for harvesting, curing and preparing fodder and stover for shipments, including baling and shredding. Plagre will be in charge of general field operations.

For fodder and stover unsold by April 1, 1935, the administration agreed to pay the following prices:

	Whole.	Shredded.
No. 1 corn fodder (entire plant)	$8.50	$9.00
No. 2 corn fodder (entire plant)	8.00	8.50
No. 1 corn stover or sweet corn	....	....
No. 1 corn stover (ears removed)	7.50	8.00
No. 2 corn stover or sweet corn	....	....
No. 2 corn stover (ears removed)	7.00	7.50

Initial allotments of quantities of fodder will be made soon to states, and will be prorated to counties and individual farmers who sign contracts.

LONG AND WALMSLEY AGREE TO ARMISTICE

Armed Forces Barred From Polls When New Orleans Votes Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8. — An armistice to keep all armed forces away from the polls in Tuesday's primary was agreed upon tonight by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and his political adversary, Senator Huey P. Long.

Both Long and Walmsley factions accepted an agreement drawn up for a peaceful election by the executive committee of an organization of 100 citizens who issued a "call to duty" and enlisted "nonpartisan" recruits.

Under this agreement Long's 2000 state militiamen and Walmsley's 1500 policemen with their arms will be barred from duty at the polls and the conduct of the election will be placed in the hands of an arbitration committee of five men who will settle all disputes and back up their decisions with a force of 300 armed special police. The committee's decisions will be final.

Regular Officers Barred.

Police, militia, deputy sheriffs and all other regular officers will be excluded from the polls on election day.

Another section of the agreement provides that each group of opposing candidates must submit to the arbitration committee one qualified elector to serve as an official at each polling place and the committee reserves the right to accept, reject, or substitute names submitted.

Both sides agreed to recognize the terms of the recently-granted Federal Court injunction which prevents the removing of any name from the present voters lists and forbids any person from voting whose name does not appear on the list.

Any person appearing at the polls with arms other than those commissioned by the arbitration committee is subject to arrest and no liquor is to be sold within a mile of a polling booth.

Members of Committee.

The members of the arbitration committee are: A. P. Harvey, of the Central Trades and Labor Council; Richard Leche, chairman of the Orleans Board of Supervisors, and private secretary to Gov. O. K. Allen; Charles F. Fletchinger, designated by Loyola University; Charles E. Dunbar, selected by Tulane University, and Judge William H. Byrnes Jr., of Civil District Court, the latter to serve as chairman.

This truce changed the election day outlook where originally the rival leaders' special guards provided one man under arms for every 30 persons qualified to vote. There are about 120,000 qualified.

The fight still went on today as Long's legislative committee went into the affairs of the city. Rumors were spread that complete martial law would be declared and that the Legislature would be immediately summoned to impeach the whole city administration.

Congressmen will be voted on throughout the state, but the New Orleans fight overshadowed other campaigns.

In New Orleans, Senator Long supported the following candidates:

For Congress — Representatives J. O. Fernandez and Paul H. Maloney, both incumbents.

Associate Justice State Supreme Court—Judge Archie T. Higgins of State Court of Appeal.

Louisiana Public Service Commission—James P. O'Connor, Jr.

Walmsley and his old regular organization, one of the South's oldest political rings, supported:

For Congress — Herve Racivitch and Gus Blancand.

Associate Justice State Supreme Court—Judge Walter Gleason of Orleans Parish Civil District Court.

Louisiana Public Service Commission—Francis Williams, incumbent.

SENATOR REED SUCCEEDS VARE AS NATIONAL COMMITTEEMAN

Pennsylvania Republicans Adopt Platform Assailing Administration Policies.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 8.—State Republicans today picked United States Senator David A. Reed as National Committeeman to succeed the late William S. Vare and adopted a platform designed "to show the country" what Pennsylvania thinks of the "new deal."

Reed said: "The very integrity of constitutional government is in the balance. The individual liberty for which our ancestors gave their lives is jeopardized by a group of bureaucrats, a little band of theorists, who have insinuated themselves into the national administration and find themselves intoxicated with the sudden possession of great power."

The platform added among other things: "We insist upon home rule. Demand that 80 per cent of the increased Federal estate tax be returned to the states . . . Oppose exploitation of women and children in industry. . . . Favor legislation imposing proper limits upon the rate of real estate tax . . . Unalterably oppose sales of homes of the unemployed for tax delinquencies...Pledge ourselves to provide funds for pensions for the blind and for the operation of the old age assistance laws and to provide funds necessary to pay the State's fair share of the cost of unemployment relief. . . . Stand squarely for immediate stabilization of the currency and for the prompt repeal of those laws that authorize further currency tinkering by the Executive. . . . Detest the agricultural processing system as un-American and unconstitutional. . . . Stand squarely against the further elaboration of the democratic socialistic activity of putting the Government into business.

OTHER COUNTRIES EXPECTED TO TAKE UP ARMS INQUIRY

Senators Hope Investigation Will Spread, Say Disclosures So Far Merely Scratch Surface.

PROTESTS SENT BY TWO NATIONS

Argentina Asserts Bone's Comment Reflects on Official—Chile Asks for More Facts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Diplomatic representations by two countries, one a protest, reverberated today from the Senate inquiry into war-making materials—an investigation which Senators said had only scratched the surface.

The Argentine Government formally protested in writing to the State Department against a statement by Senator Bone (Dem.), of Washington. The remark was declared to have reflected upon the "integrity" of an Argentine official.

The Chilean Government also asked the State Department for full facts concerning statements made at the hearings about its officials. The Chilean embassy said the men in question would be either punished or cleared of "reflection."

These representations and a protest against open hearings, made by the Du Pont interests, deterred the Senate committeemen not at all.

Comment by Senators.

"The inquiry will go on," said Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, chairman of the investigating committee.

"Revelations thus far merely scratch the surface," said Senator Pope (Dem.), Idaho.

"They (the facts) reveal an omnious and menacing condition," added Senator Bone.

"No wonder peace walks on crutches," asserted Senator Vanderberg (Dem.), Michigan.

Additional statements today by the committeemen showed the group generally agreed not only that similar foreign investigations should follow, but also that war should be stripped of its profits through government monopoly in munitions manufacture.

The consensus of committeemen was that facts developed in the first week of hearings exceeded even their own expectations, and should stir other nations to check up on their situation.

Reports from England, which country has figured extensively in disclosures made here, indicate a movement already is under way there to launch an investigation into munitions making.

"We are a comparatively small lot as respects the munitions industry in general," said Nye (Rep.), North Dakota. "Certainly a larger share of whatever influence the industry plays in causing war would be determined if this investigation would, as we hope, lead to other such studies abroad."

Subjects for Further Inquiry.

Meanwhile, the committee held an executive session today and approved a new list of witnesses to be called when the hearings are resumed next week. Subjects for inquiry will be American-made poison gas, machine guns, airplanes and other war equipment.

The protest today by the Argentine Government concerned a remark by Senator Bone last Tuesday during testimony about Admiral Ismael Galindez, chief of the Argentine Naval Commission in Europe in 1927.

Bone today declined to retract what the Argentine Government said reflected on the integrity of Galindez.

How Incident Occurred.

Henry R. Carse, president of the Electric Boat Co., of New York, was on the stand when the incident occurred.

He had explained that his representative in Buenos Aires, Commander Luis Aubry, had arranged to pay a commission of $50,000 to an unnamed person for assistance in getting the contract. Nevertheless, the work went elsewhere.

The stenographic record of the hearing at this point shows this conversation:

"Bone—Then evidently someone else did more down there if they got the business. Is that a fair assumption?"

"Carse—I think I explained to you our understanding of how the business went otherwise. Apparently Admiral Galindez was more important than some other person in Buenos Aires."

"Bone—That particular gentlegentleman may be more in need of the needful compensation and was willing to meet other offers that were tendered. Is that a fair assumption?"

"Carse—I do not know about Admiral Galindez. Mr. Aubry evidently was putting his money on the wrong horse."

Senator Nye, who also remarked that the record should "speak for itself," added:

"There'll probably be more protests before we are through digging into this business. It really should be an eye-opener to foreign governments and may cause them to order like investigations."

Senator Bone said today that "unless some curb be placed on this mad race, which seems to be largely inspired by the urge for profits by private munitions makers, the whole world is in for still more horrible experiences."

"When the heads of great governments can be reached to promote private sales of war material, it is time to call a halt," he added.

Reference to King George.

His reference was to evidence that King George of England in 1932 intervened with the Polish Ambassador in London in an effort to help a British arms concern get a contract in Poland, also sought by an American concern.

Testimony touching the English King also troubled other members of the committee.

"We are shown a picture in which governments co-operate with their own nations in promoting alien sales of war materials," said Senator Vandenburg, co-author of the resolution that brought about the hearing.

"It is a tragic paradox," he added, "that the emphasis upon filling the world with as great a quantity of war munitions as possible, encouraged by governments, parallels the efforts of these governments to encourage arms limitations and peace."

Contractors' Boat Sunk by Mississippi Snag

SNAG SINKS RIVER BOAT NEAR CHAIN OF ROCKS

Contractors' Tow Runs Into Series of Mishaps in Shallow Water.

A series of mishaps to a tow of contractors' boats in shallow water near Chain of Rocks ended yesterday afternoon in the sinking of an unoccupied quarterboat used as sleeping and eating quarters for men employed in river work.

One of the tugs was stove in by a snag, sank, was raised, and ran aground. Another tug had a breakdown after running aground and was taken to St. Louis for repairs. One of the four wooden barges had a hole torn in its bottom by the same snag that sank the quarterboat.

The quarterboat sank in about seven feet of water off Mosentine Bar on the Illinois shore, just opposite the North Shore Boat Harbor. According to Robert Turlin of Cape Girardeau, engineer of one of the tugboats, the sinking of the quarterboat was due to the effects of wind after two of the three tugs had been disabled by previous accidents.

Whole Tow Runs Aground.

"Friday morning," he said, "the tow—that was the three tugs, four wooden barges, two steel pontoons and the quarterboat—ran aground at the point of the bar, and the E. Frakes, my boat, broke its drive shaft coupling. Trying to get the tow into the channel, the Jessie Anderson, another tug, had a hole torn in its port side by a snag and sank. It was raised last night, and the third tug, the H. T. Pott, towed the Frakes to St. Louis for repairs.

"The Pott returned about noon today, and in trying to get started upstream the Anderson ran aground. The Pott tried to take the whole tow, to land it on the Missouri shore. They were drifting downstream and the wind carried the tow over toward the east shore again, where the quarterboat hit a snag. It drifted about half a mile and sank. They say there's an old packet sunk right about here, and I think that's what we hit."

Aided by Alton Steamer.

Following the sinking of the quarterboat the barges were tied up on the Missouri shore with the aid of the Floyd H. Blaske of Alton, a steamer. They were loaded with barrels, wire and coal for use in construction of revetments and dikes near Washington, Mo. The tow was going to Washington from Cape Girardeau.

Watchers on shore said two of the barges passed over the snag before it hit the quarterboat. A large hole was torn in the bottom of one barge.

The old packet, parts of whose superstructure have been visible during the recent low water, is upstream from the scene of the accident.

ST. CHARLES APPROVES BONDS FOR A FILTRATION PLANT

Issue for $65,000 Carries and Work Will Be Started at Once With Government Loan.

A $65,000 bond issue for a water filtration plant and other improvements in the St. Charles water system was approved by voters yesterday, 837 to 189. A two-thirds vote was required. The vote was about one-fourth of the registration.

Officials said work would be started immediately with funds provided under a Government loan, only two-thirds of which must be repaid. The filtration plant will cost about $45,000 and the remainder will be used for other improvements in the plant and distribution system. St. Charles, which now has only a clarification plant, is the only city of its size in the State without filtration.

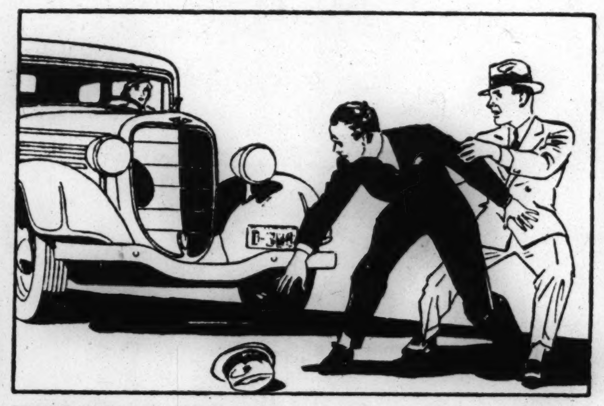
FIRST IN VALUE - NO WONDER DODGE LEADS IN SALES!

It's a big, sturdy car, priced amazingly low . . . now only $645*. . . Pictured below are just a few of the reasons why Dodge holds first place in its price class . . . selling more cars than any other except the three smaller, lowest-priced makes.

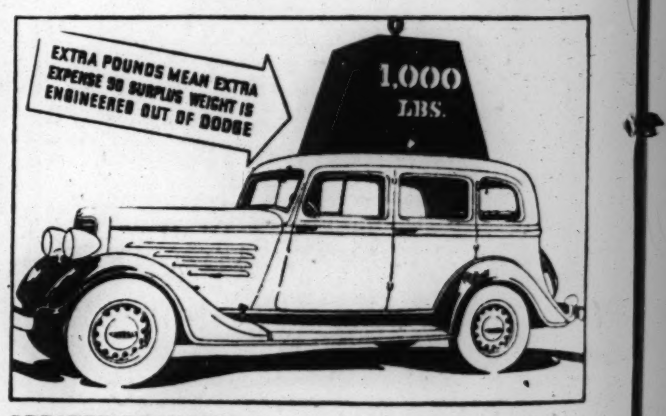
FLOATING POWER engine mountings. Johnny Farrell, former U. S. Open Golf champion, drives off the hood of a new Dodge—with the engine running at high speed! Floating Power smothers the vibration which, in ordinary cars, would prevent such a "drive."



HYDRAULIC BRAKES—stop instantly. Safe—sure—smooth. Self-equalizing. No need to spend money for frequent adjustments. Save on tires and brake linings, too. The safety provided by Dodge hydraulic brakes is a vital need in this age of speed.

MY SPRINGS SQUEAK TERRIBLY
IF YOU HAD A NEW DODGE WITH OILITE SPRING-INSERTS THEY WOULD NEVER SQUEAK

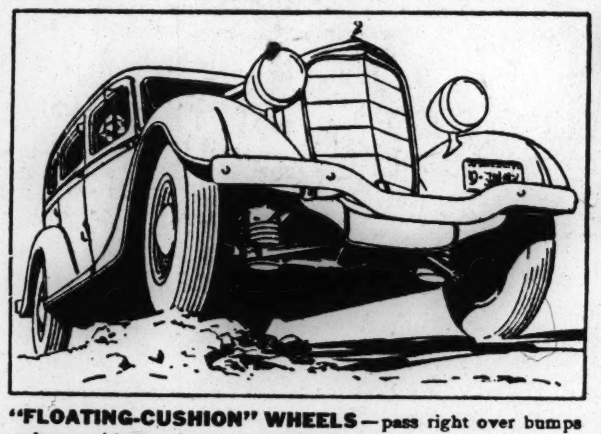
"OILITE" SPRING INSERTS—self-lubricating. Springs never need oil, yet never squeak. One of the 32 Dodge features, many of which are not yet found even in higher-priced cars. And Dodge has 12 economy advantages estimated to save you up to $100 in cash.



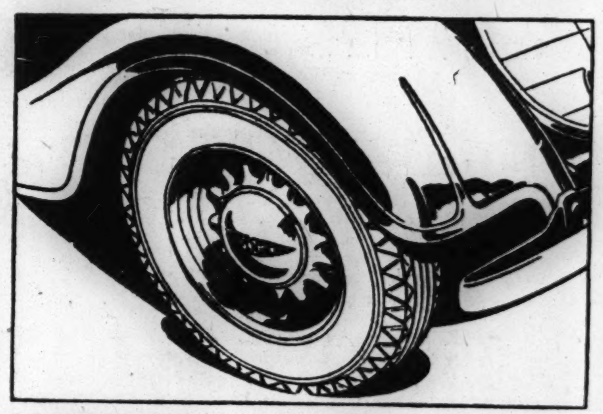
EXTRA POUNDS MEAN EXTRA EXPENSE SO SURPLUS WEIGHT IS ENGINEERED OUT OF DODGE
1,000 LBS.

GREATER ECONOMY—you're not hauling "dead weight" in a Dodge. That's another reason why it costs so little to run a Dodge. Owners report getting 18 to 22 miles to a gallon of gas, with big savings in oil, repairs, and all operating costs.

SAFETY ALL-STEEL BODY—vital safety for you and your family. In dramatic tests, Dodge cars have been pushed off steep cliffs—plunging, crashing, rolling, turning over in mid-air . . . then able to drive off under their own power after striking bottom!



"FLOATING-CUSHION" WHEELS—pass right over bumps and ruts without a jar or tremor, without tipping the body of the car. Make the roughest roads seem smooth. Stop rear seat tossing and jolting. An improvement over ordinary "knee-type" wheels.



AIRWHEEL TIRES—for smarter looks . . . greater safety . . more comfort. Some cars charge $32 extra for these bigger, softer tires, but they are standard equipment on every Dodge. One more reason why, in any comparison of value, Dodge always wins out!

$645* and up, f. o. b. factory, Detroit.

DEMURRERS PLANNED IN INCOME TAX CASE

Aviation Men's Counsel to Contend Charges, If True, Are Not Violation.

Attorneys representing former executives of the Universal Aviation Corporation, who were indicted by a Federal grand jury in St. Louis last June on charges of conspiracy to evade income tax of $201,225, told Judge Davis yesterday that they will file demurrers for their clients early this week and will contend that the facts alleged by the Government, even if true, do not constitute violation of the statutes.

Those indicted were Dan W. Jones, Halsey W. Dunwoody and George B. Schierberg of St. Louis, and Graham B. Grosvenor, A. O. Cushny, Frederick J. King, William Dewey Loucks and Alex H. Beard of New York. Jones was president of Universal Aviation Corporation and Grosvenor was president of The Aviation Corporation of New York which purchased Universal.

The Government charged the defendants evaded income tax on a net profit of $2,248,000 which Universal realized in 1929 from sale of 50,000 shares of stock of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America to Aviation Corporation. The two companies treated the sale as an inter-company transaction not subject to tax, but the Government asserted the deal was made before Aviation acquired Universal.

The attorneys said they wished to argue the demurrer at length and asked for a special setting for that purpose. Judge Davis tentatively set Nov. 2 for a hearing on the demurrers.

LABOR BOARD PUTS OFF RULING IN KOHLER CASE

Hears Arguments on Union's Petition for Plant Election on Group Bargaining.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The National Labor Relations Board took under advisement late today a request of organized labor for a special election of employes of the Kohler Co. of Kohler, Wis., to select collective bargaining representatives. Chairman Lloyd Garrison did not indicate when a decision would be announced. Arguments of counsel for worker and employer consumed the day. The board has before it a mass of testimony, most of which was taken at a three-day hearing at Sheboygan, Wis., two weeks ago.

The petition filed by Local Union No. 18545 included a request for removal of the plumbing manufacturing company's Blue Eagle and dissolution of the Kohler Workers' Association, an organization of employes which labor federation leaders contend is company-dominated.

Kohler at Hearing.

Walter J. Kohler, former Governor of Wisconsin, who is president of the company, attended the hearing today, but took no part.

Lucius P. Chase, company attorney, said Kohler was a labor benefactor and cited benefits to employes he said had accrued from the company's group insurance plan which had built up individual reserves of from $300 to $600. Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor and special counsel for the American Federation, charged the company had fought organization of its plant by the federation union, and insisted "company defiance" of Section 7A of the National Recovery Act "must come to an end." Section 7A is the collective bargaining clause which the union contends the company has violated by refusing to recognize its representatives.

Chase denied the company had forced its employes to join the Kohler association by threatening them with lay-offs if they did not sign application cards.

The company contended there was no need for a special election inasmuch as the workers already had a bargaining organization.

Kohler Union's Attitude.

A. B. Haugen, attorney for the workers' association, told the board the association would be glad to represent the American Federation of Labor in bargaining with the company.

Henry Ohl Jr., president of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, accused the company of "studiously avoiding bargaining with the chosen representatives of the employes," and indicating by their answers to union demands their intention of recognizing no bargaining group other than the "company-controlled" employes' association.

BLUE EAGLE IN CHARITY SHOPS

Two St. Louis Institutions May Use NRA Emblem.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8. — The NRA today designated 52 charitable institutions engaged in manufacturing as "sheltered workshops," thereby entitling them to the use of the Blue Eagle on their products. The workshops are nonprofit making institutions, providing remunerative employment for physically, mentally or socially handicapped workers.

Under regulations regarding such institutions, they may not employ minors under 16 years, except for instructional purposes, or engage in destructive price cutting or other unfair trade practices. Articles bearing NRA labels authorized for sheltered workshops may be sold by retailers without violating the retail code. The sheltered workshops designated include: St. Louis Broom Shop for the Blind, 2832 Washington avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; Springfield, Missouri, Association for the Blind, 540 Brower street, Springfield, Mo., and Occupational Therapy Workshops of St. Louis, Inc., 4567 Scott avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

New Auburn Models Have Wholly New Streamlined Design

Sixes and Eights for 1935 Have Greater Power, Longer Wheelbases; All of Custom Type.

Auburn's new 1935 lines of straight eights and six cylinder automobiles are announced by the Southwest Automobile Co., distributer, and are on display.

Roadability, ease of steering and handling, economy of operation and upkeep, quietness, luxurious finish and appointments, and improved performance are features.

Four models are offered in the straight eight line: a five-passenger sedan; five-passenger, two-door brougham; two-passenger convertible cabriolet with rumble seat, and a five-passenger convertible sedan. Four models of the same body types are available in the six-cylinder line. All models are of the custom type. Dual ratio may be had on any model at slight additional cost.

The wheel-base of the si is 120 inches, an inch longer than last year's six, while the straight eight wheelbase is 127 inches, likewise an inch longer.

The six has an 85 h. p. engine, the eight one of 115 h. p.

In general appearance, the new Auburns reflect the tendency toward streamlining, but freakishness of design has been avoided.

Distinctive New Lines.

Through the use of longitudinal lines the hoods of the cars appear extra long, and the distinctive radiator design, entirely new, makes for this appearance of length. This hood, with the wing and torpedo type fenders and slanting top lines of the body, give an appearance of smart distinction.

Chromium plate and stainless steel are much in evidence. Head lights, bumpers, louvre beads, running board trim, radiator grill, window separators, hub caps and tire cover edging are all in bright finish.

Mechanically, the cars contain such features as all-steel unit weld body structure, new and improved shock absorbers, controlled ventilation system, sound proof insulation, hydraulic brakes, X-plus-A chassis frame construction, down draft carburetor, 16-inch wheels on the eight, needle bearing universal joints. Dual ratio may be had on all models.

The frame structure of the 1935 models follows closely the engineering introduced last year by the company, that of the X-plus-A type of bracing in the eights and the X-type in the sixes. In addition, both the sixes and the eights have a box section running from the extreme ends of the frame from a point approximately 12 inches inside the junction of the X-member and the side rails. This section, in conjunction with the bracing, eliminates twisting of the frame. The weave-proof frame provides an excellent foundation for the body, eliminating the causes of many rattles and squeaks giving a feeling of rigidity and safety.

Governor for "Breaking In."

A governor permits the car to be driven not more than 35 miles per hour during the breaking-in period or while it is being driven from the factory to the dealer's showroom. The governor is sealed on at the factory. It operates on the carburetor.

Surging and chattering of valve springs has been eliminated through the unique method of machining the bottoms and tops of the springs under compression, thus giving a square base or support. To insure against overheating of valves, depositing of excess carbon and valve pitting, a supplementary cooling system has been provided. This supplementary system is composed of a copper tube located in the waterways surrounding the valve ports and, fed by cool water from the water pump, sprays a constant stream of cool water around the valve seats and valve ports. In addition to protecting the valves this cooling system, which extends the entire length of the block, also tends to prevent block distortion due to abnormal heat or steam pockets caused by sustained high-speed driving.

Other feautres include vibrationless rubber engine mountings; oil filters, air-cooled generators with high charging rates to provide for the extra drain of radio receivers, seats placed lower in the chassis, softer springs on the eight, metal spring covers, all-steel unit-welded steel bodies, all-metal body bed extending the length of the car, insulation of bodies against engine noises, fabric insulation to guard against squeaks, no-draft ventilation system.

Douglas Airliners Replacing Old Ford Tri-Motored Planes

A fleet of veteran tri-motored airplanes is facing retirement after almost a decade of active service on the mid-transcontinental airway between New York and Los Angeles.

The planes are the all-metal Fords with which Transcontinental & Western Air, the Lindbergh Line, inaugurated the first coast-to-coast passenger service in 1929. Some of the planes saw service before that date on Maddux Air Lines between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Their retirement has been foreshadowed for a year or more by the appearance along the airways of the TWA Douglas Airliner.

Thousands of travelers made their first flights in the sturdy old Fords; thousands of air line mechanics have a real, almost personal affection for the "Tin Geese" as they have been called. Sturdy, dependable and with thousands of miles of flying still remaining in them, they have never, of themselves, caused a serious accident or a fatality. Like so many man-made machines they have merely served their time and can no longer compete in speed, comfort, passenger and cargo capacity and general all-around performance, with the younger, but already severely-tested Douglas Airliner with which TWA is now operating its coast to coast service.

Only about 200 Ford tri-motor planes were manufactured, but their total flying mileage reaches into the millions of miles and the number of passengers they have carried close to the million mark. They saw service on every major airway in the United States and in many foreign countries. The hum of their three radial motors was familiar to city and rural dweller throughout the world.

The Fords were fast flying machines in the early days of commercial aviation in the United States. Today, their cruising speed of 120 miles an hour has been exceeded by about 50 per cent by the larger, more comfortable Douglas. In its best days, the Ford made the transcontinental crossing in slightly more than 24 hours. The Douglas makes the same flight in less than 16 hours.

Their capacity of 12 passengers was considered ample in 1929, and the noise of their three engines made conversation in the cabins difficult, almost impossible. Today, the Douglas Airliners carry 14 passengers at almost 200 miles an hour and the two powerful motors of the Douglas make so little noise conversation is carried on in an ordinary tone of voice.

There was a total of 1275 horsepower available in the three engines on the Ford. Today the Douglas has only two motors, but the total horsepower is 1420. The Douglas can fly, fully loaded on only one of its motors; the Ford could fly on two of its motors. Under favorable conditions the Ford could climb to an altitude of about 16,000 feet; the Douglas, with its supercharged engines and its controllable pitch propellers, cruises normally at about 14,000 feet.

U. S. Rubber Co. Tire Test Cars Face Hard, Long Schedule.

Sixty-three million tire miles, a distance equal to 2520 times around the earth or 131 trips to the moon and back, will be covered by tire test cars for the U. S. Rubber Co. this year.

"We have to use astronomical distances to picture the enormous amount of testing to which U. S. tires are subjected before they are placed in the hands of the public," said Dr. Sidney M. Cadwell, director of tire development. "This year we will do more testing than ever before.

"Our schedule calls for 63,781,000 tire miles to be run in 1934. These tests will be made in the laboratory and on the road. They will involve the use of tires on passenger cars, trucks and busses. They will be made over every kind of road surface known."

Millionth Nash Car Presented to Owner of Oldest Nash in Service

Dr. Edgar O. Nash was officially presented recently with the millionth car manufactured by the Nash Motors Co. as a reward for being the original owner of the oldest Nash automobile still in service.

The veteran Colorado physician bought the car 17 years ago, and has driven it more than 200,000 miles.

Courtney Johnson, general sales-manager for Nash, made the award to the winner in the presence of Mayor Begole of Denver and other officials.

Police and Traffic Officials Advocate Safety Glass in Cars

Police and traffic officials, besides other safety crusaders throughout the United States, are co-operating in the campaign of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. to encourage the widespread adoption of safety glass all-around in automobiles.

The company has received hundreds of letters commending the safety campaign and testifying to the importance of safety glass, which reduces the hazard of shattering.

Police officials in cities like Deroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Toledo, where safety campaigns have been organized to combat the alarming increase in automobile accidents, are emphasizing the importance of safety glass because of the protection it offers in case of accident.

In Detroit an aggressive police campaign to educate the public on safety measures in the prevention of accidents has more than justified itself and will be made a permanent feature.

Commissioner Pickert said that the number of persons cut by shattered glass in accidents has been substantially reduced since the Michigan State law requiring safety glass in motor vehicles became effective last July.

Cigarette Lighter On Truck Described As Safety Measure

A cigarette lighter on a truck is actually a safety factor, according to Phil H. Brockman, president of the Federal Truck Co., local Federal truck distributer.

"It would not be exactly true," says Brockman, "to say that making electric cigarette lighters standard equipment on all Federal models is not in part a bid for driver-favor. But it is more than that. It provides a definite and important element of safety, not only for the driver and the truck owner, but the general public as well. When a driver takes both hands from the steering wheel and his eyes from the road to protect a lighted match from the wind, he temporarily relinquishes control of his vehicle. At night the hazard is even greater; the flare of the lighted match is temporarily blinding."

CHRYSLER AIRFLOW IMPERIAL WITH AUTOMATIC OVERDRIVE SHOWS SENSATIONAL ECONOMY IN RECENT TEST › › ›

Overdrive Economy Test

SPEED	DIRECT DRIVE	OVERDRIVE
20 MPH	14.9 Miles per gallon
30 MPH	14.4 MPG	. . . . .
40 MPH	13.7 MPG	16.9 MPG
50 MPH	13.1 MPG	15.9 MPG
60 MPH	11.8 MPG	14.3 MPG

LOOK AT the table above. It shows you the economy achieved by the Chrysler Automatic Overdrive in actual tests with an Airflow Imperial . . . a great big car of 130 horsepower and 128-inch wheelbase.

More than 14 miles to the gallon at 60 miles an hour in the Overdrive . . . 13.7 miles to the gallon at 40 miles an hour in conventional drive. You get tremendous savings in oil consumption, too . . . and a big reduction in engine wear.

What is the Automatic Overdrive? How does it work?

It's a part of the transmission. It automatically reduces engine revolutions one-third at speeds over forty. It's like a fourth speed. At about 45 miles an hour, the hum of the motor fades . . . an invisible power seems to pull you along . . . the car seems to go even faster. The whole thing is automatic. No buttons or levers to push. You just enjoy the thrilling sensation . . . and save money!

Astonishing as it is, the Automatic Overdrive is just one of the many exciting new features of the Airflow Chryslers. To understand them and appreciate them, you must actually ride in an Airflow car. Don't put your money into any other car until you do. We'll gladly take you for a good long trip.

Mid-Town Motors Organized as New Ford Dealer in St. Louis

Joseph Kellerman and Harry J. Goedecke Active Executives of the Company.

Mid-Town Motors, Inc., 3301-3319 Locust street, has been appointed new Ford Dealer in St. Louis by M. N. Johnson, St. Louis manager for the Ford Motor Co.

F. C. Winkle.

The new organization is under the joint direction of Joseph Kellerman, vice-president and general manager, and Harry J. Goedecke, secretary and treasurer. Both of them have been prominent locally in retail automobile merchandising for years.

Eight years in the automobile mechanical field prepared Kellerman for his active contact with the retail sales field before he entered business for himself here in a new and used car brokerage firm. Later he was with the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. as general sales manager. Following seven years in that position, he was appointed sales counsel for the National Automobile Dealers' Association. His more recent activities include managership of the Pierce-Arrow branch in Chicago and development of sales engineering surveys.

Kellerman and Goedecke were in business together in St. Louis prior to their present association when Goedecke for more than 17 years was a member of the Hudson-Frampton firm, as secretary and treasurer. Previous to his retail car sales experience he was in the lumber industry, from which he retired in 1918. Born in St. Louis, he has lived in this city virtually all his life.

Jack Sieffert.

The appointment of Fred C. Winkle, who has been with Ford service departments since 1907, as service manager for Mid-Town Motors, is announced. Winkle for years was with the service department of the local branch of the Ford Motor Co. Among the salesmen is Jack Sieffert.

Among the members of the firm's sales force are Bert Nesslen, Robert R. Rumbold, Charles Gintel, and William Patch Jr. Dan Regan is the head of the used car department.

With approximately 30,000 feet of floor space for show rooms, offices and service departments, the company has one of the largest and most modern retail automobile plants in the United States. The building, one of the automobile landmarks of the city, is within five minutes of downtown St. Louis, and has three entrances, front, side and rear.

A courtesy department is planned for a new type of service. Owners who leave their cars early in the day are provided with transportation to their places of business and find the cars fully serviced, ready for driving home, at the end of the day.

Special departments give services 24 hours a day seven days a week.

Only Ford factory-trained mechanics who have been through an extensive period of training are employed in the parts and service departments. Only genuine Ford parts and accessories are carried.

In the sales department, a large force of competent salesmen have been engaged and arrangements completed for courses of instruction for the personnel.

New equipment has been installed throughout the plant and special displays of Ford models include a $5000 cut-away chassis for demonstrating the various mechanical features of the car. An electric sign, 40 feet long and 18 feet high, with letters 10 to 14 feet in height, will carry the Ford name on the roof of the firm's building, one of the largest signs of its kind in the country.

New Speedy Planes On St. Louis-Chicago, St. Louis-Dallas Runs

The new Vultee 1-A Transport plane, world's fastest commercial carrier, will be placed in regular service between St. Louis and Chicago, and between St. Louis and Dallas, today, M. P. Bickley, local traffic manager for American Airlines, announces.

The new planes, which have a high speed of 235 miles an hour, will provide two round trips daily between St. Louis and Chicago, one round trip to Dallas and Ft. Worth, with a third St. Louis Chicago schedule operated with a tri-motored Ford plane.

Schedules for the St. Louis-Chicago division call for a departure of the first ship from St. Louis at 2 p. m. The plane will stop on flag at Springfield and Peoria, and will arrive in Chicago at 3:54 p. m. The second schedule will leave St. Louis at 5:00 p. m. and will arrive in Chicago at 6:29 p. m., making the non-stop run in 89 minutes. On the southbound trip, the new planes will leave Chicago at 9:00 a. m. and 12:45 p. m., operating to St. Louis on a one hour and thirty-two minute schedule. The Ford schedule will leave St. Louis at 9:15 a. m., stopping at Springfield and Peoria and is scheduled to arrive in Chicago at 11:55 a. m.

On the Dallas-Ft. Worth run, the plane will leave St. Louis at 2:30 p. m., arriving Springfield, Mo., at 3:56 p. m., Tulsa 5:05 p. m., Oklahoma City 5:54 p. m., Dallas 7:07 p. m., and Ft. Worth at 7:32 p. m. Northbound, the ship will leave Ft. Worth at 12:02 p. m. and will arrive St. Louis at 4:45 p. m., making the same intermediate stop as on the southbound schedule.

The new planes are eight-passenger, low wing monoplanes with 735 horsepower Wright Cyclone engines.

Goodyear to Build Tire Factory in Java

Construction of an automobile tire manufacturing plant by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. at Buitenzorg, Java, Dutch East Indies, is to be started early in October.

The new plant, which will have a daily capacity of 300 tires and 300 tubes, is expected to be in operation by the first of May, 1935, and will employ about 200 workers.

The new Javanese factory will be the fifth Goodyear plant in a foreign land. Others are located in Canada, England, Australia and Argentina.

CHIEF EXECUTIVES OF NEW FORD DEALER ORGANIZED HERE

HARRY J. GOEDECKE.

Known to virtually every automobile dealer in this territory and to thousands of car owners are Joseph Kellerman and Harry J. Goedecke, who are vice-president and general manager and treasurer and secretary, respectively, of the newly organized Mid-Town Motors, Inc., which has just been appointed an authorized Ford dealer in St. Louis.

Hudson, Terraplane Trunk Models Added; Shown in St. Louis

Trunk models, which because of the luggage space already provided in the body give a large carrying capacity, have been added to the Hudson and Terraplane lines. They are announced by the Hudson-Frampton Co., distributer.

The design of the trunks blends them gracefully into the streamline rear ends of the cars. They are built into the cars and add their capacity to the big luggage-tire compartment that is one of the unique features of Hudson and Terraplane cars this year. Thus the space provided in these new cars far exceeds the normal trunk capacity.

The Hudson and Terraplane trunk is 24 inches high, 40 inches wide and 27 inches deep. This baggage space extends into the car body itself, providing room for extra bags, suitcases and packages. The spare wheel can be carried inside this space, with room to spare for baggage, or fender wells may be used, carrying the spare wheel on the side of the car, giving maximum baggage space.

The trunk models list at a slightly higher price, depending upon the model Hudson or Terraplane upon which it is mounted.

New Hudson Trunk Model

This style of built-in trunk model has just been placed in production and is available on Terraplane and Hudson coach and sedan body types.

H. & H. Machine Co. Installs Grinder for Hardened Valve Seats

The H & H Machine and Motor Parts Co., 4216W Easton avenue, has installed for motorists a highly developed grinder for hardened valve seats.

First, the seat must be ground with a carborundum wheel which must have a surface speed of 5000 feet revolutions per minute. The manufacturers had to develop an electric motor to maintain this speed and still not have excessive vibration. To maintain the wheel surface speed, it was necessary to have a motor that would run approximately 15,000 revolutions per minute, which is far in excess of any heretofore developed speed.

OKLAHOMA U. STUDENT FREED IN GIRL'S DEATH

Neal Myers Acquitted of Charge of Murder by Illegal Operation.

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Ok., Sept. 8. — Neal Myers, 21-year-old pharmacy student at the University of Oklahoma, was acquitted tonight of a charge of murder in connection with the death of his college sweetheart, Marian Mills. The State had attributed the 19-year-old girl's death to an effort to avert motherhood.

The jury, given the case shortly after noon, returned the verdict five hours later.

Myers bowed his head and tears came into his eyes as the verdict was read. His parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. B. Myers of El Reno, rushed to him and threw their arms about him, sobbing.

Judge Tom Pace had warned spectators that there must be no demonstration, but many of them cheered.

"I feel the memory of Marian Mills as well as myself has been vindicated by the verdict," Myers said.

Miss Mills, daughter of a university professor, died July 10 in the apartment of Hazel Brown, who was the cook last year in Neal's fraternity house. Evidence showed Miss Mills had gone there to take a quack remedy in an effort to prevent motherhood. The State contended further that she died of shock resulting from an attempted criminal operation.

Myers, who fled before the girl's body was found, testified he feared "disgrace" for his family. He said he had nothing to do with the girl's attempt to prevent maternity. He insisted he opposed the idea, and tried repeatedly to marry her, but she refused.

He surrendered after a three-weeks flight. Now he intends to re-enter the university.

The actions of Mrs. Brown were brought into the trial repeatedly, although she denied she aided in any operation and insisted she allowed the girl to come to her house only because she "couldn't put her out."

POTOSI, Mo., Sept. 8.—Mrs. Rebecca Whitchurch, red-haired restaurant proprietor, was found guilty today of murdering her friend, Arthur B. Lewis, 21 years her junior.

The jury, in Circuit Judge Robert Cope's court, convicted the 40-year-old defendant of second-degree murder and fixed her punishment at 25 years in the penitentiary.

Mrs. Whitchurch, who until last March lived in Ferguson, St. Louis County, is estranged from her husband, Walter, an automobile body worker. She met Arthur Lewis more than a year ago, when she and her attractive 16-year-old daughter, Evelyn, spent the summer on a farm near here and Arthur came to call on Evelyn. When Mrs. Whitchurch left her husband and purchased the restaurant here, she hired Arthur to help her run it.

Found Slain Beside Her Auto.

Last Aug. 2, when Arthur was found shot to death beside his employer's new coupe, which was parked in a field three miles out of town, Mrs. Whitchurch told a fantastic story about two robbers who jumped on the running board while Arthur was teaching her to drive, snatched her pistol from behind the seat and killed him when he tried to brush them off the car.

She told that story to a Coroner's jury, and to her expressed astonishment, they ordered her held without bond for the murder of the husky farm youth. At the trial she abandoned the tale of the robbers. Arthur, she said, had quarreled with her and threatened to kill her. He grabbed the pistol, she grappled with him and it went off accidentally, twice, she informed the jury.

Defendant's Testimony.

Mrs. Whitchurch testified she and Arthur drove to De Soto to visit his sister. While there, he told her he wanted to borrow the coupe that night because he had a date with a girl he had just met. She told him he couldn't borrow it and they quarreled about that almost all the way back to Potosi. Finally he pulled into the field three miles out of town and said, "Let's come to an understanding."

"Just after we parked," she continued, "Phil Jarvis drove past us in a grocery delivery truck. Arthur thought he had seen us and he was mad at Phil and he said, 'I'm going to kill him.' I said, 'Are you crazy, Arthur?' and he told me 'Yes, I'm crazy, I'm going to kill him and I'm going to kill you and take this car.'

"Then he started to drive back toward the road, fast. He was bouncing me around in the car. I reached forward and turned off the key and he grabbed my gun from behind the seat. We struggled over it. It was discharged twice. I don't know what happened then, but Arthur jumped out of the car.

"I got out and walked around and saw him lying there. I realized then what a good friend he'd been and I said to myself, 'If it hadn't been for this gun it wouldn't have happened.' So I threw it as far as I could and somebody drove past and I told them something terrible had happened and asked them to take me into town to tell the officers.

"I didn't know then that Arthur was dead. I told the story that I did, about the robbers, thinking that he could tell what really happened. After I found out he was dead, I had to stick to the story, and so I did until my lawyers advised me of my rights."

Jarvis Placed on Stand.

Jarvis testified that he and young Lewis quarreled a year ago because Lewis was jealous of the number of times he, Jarvis, had danced with Evelyn Whitchurch., He said he thought the quarrel had been forgotten.

In an effort to prove premeditation, the State introduced three witnesses who testified they heard Mrs. Whitchurch say, of Arthur, "Well, if I can't have him, I'll see to it that he doesn't do anybody else any good."

Another youth employed at the restaurant described the parting between Mrs. Whitchurch and Evelyn the afternoon of Aug. 2. "Mrs. Whitchurch said 'Good-by, Evelyn,'" the witness asserted, "and Evelyn said, 'Good-by, mother, be sure and be back by 6 o'clock.' Mrs. Whitchurch said, 'I said, good-by, Evelyn,' and with that, she left."

STATE SALES TAX YIELD $2,230,000 SINCE JAN. 1

Auditor Smith Estimates Revenue From This Source for Year at $4,500,000.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 8.—Collections of the State sales tax so far total $2,230,188, State Auditor Forrest Smith said today. These collections cover the period from last Jan. 15 when the tax law became effective, to July 1, plus about two-fifths of the tax returns due for July. Taxes for August are not due until Sept. 15.

On these figures. Smith estimated the revenue from the sales tax for 1934 would total about $4,500,000. When the act was passed by the 1933-34 special session of the Legislature, its sponsors estimated the tax would produce about $7,000,000 a year.

Gov. Park has said he would make a recommendation to the 1935 Legislature, which convenes in January that the rate be increased to at least 1 per cent and possibly more, and that the act be amended to extend the period in which the tax will be effective. The sales tax law was enacted as an emergency measure, to provide funds to pay the State's share of the cost of emergency unemployment relief and contained a provision that the tax would be removed on Dec. 31, 1935.

The tax applies to retail sales of tangible personal property, admission charges to places of amusement, games and athletic events, electric, water, gas, telephone and telegraphic service, newspaper advertising, commercial laundry, cleaning and dyeing service, bill board and other outdoor advertising service, and the transportation of persons or freight for hire.

SHERIFF DEUSER AND AIDS DESTROY 50 SLOT MACHINES

At Order of Judge Mulloy, Sledge Hammers Are Used on Devices Seized in Raids.

Fifty slot machines were destroyed yesterday at Clayton by Sheriff Deuser at the order of Circuit Judge Mulloy. The machines, the majority of them the regular 5-cent mint-vending variety, had been seized in raids during the last four weeks.

Deuser had Deputy Sheriff Willman and three trusties from the jail help him swing the sledge hammers. About $50 taken out of the machines will be put into the County school fund.

HITLER DERIDES IDEA OF POLITICAL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

"A Product of Decadent Jewish Intellectualism," He Says, and 2000 Woman Nazis Cheer.

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 8.—The idea of woman's rights in politics was denounced today by Chancellor Hitler as "a produce of decadent Jewish intellectualism," in an address to 2000 woman politicians, Nazi organizers here for the party convention. They applauded his statements energetically. Hitler told them:

"Liberalism has a large number of points for women's equality. The Nazi program for women has but one: This is a child.

"While man makes his supreme sacrifice on the field of battle, woman fights her supreme battle for her nation when she gives life to a child."

He added that he believed parliamentary life tended to degrade and desecrate women.

During the day, 60,000 cheering little boys, all in uniform, marched with military precision into the stadium and listened attentively as Hitler outlined for them the code of life he wished them to follow.

"We want to be a peace-loving people," he said, but, at the same time, courageous.

"That's why you must be peaceful and courageous at the same time. We want our people to be honor-loving; to that end you must from earliest childhood learn the conception of honor.

"We want to be a proud people and you must be proud; proud to be youthful members of the greatest nation. We want an obedient people, and you must learn to practice obedience. We want a people that is not soft but hard as flint, and we want you from early youth to learn to overcome hardships and privations.

"There must be no classes or class distinctions among our people, and you must never let the idea of class distinctions take root among you.

"All we expect of the Germany of the future, we expect of you. We shall pass on, but Germany will live in you."

Every one of these and other sentences, barked out by Hitler, drew applause from his young listeners.

Of all the convention events, that of the German youth movement always is the most enthusiastic. Hitler has said that the great hope for National Socialism rests with the youth that grows up in the Nazi doctrine. The main ideal placed before the children is that of a heroic military and national life and the members are trained to obey the Nazi leader.

The military note of the gathering was emphasized not only by the uniforms and the miniature military army kit that each boy carried, but also by the presence of a large number of boys' military bands.

The youngsters stood bravely from 8 a. m. until Hitler appeared at 11. Occasionally some boy was seen to topple over and be carried out, but on the whole the lads stood up well. Throughout the period of waiting the bands played, one after another so that there always was music.

When Hitler came before them, the boys shouted "Heil!"

SHAW DOESN'T KNOW JUST HOW HE DOES IT

'I Can Produce Literature,' He Says, 'but the Thing Just Happens.'

By the Associated Press.

MALVERN, England, Sept. 8. — George Bernard Shaw simply does not know how he does it. While discussing his own work and technique and comparing them with those of H. G. Wells, at the Malvern summer festival recently, he said:

"I can produce literature and I can produce drama. I am a playwright and a great many other things as well, but I cannot tell you how it is done.

"With me, the thing happens and I no more bother about how it happens or why it happens that I bother about how I breathe or how I digest my food—when I do."

The main difference between a playwright and an author, he went on, is that "the novelist has a glorious liberty and license which is denied to the playwright."

"When I ask my friends, Mr. Wells, why he does not try his hand at writing a play," Shaw continued, "he says, with great truth, 'Nothing can happen on the stage.' That is quite true in a sense. Nothing can happen on the stage."

Although both playwright and author are story-tellers, Shaw explained, the former is limited in that he has to bring his characters together in the same place at the same time.

"It is incredible that in real life that sort of thing should happen," he said, "but in the theater the people not only exercise a certain amount of imagination, but they partly surrender their common sense. It is amazing the amount of absurdity which they will accept.

"The novelist can go all over the shop. Wells extends his operations to the moon. He has visitors from Mars. These limitations prevent many novelists who have a great deal of talent from writing plays."

Shaw confessed music should get the credit for his technique.

"My method, my system, my tradition is founded upon music," he said. "It is not founded on literature at all. I was brought up on music when I was young. If you study operas and symphonies you will find a useful clew to my particular type of writing. If you want to produce anything in the way of great poetic drama you have to take a theme, as Beethoven did in his symphonies, and keep hammering at the one theme."

'PRIMITIVE AREA' SET ASIDE IN STATE OF WASHINGTON

Region in North Cascades Is Inhabited Only by Grizzly Bears and Other Wild Animals.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Sept. 8.—The "civilizing" hand of man has been banished by the Government from one of the most rugged areas in the United States.

An area in Washington larger than the State of Massachusetts will remain primitive because the Federal Government has decided to preserve it against the encroachment of modern development.

Extending southward from the Canadian border for 21 miles, the district, too rugged for human habitation, even by the Indians, has been designated as the "North Cascade Primitive Area." It is 801,000 acres in size.

Home of grizzly bear, countless mountain sheep and goats, black tail deer, cougar, bob cats, coyotes and black bear, the area will welcome men only as visitors.

Bounded on the west by the Mount Baker Recreation Area which embraces two of America's most beautiful snow-capped peaks, Mount Baker and Mount Shusksan the primitive reserve adjoins an immense and rugged area in Canada.

OIL MAN'S DAUGHTER CHANGES MIND AFTER DETENTION THREAT

Mrs. Colletta Mulvihill Creen, 15, Sails After Saying She Would Get Reno Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 8.—Colletta Mulvihill Creen, 15 years old, of Pittsburgh, changed her mind after an interview with an Alameda County probation officer and sailed on the Liner Lurline this afternoon for Honolulu, after all.

Authorities here and in San Francisco had threatened to take steps to place the estranged wife of Tom Creen, 20-year-old Pittsburgh truck driver, in a detention home unless she either returned to her father, Thomas Mulvihill, Pittsburgh oil company official, or her mother, Mulvihill's divorced wife, who lives in Manila.

Colletta arrived here by airplane from Pittsburgh Wednesday with the announced intention of sailing aboard the Lurline to meet her mother in Honolulu. Mrs. Mulvihill, however, had returned to Manila after starting for Honolulu and stated her daughter had declined to meet her in Hawaii.

Yesterday Mrs. Creen canceled her reservations on the liner and declared instead she would go to Reno to get a divorce.

Show at Airport Today.

An air show, consisting of formations by the Thirty-fifth Division and a parachute jump, will be held at Lambert-St. Louis Airport beginning at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The show will be sponsored by the Lambert Airport Operators' Association, which plans to present a similar event every Sunday until cold weather begins.

WARNING!

A 2% CITY SALES TAX will come out of YOUR POCKET

¶A 2% City Sales Tax will take $24.00 out of your pocket if you have a $1500 income! If your income is less your percentage of tax will be even greater! Know the true facts of the 2% City Sales Tax and the unbearable hardship it will place on your family. Unless you want to give up one week's salary each year—write—Phone—see your Alderman—Do this immediately!! Tell him you are against this proposed 2% City Sales Tax injustice.

WHY YOU SHOULD OPPOSE A 2% CITY SALES TAX

1. It will cost the majority of wage earners about one week's pay each year.
2. It will raise prices—by adding 2% to the cost of bread, meat, clothing, doctor's bills and services.
3. It hits poor people the hardest—the less money you earn the larger the percentage of tax you will have to pay.
4. It would be costly to collect. A large percentage of the money collected would go to defray the expense of collection.
5. It will increase unemployment. The average worker spends all of his income. With a 2% City Sales Tax he can only buy 98 pieces of goods where he formerly bought 100—this means more unemployment—less goods bought—less men needed to make them—this means fewer factory workers—fewer sales clerks.
6. It will encourage Governmental extravagance.
7. It is directly opposed to the NRA because it increases the cost of living.
8. It constitutes a 2% Salary cut for you. If the Sales Tax is enacted your dollar will buy but 98 cents worth of commodities.
9. The Sales Tax has been condemned by Labor Unions, Churches, Outstanding public officials, tax authorities, economic experts and all thinking people.
10. The City Sales Tax will not replace any existing tax but will be an additional tax burden.
11. If your income approximates $1500 per year a 2 per cent City Sales Tax will take enough money from you to purchase 480 Loaves of Bread, or 200 pounds of beef, or 680 pounds of flour, or 1200 pounds of potatoes, or 480 pounds of sugar, or 8 dresses at $3.00 each, or 12 pairs of children's shoes at $2.00 a pair.

Germans Lost First Battle of The Marne Eight Years Before The World War Started in 1914

Von Moltke in 1906 Altered Von Schlieffen's Grand Strategy for Invasion of France and Made Possible General Joffre's Flanking Movement.

By BRIGADIER-GENERAL HENRY J. REILLY, O. R. C.

TWENTY years ago the "Miracle of the Marne" changed what increasingly appeared to be a decisive German victory crushing France, into a German defeat instead. This victory meant the end of German plans to quickly put France out of the war and then turn with practically her full force on Russia as nearly four years after she put Russia out and returned to the West, this time to use her full force to put France and Britain out.

At General Joffre's headquarters the last of August there was talk of Cabinet members who proposed peace at any price as better than allowing the Germans to continue their victorious march into the heart of France. The French Government was preparing to flee to Bordeaux far to the South. The population of Paris was deserting that city by the hundreds of thousands. With them fled most of the American Paris colony. American consular and diplomatic officials were advising those who remained as to their proper conduct when the Germans entered the city.

The Belgian troops were either besieged in Antwerp or scattered in all directions. Some escaped to France by sea. Belgian refugees were pouring into France and England.

Aug. 30th Joffre returned to his headquarters after seeing his last attempt to stem the German advance by gathering a force on its western flank to strike that flank, fail because the German advance was too quick and powerful.

To that bitter disappointment was soon added the news of Hindenburg's decisive defeat of the Russians at Tannenburg. Since the beginning of the retreat Joffre had been waiting, counting upon the Russian advance to ease the pressure against him by compelling the Germans to take troops from France.

But let him tell it: "The middle of the night we learned from a German radio message intercepted at Belfort, that the success of the Battle of Tannenburg is more complete than at first it was thought to be. Three Russian army corps have been completely destroyed . . .; the Russian Second Army no longer exists." (From the Personal Memoirs of Joffre. Harpers.)

Six days later on Sept. 5 the five German armies which swinging around the Metz-Verdun region as a pivot had swept through Belgium, Luxemburg and Northern France until their western flank had reached the vicinity of Paris were everywhere advancing. Their left was advancing through the Argonne, later to be the scene of America's greatest battle in France. Their extreme right was north of Meaux on ground later to become familiar to the American divisions which made the attack of July 18, 1918.

Looked Like Sedan Again.

The rest of their line was well south of the Marne except above (south of) Chalons-sur-Marne, later the headquarters of General Gouraud, well known to many Americans, where they were along and astride of that river.

Were they never going to stop? Was France face to face with another Sedan, this time on a larger scale but equally disastrous with that of 1870?

These questions were being asked by soldiers as well as civilians as apprehension and fear spread farther and farther within the army as well as the Government and amongst the public.

Yet the night of the ninth, four days later, the German army was in retreat. The morning of the tenth when Joffre's left and center advanced they found the enemy in retreat offering little or no resistance.

The First Battle of the Marne was won!

One more great victory was added to the world's list of decisive battles, the battles which have changed history as abruptly and completely as the great flood in China of 1852 swung the course of the Yellow River from south of the Shantung Peninsula and the China Sea to north of that peninsula and the Gulf of Pe-Chi-li.

Why had this complete reversal of German victory happened?

Was it a miracle?

Or was it a logical conclusion of a series of events hidden from the public because the decisions taken by Generals in war on the scale on which it is now carried on are not always understood by their own army, to say nothing of the public?

In the 20 years since the war the veil which hid these secrets has been lifted by the publication of the memoirs of the Generals concerned and a great mass of records.

Victory No Miracle.

The first victory of the Marne was not a miracle. It was the inevitable and logical conclusion of a sequence of events, the origin and development of which lie in the decade prior to the outbreak of war in August, 1914, as well as in the leadership on both sides from that outbreak until the night of the 19th of September, 1914.

The course of events which determined the Marne began in Germany with the appointment of Count von Schlieffen as Chief of Staff by the Kaiser in 1891. They began in France with the appointment of Gen. Joffre as a member of the Superior Council of War and Director of the Services of the Rear in 1910.

Of course much that happened prior to these two appointments had its influence. However, as these two men gradually worked out the plans and molded the military affairs of their respective countries to fit these plans the crisis which terminated in the First Battle of the Marne logically begins with those appointments.

The great question for the German Chief of Staff to solve was whether Germany stood a better chance to win if she first took the offensive against Russia—this while resting on the defensive in the west against France and any other Powers which might help her. Or would it be better to do the reverse?

Von Schlieffen decided to take the offensive in the west first. He worked out every detail of the plan to bring about a Sedan on a gigantic scale within the first few weeks of the war. In other words, he planned to definitely and completely put France out of the war with one blow. This was in 1905.

Original German Plan.

To do this he planned to have the German Army swinging on the Metz-Verdun region as a pivot march and fight its way through Belgium and Luxemburg and North France as it did until Von Kluck commanding the right flank army was just north of Paris. When this stage was reached in the actual campaign, Von Kluck was separated from Von Bulow, who commanded the next German Army to the east by a dangerous gap. If he went to the west of Paris to outflank the French Army the left of which was made up of the Paris fortified zones and Manoury's 6th French Army, he would widen the gap. This meant risking being cut off from the rest of the German Army and being decisively defeated. So he turned to the east to close the gap.

This gave Joffre the opportunity he had been looking and

Theorists All Wrong: Experts Say United States Is Capable of Consuming All It Can Produce

Supplying the Country With What It Really Needs Will Require Increased Purchasing Power, Rather Than Curtailed Production, Brookings Institution Economists Contend.

Six "Fundamental Conclusions" on Production and Consumption in America

1. During the so-called "new era" of the gay twenties the United States was not living beyond its means. While many individuals may have been living beyond their individual means, our findings show that the nation as a whole was not living beyond its capacity—as measured by what we could produce.
2. There has been a tendency, at least during the last decade or so, for the inequality in the distribution of income to be accentuated. That is to say, while the incomes of the masses of the people were rising during this period, the incomes of those in the upper income levels increased with greater rapidity.
3. Vast potential demands alike for basic commodities and for conventional necessities exist in the unfilled wants of the masses of the people, both rural and urban. It would require but a moderate increase in the consumption of the millions whose standards of living even in 1929 were below the requirements for health and efficiency to absorb the full productive capacity of the nation. The trouble is clearly not lack of desire but lack of purchasing power.
4. The United States has not reached a stage of economic development in which it is possible to produce more than the American people as a whole would like to consume . . . we have not as yet reached the age of abundance of which we all like to dream and that extensive leisure has not as yet been forced upon us as an alternative to a surfeit of goods and services.
5. We cannot materially shorten the working day and still produce the quantity of goods and services which the American people aspire to consume. In due course we can expect a much larger production for the same expenditure of human labor than has yet been possible. But for the immediate future we cannot count on production taking care of itself if the working week is materially reduced.
6. In emphasizing the need of increasing consumption, we must not forget the necessity of simultaneously expanding production. Whether we live under a wage, price and profit system or under a completely communistic method of economic organization, it will always be true that the level of consumption or the standard of living can be raised only through the production of food, clothing, shelter, comforts and luxuries.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.

ECONOMISTS of the Brookings Institution emphatically deny that the United States has been or is now living in a maladjusted "age of abundance" which requires either natural or artificial curtailment of production to bring about a balanced economy.

Maurice Leven, Harold G. Moulton and Clark Warburton, economists of the social fact-finding institution established by the late Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis, in their latest book, "America's Capacity to Consume," declare that even in the so-called prosperous years up to 1929 so many million Americans were under-nourished, poorly housed and ill clad that potential consumption was far greater than actual or potential production.

"The unfilled consumptive desires of the American people," the book says, "are large enough to absorb a productive output many times that achieved in the peak year 1929. Even in lines of basic necessities great wants among the masses of the people go unsatisfied. The trouble is clearly not lack of desire but lack of purchasing power."

Myth of the 'Twenties.

The book, which was published yesterday, is the immediate sequel to the Institution's "America's Capacity to Produce," issued in June, and is part of a larger study conducted with funds granted by the Marice and Laura Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh which the Institution is making to determine what is wrong with the American economic situation. The third volume will deal with the formation of capital in the United States and the final volume, to be titled, "Income and Economic Progress," will give the Institution's final conclusions and recommendations of means for bringing about a more effectively functioning economic system.

The first two volumes confine themselves to economic conditions in the United States during the three decades from 1900 to 1930. The initial work explodes the theory that the United States had built up great excesses of plants during the 'twenties. The authors say that at the height of the boom period in 1929 the amount of idle capacity, expressed in a generalized figure, was something like 20 per cent. They estimate the present idle capacity at 50 per cent.

In the present volume the authors study the flow of income arising out of productive operations. Most of the book including the appendices is devoted to breaking down the past distribution of the national income, with the final chapters giving opinions regarding the necessary increase of production and consumption should the lower levels of income be raised. The book does not tell how the raise is to be accomplished—in several places it says "if by some means the purchasing power could be increased"—and presumably the answer will be found in the final volume.

The Per Capita Income.

Limited as it is, "America's Capacity to Consume" should be provocative reading for the Administration leaders in charge of the curtailment of production program, labor union leaders who insist on a reduction of working hours, Treasury experts and members of Congress who are worrying where the taxes are to come from, humanitarians who are wondering why there is so much poverty in this country, bankers who are interested in what classes do the most savings, and in a most practical sense, manufacturers and other producers who want to know what class of persons in what geographical areas have the most money to spend. Collecting and collating as it does a great quantity of material on income distribution it is a distinct contribution to economic literature.

By breaking down 1930 census figures, the economists show that the moderate per capita income for the United States is highly misleading. For instance, the 27,474,000 families of two or more persons received an aggregate income of $77,000,000,000 or approximately $2800 in 1929. A breakdown, however, reveals that nearly 6,000,000 families, or more than 21 per cent of the total, had incomes of less than $1000; about 12,000,000 families, or more than 42 per cent, had incomes of less than $1500; nearly 20,000,000 families, or 71 per cent, had incomes less than $2500; only a little more than 2,000,000 families, or 8 per cent, had incomes in excess of $5000, and about 600,000 families, or 2.3 per cent, had incomes in excess of $10,000.

Comparing the Farmer.

"In other words," the economists say, "about 21 per cent of the families received only 4.5 per cent of the income. The 11,653,000 families with incomes less than $1500 received a total of about $10,000,000,000. At the other extreme, the 36,000 families having incomes in excess of $75,000 possessed an aggregate income of $9,800,000,000. Thus it appears that .1 per cent of the families at the top received practically as much as 42 per cent of the families at the bottom of the scale.

"At 1929 prices a family income of $2000 may perhaps be regarded as sufficient to supply only basic necessities. However accurate this generalization may be, it is significant to note that more than 16,000,000 families, or practically 60 per cent of the total number, were below this standard of expenditures. Their income aggregated $18,300,000,000 as compared with $58,900,000,000 for the 11,000,000 families having incomes of $2000 or more.

Continuing its breakdown of income figures, the book discloses that the farming population, despite the lower cost of necessities in farming communities, have fared badly in comparison with non-farm families.

"Of the 27,474,000 families of two or more persons," the authors say, "we estimate that about 5,800,000 were farm families and the remaining 21,674,000 were non-farm families. The total income received by the farm families, including an allowance for rent and farm produce consumed, and also including the earnings for non-farm activities of all members of the family, amounted to $7,200,000,000; the income of the non-farm families amounted to about $70,000,000,000. Thus the 21,674,000 non-farm families received almost 10 times as much as the 5,800,000 farm families. The average income of the farm families was $1240, as compared with $3226 for town and urban families. These wide differences are, of course, explained in considerable part by the weighting effect of the numerous high incomes among the city groups; but the disparity appears great even when this factor is eliminated."

Farm Figures.

Again a breakdown of the "average" farm income brings some startling results. The highest income of the 25 per cent of the farm families at the bottom of the income scale was only about $500. The corresponding income for the non-farm families was $1305. Likewise the lowest 50 per cent of the farm families included no incomes in excess of $910, while the lowest 50 per cent of the non-farm families included incomes as high as $1890. The maximum income among 90 per cent of the farm families was $2600, that is, only 10 per cent of these families had incomes in excess of this amount; but among the non-farm families 10 per cent had incomes exceeding $5000.

Geographical analyses likewise revealed the startling disparities between farm and non-farm families. For example, in 1929, Missouri ranked tenth among the states in aggregate income with $3,621,000,000 making a per capita income of $675. But the non-farm population had a per capita income of $851, while the farm population per capita was $189! These figures include incomes from profits from the sale of property and imputed rent on owned homes. In per capita income of farm population Missouri ranked thirty-seventh among the states in 1929, surpassing only Louisiana, Arkansas, Virginia, Mississippi, North Carolina, West Virginia, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and South Carolina. California led the list of states with a per capita farm income of almost $1250.

Fallacy of "Consumptive Indigestion."

After reviewing hundreds of tables which revealed similar evidence of low incomes, the authors reached the conclusion printed in above box. In answering the question, "How much can we consume?" the economists quoted John G. Lonsdale of St. Louis, former president of the American Bankers' Association, as to the so-called classical economic theory for the balancing of production and consumption by curtailment of production.

Writing in the American Bankers' Association Journal for October, 1930, the St. Louis banker said:

"If there has been a recession, is it not because the nation has achieved and produced a scale so large that there has been thrust upon us the necessity of pausing? . . . It is a glorious thing to contemplate that as a nation we have too much, rather than too little."

Commenting on this optimistic statement, the author said: "The opinion is frequently expressed that the primary explanation for the failure of our economic system to operate at maximum capacity is the inability of the population to consume the full quantity of commodities and services that might be produced. It is contended that if, in this great technological age, the economic machine were to turn out in continuous stream the volume of goods of which it is capable, there would be universal consumptive indigestion; commodities would accumulate in the warehouses of original producers or on the shelves of dealers—not for want of purchasing power but because of the outright satiation of human wants. Hence periods of restricted production are regarded as essential to a proper adjustment of the rate of production to consumptive requirements.

The Government's Policy.

"Of more significance than the mere expression of this view by individual observers is the fact that it is being embodied, more or less consciously, in governmental policies. To some extent national policies relating to production are designed to bring about a better adjustment of one division of productive activity with another; but it is also true that a substantial shortening of the working day and a restriction of output are believed to be not only possible but essential. At the same time, it is assumed that standards of living can be maintained or even increased.

"The widespread prevalence of this view and its current embodiment in governmental policy makes this a particularly propitious time to subject the underlying assumption to careful examination. Were the consumptive

Main Income Tax Provisions Of New Federal Revenue Act Analyzed for the Taxpayer

St. Louis Lawyer Points Out Departures From Earlier Law and Restrictions Designed to Prevent Evasion.

By C. POWELL FORDYCE,
A Member of the St. Louis Bar.

ON May 10 President Roosevelt signed the Revenue Act of 1934. This act increases nearly all rates of taxation, puts an end to numerous time-honored schemes of tax evasion, and contains many radical departures from the prior law. Due to the Government's growing need for funds, the Bureau of Internal Revenue will undoubtedly collect all possible taxes and penalties provided for therein. For this reason, and because transactions occurring during this year will form the basis for taxes payable in 1935, the act should be carefully examined by all taxpayers. Failure to do so may cause unexpected liabilities which could have been easily avoided. To facilitate such an examination, and to promote a better understanding of the new law, a resume of its more important income tax provisions is given here.

Title 1 of the 1934 act contains most of the income tax sections. It applies only to taxable years, whether calendar or fiscal, beginning after Dec. 31, 1933 (Sec. 1). Consequently, taxpayers who report their income on the calendar year basis must apply this title, which supplants Title 1, Revenue Act of 1932, to all transactions which take place during 1934. On the other hand, taxpayers who use the fiscal year method need concern themselves only with the Revenue Act of 1932 until they begin a new tax period during 1934. This temporary discrimination seems arbitrary and unfair, but was thought necessary by Congress in order to simplify the administration of the law. Whether or not it is constitutional is a question which the courts probably will have to decide.

Rate of Taxation.

The new act reduces the tax on individuals with net incomes of less than $6000, but increases it on those having net incomes in excess of that amount. The following tables, while not reflecting all deductions now permitted, illustrate the extent of these changes:

NORMAL TAX RATES.

Brackets of Net Income.	Pct. Under 1932 Act.	Pct. Under 1934 Act.
First $4000	4	4

SURTAX RATES.

Amounts of Net Income.	Pct. Under 1932 Act.	Pct. Under 1934 Act.
$20,000-$22,000	8	15
$50,000-$52,000	23	30
$100,000-$150,000 ..	48	52
$500,000-$750,000 ..	53	57

The rate of tax on the ordinary business corporation remains the same, 13¾ per cent. However, many corporations will find their tax burden heavier under the new act for it withdraws the privilege of filing consolidated returns.

No change is made in the amounts of the personal exemptions. A married individual, or head of a family, is still allowed $2500, an unmarried individual $1000. If the taxpayer furnishes more than 50 per cent of the money necessary to support one or more dependent persons under 18 or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective, he may deduct $400 for each person so supported. Unlike the 1932 act, the new law now permits these deductions in computing surtaxes (See 25-b).

Earned Income Credit.

The earned income credit in the 1928 act was abolished by the 1932 act, but is revived in a new and more simple form by Section 25 of the 1934 act. It is available only to individuals, not to estates, trusts or corporations. It can be used to reduce the normal tax but not the surtax. It amounts to 10 per cent of the "earned net income," but cannot exceed 10 per cent of the total net income. "Earned net income" is computed by deducting from "earned income" (wages and other amounts received as compensation for personal services) that part of the usual income tax deductions (business expenses, interest and taxes paid, etc.) properly chargeable against "earned income." For administrative reasons the law permits $3000 of income to be treated as "earned income" regardless of its source, but states that in no case shall the earned net income be considered to be more than $14,000. If husband and wife file separate returns, each probably will be granted the full credit separately computed; but if a joint return is filed, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is expected to rule that only one credit will be allowed, based on the combined net income. This credit was renewed to benefit those deriving income from personal efforts instead of from accumulated wealth, and to make the tax more nearly proportionate to the individual's ability to pay.

Deductions.

Generally speaking, the new law permits the same deductions from gross income as does the prior act. However, Section 23 ((c) (3)) makes a change which is of great importance to representatives of estates. It provides that deductions shall no longer be allowed for Federal or state "estate, inheritance, legacy, succession and gift taxes." Congress justified this change on the ground that such taxes do not constitute expenses incurred in the production of income.

The deduction for depreciation remains the same. The amount is still a "reasonable amount," which the taxpayer may deduct if he desires, but which is arbitrarily used to reduce the cost basis of his property when sold even though he has not claimed it in his returns. Although Congress seriously considered reducing this allowance by 25 per cent, it neglected to do so on assurances from the Secretary of the Treasury that he would change the administration of the law to accomplish this purpose. These administrative changes require the taxpayer not only to furnish more complete schedules of depreciation, but to sustain the burden of proving that the deductions claimed are reasonable and necessary to write off during the remaining useful life of a depreciable asset the unrecovered cost basis thereof.

Stopping Revenue Leaks.

During the last few years the Revenue Bureau has done everything possible to prevent taxpayers from taking deductions for losses sustained on sales of securities to wives or other members of their families. To stop such leaks in the future, Section 24 of the new act states that no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of:

> "Loss from sales or exchanges of property, directly or indirectly, (a) between members of a family, or (b) except in the case of distribution in liquidation, between an individual and a corporation in which such individual owns, directly or indirectly, more than 50 per centum in value of the outstanding stock. For the purpose of this paragraph, (c) an individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by his family; and (d) the family of an individual shall include only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors and lineal descendants."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Rainfall and Human Destiny.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

VICTOR Hugo said: "A few drops of water, more or less, decided the downfall of Napoleon." The great military genius troubled, uncertain, hesitating, delayed because of rain on the night of June 17, 1815, was unable to begin action in the battle of Waterloo until 11:30 the next day, thus giving time for the opposing forces of Bluecher to come up.

Just as the fate of one man may be determined by the duration and physical proportions of raindrops, so may the destiny of an empire. For it is easily conceivable that the stability of all our progress in culture, refinement, education, science and the arts, is wholly dependent upon a proper balance being maintained in the economy of nature. Without this, the efforts of man would be futile.

From the soil comes not only our modern civilizations, but the maintenance of life itself. Without water on this soil to sustain and nourish the tender roots of a social organism, man must migrate.

This was exemplified by the recent great drouth. Had it continued indefinitely, or were it to renew itself and continue indefinitely, the greater part of the North American continent would become sterile except for such limited resources as might be obtained from the depths of the earth. The history of ancient civilizations in Europe is the history of great drouths. Empires rose and fell because of a few drops of water, more or less.

How quickly did our worry over surpluses and other matters pertaining to the internal workings of our economic system become superseded by the external and insidious effects of the prolonged drouth? We are like the small boy who is dissatisfied with the choice and arrangement of his toys, but who becomes infinitely more dissatisfied at the prospect of these being removed altogether; the very thing that nature threatened to do with our economic system, our culture, refinement, arts, science, all our man-made devices, however inadequate and defective they may appear to be.

To this extent we should be a chastened people. Let us thank God that the rains have come, and hope that they will continue in normal amount for many seasons to bring halcyon days again. Better surpluses at a low price, than shortage, a possible famine and migration.

As Elbert Hubbard Put It.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE disparaging remarks against the "epic" plan and Upton Sinclair by Socialist headquarters, both state and national, remind me of what the late Elbert Hubbard once said in his Roycrofter pamphlet: "Better be an isser than a has been or was." PAUL HILL.

Bloomfield, Mo.

Criticises the Democrats.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE collectors of many Missouri towns are apprehensive of the reaction to Democratic politics and their own re-election to office, if the law enforcing the sale of homes for delinquent taxes is made operative this coming November.

There are several other ways to increase the Democratic vote in the fall. Mayor Dickmann might again hang his streamer across the Auditorium, announcing "A Worker In Every Home by Christmas." Also, a repetition of the Mayor's Christmas banquet to the unemployed with the political speeches and all, paid for by City Hall employes, might be moved up to sometime in October. This would have a salutary effect on the election in November.

With greater numbers than ever on the relief rolls, and rampant unrest at work everywhere in our country, it is difficult to see how our President, with all his good intentions, has made anything but a mess of business conditions. Instead of stimulating and helping business, he has tried to bludgeon it into submission, with resultant stagnation and bewilderment. He is still a popular idol, because the people are "expectant."

Our country is fundamentally O. K. But not until this period of political bluster and hysteria has passed, will we emerge on a sound footing. The theory of those in power today seems to be, "If you are not with us, you are against us," and the "halo of right" that the administration is wearing is summed up in the oft-repeated statement of its friends that "business is not co-operating."

It would seem sound policy and good Government for the administration to try some of this co-operating itself. When the people of our country, now stunned by despair, actually awake to the loss of action that they are receiving, they will cast the whole present program into the scrap heap. LOUIS E. PROSKE.

Bouquet and Brickbat.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE editorial entitled "Justice for the Railroads" was one of the most sensible ones I have seen in your paper for a long time.

May I be permitted to say that if you would spend as much copy in promoting a cause of this character as you have done in promoting bond issues in St. Louis, I believe the paper and ink will be employed in a much better cause.

GEORGE WITSMA JR.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Defeatism is a word we used to hear in the war days. Its familiar forbear was the academic "counsel of despair." It is at best a timid gospel. Yet it is embodied in the administration's recovery credo. Restricted production is intrinsically a hands-up gesture. Its acceptance as a solution of our difficulties would, obviously, be an acknowledgement of our incapacity, a token of surrender.

A different gospel is preached by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., head of General Motors, in the September Atlantic. "Industry is incurably optimistic" are the opening words of the article. The reader is carried along on a buoyant thesis to the happy conclusion that this depression, too, will pass away, like all the others that have preceded it. He is persuaded that the sequence, in conformity with the logic and facts of history, will be a greater abundance, more widely and equitably distributed. This is not the vision of a poet. It is not the prophecy of a political Messiah. It is not the travelogue of a philosopher who has journeyed to Utopia, found it good, and marked every step of the way by which the rest of us may make the trip.

Mr. Sloan is strictly a business man. Whether or not industry is incurably optimistic, as he says, he himself is an incurably optimistic industrialist. His belief in our industrial and economic future is predicated on knowledge of the world's industrial and economist past. A realist, if you please, not a rhetorician.

The march of progress, as he presents it, is a swinging procession, with the color and thrill of pageantry. What of the future? After all, that is the haunting question. Mr. Sloan faces it with a robust faith. What we now need, he says, is "the birth of a new industry which, like the automobile industry of 25 years ago, will grow swiftly into large production, with direct, beneficial effect on wages, investment values and living conditions." In his opinion, an industry which will meet these requirements is the manufacture and assembly of machine-made homes.

For some reason the home has thus far escaped the machine. Invention has not crossed its threshold, structurally. The man who drives a mass-production car and enjoys all the bounty of science, "dwells in a house erected by antiquated means, yet pays a high price for his accommodation." Machinery has vastly increased the productivity of the farm—in the matter of wheat, for example, the ratio is 60 times that of primitive husbandry—but the farmer is living in shelter "erected by almost primitive hand methods." Again: "A 10-year-old house, unless it was exceptionally well built and has been frequently modernized, is as antiquated as a 10-year-old automobile."

Let us look at the "assembled" home, as Mr. Sloan describes it:

> A house can be erected in three days' time from the breaking of the ground for cellar excavation to completion for occupancy. In this short period the lot will be graded and planted with shrubbery, and connections made with public services, such as sewers and electricity. The house will be air-conditioned, with all facilities for heating, cooling, humidifying, drying and washing the air its inhabitants breathe. It will have all modern conveniences for reducing housework, on a scale and variety not surpassed in the costliest mansions of the day. Its equipment will include special devices for bringing instruction and recreation into the home—teletype for news dispatches, television apparatus to portray the world's great events as they occur, radio sets embodying visual projection so that motion pictures and operas can be brought directly to the view of the home circle.

Can such a home, luxurious beyond the tradition of marble halls, be economically practicable? Mass-production's answer is a confident yes. "The first house of any series will be one of the most expensive houses ever built." So, too, is the first automobile of a new model. After that, that modern economic magician, standardization, waves his wand.

This, then, is the industrial Moses to lead us out of the present wilderness. It will put labor and capital to work on a super-prosperity scale. "A new day is with us," declares Mr. Sloan, "and I would be the last to deny that it imposes new social obligations on employers," but those obligations cannot be met, he contends, "by retreating timidly to the age of scarcity." If industry is left free to organize its activities, "the good life lies ahead somewhere along the road of abundance. . . ."

TURNING BACK THE CLOCK.

Our usually alert contemporary, the Atlanta Constitution, referred the other day to the most distinguished citizen of Uvalde, Tex., as "Speaker Garner." We rise to correct the Constitution merely for the sake of the record. When Texas Jack was Speaker, Franklin D. Roosevelt was at Albany signing bills passed by the New York Legislature, Herbert Hoover lived in the White House, Adolf Hitler was just one of many political agitators in Germany, Rexford Tugwell was a virtually unknown college professor, Jack Sharkey was heavyweight champion and Dizzy Dean was wasting his talents with Houston, while brother Paul was blossoming unseen in the remote bushes! It is hard enough to keep up with the world without slipping back now and then. The Constitution, we are confident, does not want to scramble up the cosmic scene any worse than it is.

THE BIENNIAL DEBUNKING OF MAINE.

We have had no end of political myths that have been hard to down, but not one of them has held a candle to the hoary untruth that "as goes Maine, so goes the Union." Just about this time every even numbered year, the notion that Maine is a reliable political barometer is thoroughly exposed in all its nakedness. Yet, let two years roll around, and orators of both parties hit the trail for Portland and points thereabouts, and the country fixes its eyes on the Pine Tree State as if its September election had a national significance.

Once more then, here are the facts. Maine is normally Republican, and since the Civil War the Republican party has won most of the presidential elections. Thus, Maine and the country at large have been together when the country has gone Republican. It is when the Democrats have broken the tape that Maine has had its testing as a barometer and been found wanting. From 1856, when James Buchanan was elected President, through the second election of Woodrow Wilson in 1916, Maine did not foreshadow a single one of the five Democratic presidential victories by electing a Democratic Governor in the preceding September. Nor is Maine any more reliable as an indicator of congressional trends. For instance, in 1930 Maine sent an all-Republican delegation to the House, while over the country at large the Democrats won control. Again in 1922 and 1926, to mention only two other times, the Democrats made gains in the House which Maine did not forecast.

Tomorrow's election in Maine will tell us just one thing: how Maine went. As for what the country is going to do in November, those who must find straws in the wind will get about as far by studying the primary returns from the Fourth Ward of the Hon. Jimmy Miller.

UNIVERSITY CITY AND COUNTY SEWERS.

With nearly every public official in the proposed St. Louis County sewer district actively co-operating for the success of the bond issue to be voted on Sept. 25, it is highly disappointing to find Mayor Millar of University City withholding his support. University City is the most populous single community in the county and is usually looked upon as a leader in progressiveness. We cannot believe that, on an issue so fundamental, so vital to health as an adequate sewer system, the citizens of University City will adopt an obstructionist attitude.

Mayor Millar says University City is already adequately sewered. Competent engineering authority dissents from this view. The same authority insists that if the bond issue fails, University City will be compelled to make large expenditures on its sewer system within a very few years. Mayor Millar also is reluctant at this time to add to the tax bill of University City residents. So is every other Mayor in the county. Yet, with the exception of Mr. Millar, every other Mayor is willing, in the interest of health, to tackle the sewer problem now and see that the job is done right.

It long ago has been agreed that the only right way to do the job is not for each community to lay a few pipes and call it a sewer system, but for a scientific trunk line system to be constructed embracing all of the county's populous areas. Happily, the Federal Government is offering, as an outright grant which need never be repaid, the sum of $1,361,000 to accomplish this result, which brings the amount the county must pay down to about $4,500,000. There never will be another opportunity like that. If the county rejects the bond issue, it will find itself paying the entire bill a few years hence, meanwhile risking the danger of epidemics.

Here is what the bond issue will cost the taxpayer: If his home is assessed at $2000, it will cost $5.60 per year; if his property is assessed at $5000, $14 per year—or a tax rate of 28 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. In return, his family's health is guarded and the value of his property is increased.

Never was a law more carefully written or subjected to more careful scrutiny than the one under which the bond issue funds would operate. After the county's distressing experience with the Ralph sewer law, it was made doubly sure that the new sewer legislation would resist all of the criticism to which the Ralph law was subject. The county can be confident that never was a public movement inaugurated under finer auspices than the one for a countywide sewer system.

We urge the citizens of University City and all other communities in the sewer district to grasp the best opportunity they ever had or ever will have to provide this necessary service by supporting the bond issue Sept. 25.

IDENTIFYING SIR BASIL.

Excepting only "The Man in the Iron Mask," nobody of large consequence has baffled European curiosity and concealed his identity with more consummate skill than Sir Basil Zaharoff. There has been something ghostly, as well as sinister, in his appearances and disappearances in the capitals of that distraught continent. Suspicion had finger-printed him a peddler pre-eminent of lethal weapons who harvested bumper crops of gold in the battlefields of the world. Yet there was always the element of doubt as to whether he actually existed in the flesh or were an apocryphal creature, say, of long-bow journalism.

We have met him now, thanks to the munitions inquiry, and, ignoring his proffered hand, have observed the amenities with a distant bow. Suspicion was right about the fellow's business, both as to the merchandise and the magnitude. But who he is and whence he came are evasively answered. Conjecture inclines to his Greek birth. Fact reveals that wherever he finds himself, he is importantly at home. He is a Knight in England, a Duke in Spain, a Grand Duke, possibly, in the Russia that was, everywhere a protean patrician, be-ribboned and be-medaled in ennobled profusion.

Yes, yes, but just who is he? Aping the immortal Sherlock's methodology, we hazard that Sir Basil is the elder brother of Mephistopheles—elder and a good deal slipperier.

IS DIALECT WORTH PRESERVING?

Lord Ponsonby, a lover of true British dialect, be it Lancashire or Cockney, fears the effect of radio and American talkies upon it. So much admired is the speech of British radio announcers that persons throughout the Kingdom "are trying to copy them, or are instructing their children to drop their Suffolk or Gloucestershire accent, or whatever it may be, and to imitate the gentlemen whom they hear with such rapture every evening telling them of the interesting news." American talkies are in another genre. "If people try to imitate that low, sonorous, metallic American talk," says Lord Ponsonby, "it will be nothing short of a catastrophe."

We fear his lordship, in attempting to preserve traditional forms of speech, is tilting a lance in a losing cause. Dialects are born of insularity. They rise and flourish in regions cut off from the remainder of the world. New forms of communication are making those regions fewer and fewer. Whether we like it or not, standardization of all sorts of human habits is proceeding apace, and there is no reason to think that speech will be exempt.

For that matter, is there anything inherently beautiful or worth preserving in dialect? To American ears, Cockney is as hideous as Lord Ponsonby finds speech in the American talkies. Much of the supposed raciness in British dialect arises from slovenliness and ignorance of the rules of grammar. That is also true in this country, where the English language is atrociously mutilated, with little gain on the score of distinctive utterance.

We should hate to live in a world where everyone talked with the studied precision of radio announcers, but the best of them are doing a good job of teaching people how to use the language gracefully and correctly. English, well and truly spoken, is more esthetically pleasing than any of its dialects.

Laughing Women

LAUGHING THEIR WAY: Women's Humor in America. By Mary Bensley Bruere and Mary Ritter Beard. (The Macmillan Co., New York City.)

SIXTY-THREE feminine humorists are represented in this delightful and valuable anthology, which covers a century of American life. Anthologizing is very often no more than a cheap and lazy means of exploiting the creative efforts of others, and most anthologies are no more than helter-skelter collections; but the purpose of the authors, in preparing "Laughing Their Way," and the finely conceived plan of the work, as well as the taste which determined the selections, have made the book a genuine contribution to American literary history.

Whether laughter be regarded as a "defense mechanism" set up against an unfamiliar situation that cannot be escaped, or as the result of a striking discrepancy between the expected and the actual, the authors had excellent reasons for beginning their anthology with the 1830s. That was a period of national expansion, as the authors point out, "when the American Republic was reaching out like some huge protozoan—extending itself over the Alleghenies and along the Gulf of Mexico; taking on railroads and crinolines; electing a President from that remote section of the continent, Tennessee; seizing on McGuffey's reader, an Ohio product, as fast as its pages could be pulled damp from the press. The Little Red Schoolhouse was developing into the Academy, and the Academy was growing into the College."

Such a period of social release into new lands is certain to result in a profound change of folkways. The old New England primness and propriety ceased to be binding upon the feminine spirit confronting new conditions, and women writers began to partake of the new mood of hilarity. "Democracy was on the march, joking as it advanced."

It was still deemed advisable, however, for writing ladies, especially those with facetious tendencies, to conceal their identities. The first woman humorist noted here is Caroline Matilda Kirkland, known to the magazine readers of 1835 as "Mrs. Mary Clavers." Living near the frontier village of Detroit, she made amusing copy of her uncouth neighbors until, her identity being divulged, she was obliged to leave the country. The brief sketch offered as a sample of her fun-making serves to show how astonishingly far we of Dorothy Parker's day are removed from the dominant taste of a century ago.

Probably no one now remembers "Mrs. Mary Clavers," but there must be many of those who have attained the fifties who can recall a time when "Widow Bedott Papers" was still read more or less. The "Widow Bedott," Frances Berry Whitcher in the smug decency of everyday existence, was a minister's wife, and, as such, extremely daring to be funny at all; but certainly nothing she ever wrote could bring a flush into the most modest of cheeks. Nevertheless, she lived to learn that it was then "a very serious thing to be a funny woman," as she remarked when the Rev. Mr. Whitcher was forced to resign his pastorate because of her writings.

A glance at Elize Leslie's "The Behaviour Book, a Manual for Ladies," published in 1853, shows that ladies were, as yet, very far from "emancipation." The book was not intended to be funny. Only time has made amusing the following extracts therefrom:

"The word 'stomach' should never be uttered at any table, or, indeed, anywhere else except to your physician or in private conversation with a female friend interested in your health. . . . When you see a person slip down on the ice, do not laugh at them. It is more feminine, on witnessing such a sight, to utter an involuntary scream."

With the agitation for human rights in general that foreran the Civil War, feminine humor became noticeably more daring, and the growth of the feminist movement resulted in a keener edge to feminine laughter, but woman's humor still went modestly clad from chin to heel as in Puritan days.

The Civil War was the cause of yet another great social release, and one may note the results thereof in the samples of feminine wit and humor with which the postbellum period of expansion is represented.

Step by step, up to the Great War, one may note the changing world-view of women in general by the characteristic examples of their fun-making that are offered. But the change during the two decades following the outbreak of the World War is overwhelmingly greater than during the previous 80 years—or a thousand, for that matter. The old society which before was merely adapting itself to an expanding world, begins to be seen to be in process of disintegration. The old moorings of femininity disappear, and a Dorothy Parker becomes possible.

Nevertheless there is, it seems, more genuine nobility of spirit in the final section than in all the rest of the book; for many of these laughing women are strong spirits indeed, and no longer are they trammeled by their sex. If, in some of the writers chosen to represent our day, it is merely the anarchic spirit on the rampage that chuckles and guffaws, in others it is the great Mother of the Race, wise with the ancient wisdom, who flings satiric laughter at the follies and cruelties of an inhumane society.

KING COBRA. By Mark Channing. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

FROM the mood of impending doom created with extraordinary skill in the first chapter, to the triumph of the lovers in the last, Mark Channing's highly romantic tale of adventure on the British Indian frontier moves at a brisk gallop that never wearies, and anyone who sometimes longs for what is commonly called "a rattling good yarn" need seek no further.

In addition to unusual imaginative power and story-telling ability, Channing knows the country and the people with which he deals, having served for many years as a soldier in India. No less an authority than Yeats-Brown of "Bengal Lancer" fame vouches for the author's broad knowledge of his subject matter.

"King Cobra" is the gigantic leader of a hill tribe who has long terrorized the frontier. When the tale opens, he has been captured by the British forces and is held by Sir John Lindsay, British Resident at Yanitan. Sir John has an aide, Maj. Colin Gray, V. C., and a beautiful daughter, Diana. During the first night of his imprisonment, the Cobra escapes, kills the Resident, and kidnaps Diana. Colin, very much in love with the girl, as a hero ought to be, sets out to rescue her. There is plenty of fighting, vividly described. Colin is captured and taken to a stronghold in the mountain wilderness where, according to the author's fantastic but none the less compelling plot, Prester John lived and ruled of old. Diana is there also, and the two meet. After many trials of their love and fortitude, including a fight between Colin and the Cobra, love conquers, and the faithful twain are wed.

It's a thriller, but a first-rater of its kind.

"SATAN'S PLAYGROUND" is a novel with a West African background, to be published this fall by Dodd, Mead & Co. Its author is Capt. Charles D. Woodyatt of the British Army, who served five years in the country he describes. Describing the remarkable weather of that remote region, Capt. Woodyatt says the average temperature is 104 during the dry season, when no rain falls. In the remaining half-year, the writer says, as much rain falls as the United States averages in 18 years.

A READER of this column has suggested that, as the autumn is drawing near and the returning vacationer is presumably about to begin a determined effort to live a bigger and a better life, it might be well to run a paragraph referring to those books that trusting friends lent for summer reading. It seems an excellent idea.

Often this writer himself has stood in a mournful mood before empty spaces on his book shelves and wished he knew the friends who were responsible for the same. There's a book called "By an Unknown Disciple," for instance, that is still in the possession of an unknown friend. It was a "golden book" and greatly prized—a first edition, too. But in this particular instance, there is the mitigating circumstance that the volume glows with holiness, something which the borrower certainly needs, at least as much as the bereaved and rightful owner! There is also the second volume of a rare philosophical work, and it has long been pining for its mate.

Almost any book-lover could make a considerable list of such minor atrocities committed by his friends. Have you, then, by any chance, virtually swiped a book from some devoted friend? Look about and see!

Note the pathetic aspect of such betrayals. We lent you those books because we loved you, wished to share our enlightenment with you—and thus it is you thank us! Can you wonder that we are sorry for ourselves?

When, after these glorious regenerating weeks in a great wild country, the present writer returns to his library, he is going to take a look himself!

Changes in Income Tax Law Explained for Taxpayers

mended for introducing definite provisions into this highly controversial field of income tax law, Section 24 is far from perfect. For example, it is silent in regard to the deduction of losses on sales or exchanges (a) between a taxpayer and his uncles, aunts, nephews, cousins, brothers-in-law, sisters-in-law, friends, employes, etc.; (b) between two corporations even though one owns all of the stock of the other; or (c) between an individual and a corporation where the individual owns all of the voting stock, provided that such stock is less than 50 per cent in value of the outstanding voting and non-voting stock. Moreover, the section expressly applies only to direct or indirect sales or exchanges between persons named; it contains no provision in respect of the situation where a taxpayer sells his stock to Mr. X, and a member of the taxpayer's family soon thereafter purchases substantially the same amount of stock from Mr. Y. No doubt the bureau will attempt to consider such a stransaction an indirect sale from the taxpayer to a member of his family. However, since ambiguities in taxing statutes are resolved in favor of the taxpayer, and since statutes are presumed to exclude matters somewhat similar to those which are expressly included, it is questionable whether the courts will uphold such a contention. Nevertheless, no prudent taxpayer should immediately take back property sold for the sole purchase of establishing a tax loss, or furnish funds to the buyer to permit him to pay the purchase price. Such acts are likely to cause serious inconvenience if not a fraud penalty and indictment.

Filing of Returns.

The new law makes no change in regard to the individuals who are required to file returns. They must be filed in the following cases: (1) If an individual has a net income of $1000 a year or over, and is single, or, if married, is not living with husband or wife; (2) if an individual has a net income of $2500 or over, and is married and living with husband or wife; and (3) if an individual has a gross income of $5000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income. Husband and wife, if living together, still have the option to report their incomes on two separate returns or on one joint return. This option is renewable each year, but cannot be changed as to a past year after the return for that year is filed. Ordinarily a married woman should file a separate return if she and her husband have a combined net income of more than $6500, for the surtax rates apply to everything over that amount of net income, while if separate returns are filed, the surtax rates may be applied to the income separately and not combined. Moreover, in many cases, it is possible also to receive a higher earned income credit where separate returns are filed. If either spouse has a net loss for the year, a joint return should be filed, so that the loss of one can be used to reduce the net income of the other. Returns are required in the cases mentioned even though no tax is due.

Publicity of Returns.

In order to further prevent income tax evasion, Congress passed Section 55. This section states that in the future all taxpayers—whether individuals, trusts, estates, partnerships or corporations—shall file not only the usual income tax return, but also a separate statement showing their names and addresses, gross incomes, total deductions, net incomes, total credits against net incomes for purposes of the normal tax and the tax payable. If such a statement is not filed with the return, the collector is directed to prepare it from information contained on the return, and to add $5 to the amount of tax payable. These statements will be made available for public inspection after March 15, 1935, in the offices of the local revenue collectors in such manner as the commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of Treasury, shall determine. The information may be used or published in any manner desired. If the commissioner exercises his discretion liberally, and the Government continues its policy of paying rewards to those who give evidence of violations of the revenue acts, this provision should be of assistance in preventing dishonesty. Moreover, it will facilitate the collection of state incomes taxes in some states.

Check on Salaries.

This attempt to prevent fraudulent returns is also aided by Section 148 (d) of the new revenue act. Briefly stated it requires taxable corporations, in their returns, to include a list of their officers and employes, and the respective amounts paid to them as salary, bonus, commission, or other compensation for personal services, if the aggregate amount paid to the individual is in excess of $15,000. This information must be submitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury. See also Sections 147 (disclosure by corporations of payment of interest, rent, wages, etc.); 148 (a) (disclosure by corporations of dividend payments); and 149 (disclosure by brokers of details of customers' stock market transactions).

Formerly, in order to ascertain gain or loss on the sale or exchange of property acquired by a gift after Dec. 31, 1920, the cost basis of the property to the donee was the cost basis of the donor, or of the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift. This rule has now been revised by Section 113 (a) (2) to provide that, for the purpose of determining loss, the donee shall use either (1) the cost basis of the donor, or of the last preceding owner of the property by whom it was not acquired by a gift, or (2) the fair market value of the property at the time of the gift—whichever is lower. The change was made to prevent the shifting of losses from one person to another. This section does not, however, make any change in the case where the donee sells the gift at a profit.

Section 113 also makes another change in regard to the cost basis of property. Subsection (a) (5) states that if the property is acquired under a will by bequest or devise, or by inheritance where there is no will, or by the decedent's estate from the decedent, the basis shall be the fair market value of such property "at the time of such acquisition." In adopting this provision Congress reverted to the wording of earlier revenue acts. It did so for two reasons, first, because the phrase "at the time of such acquisition" as contained in the Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921 was recently construed by the Supreme Court to mean "at the date of the death of the former owner of the property," (See Brewster vs. Gage, 280 U. S. 327); second, because the act of 1932 made possible a loss of revenue by permitting certain legatees to use as their cost basis the fair market value of the property on the date actually delivered to them by the executor or trustee. As the Brewster case is now, in effect, a part of the new law, attention should be called to the fact that while it directly involved only an outright general bequest of stock to a residuary legatee, the Court plainly stated that the cost basis of real estate received by unconditional devise, and of personal property received by an unconditional specific bequest, was also the fair market value as of date of death. Although the Supreme Court has not sanctioned the application of this rule except in the case mentioned above, the lower courts have insisted that the fair market value as of date of death be used in respect of vested testamentary gifts even though the receipt of the property by the heir is postponed pending the outcome of litigation, or during the intervention of a life estate granted to another, or during the existence of a testamentary trust. Similarly, such courts have determined that such a cost basis must be used by testamentary trustees if they sell the property. Of course, if the heir actually receives from the executors or trustees assets purchased by them, his cost is the sum they paid for such property. Likewise, it has been decided that the cost basis is the fair market value on the date of death if the heir takes a vested interest which is subject to be divested—as for example where a decedent leaves a remainder interest to his son if the son is alive at the termination of a trust, but to others if the son is not then living. On the other hand, if the heir's right to the property is contingent, according to the now prevailing view of the lower courts, his cost basis is the fair market value of the property on the day that the contingency happens and his interest becomes vested. Considerable difficulty is often experienced in deciding whether a gift is contingent or is vested subject to be divested. If possible, the courts construe it to be the latter. The value given to inherited property for purposes of Federal or State death transfer taxes is presumed to be its fair market value as of date of death for income tax purposes. Such value can be rebutted, however, by strong evidence. The law in force at the time the legatee, devisee, heir, executor or trustee sells the property determines what cost basis shall be assigned to it, and not the law which was in force at the time such person received possession or acquired title, or at the time the decedent died. If representatives of estates and trusts will familiarize themselves with these rules, and those set forth in Section 117, they can minimize income taxes by determining whether property received from the decedent should be sold or distributed to the heirs.

Gains and Losses.

Perhaps the most significant and far reaching change made by the Revenue Act of 1934 is in regard to the treatment of gains and losses from the sale or exchange of investment assets. Section 117 in part provides:

"(a) General Rule—In the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, only the following percentages of the gain or loss recognized upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be taken into account in computing net income:

"100 per centum if the capital asset has been held for not more than one year;

"80 per centum if the capital asset has been held for more than one year but not for more than two years;

"60 per centum if the capital asset has been held for more than two years but not for more than five years;

"40 per centum if the capital asset has been held for more than five years but not for more than 10 years;

"30 per centum if the capital asset has been held for more than 10 years.

"(b) Definition of Capital Assets—For the purposes of this title, 'capital assets' means property held by the taxpayer (whether or not connected with his trade or business), but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business."

Section 117 also establishes certain rules for determining the period during which property has been "held." Speaking generally these rules lengthen the period if the property was acquired (a) by an exchange in connection with a corporation reorganization, (b) by gift, where Section 113 requires the donee to use the cost basis of another person, or (c) in a transaction technically described by Section 118 as a "wash sale." However, these rules do not help the taxpayer to decide how long he has held inherited assets. A logical interpretation of the law would be that he has held them since the time they were "acquired" under Section 113 mentioned above, but court decisions will probably be necessary to clarify this point.

Records Required.

Because of the importance of determining the exact length of the holding period, taxpayers should at once make a complete record of the time they first acquired each particular certificate of stock, bond, note, or other capital asset; the manner of acquisition; and the cost basis thereof. Failure to do so may unnecessarily increase taxes. For example, a taxpayer may sell at a profit, and inadvertently deliver certificates held for less than one year (100 per cent of gain taken into account), when he could just as conveniently have sold and delivered certificates held for 11 years (30 per cent of gain taken into account). Conversely, he may sell at a loss, and inadvertently deliver certificates held for 11 years, instead of those held for less than one year. Moreover, if such a record is not prepared, he may find himself faced with Article 58, Regulation 77, which states:

"When shares of stock . . . are sold from lots purchased at different dates or at different prices and the identity of the lots cannot be determined, stocks sold shall be charged against the earliest purchases of such stock. . . ." While beneficial if gain is involved, this statutory presumption is detrimental if a loss is sustained.

Furthermore, Section 117 also contains the following:

"(d) Limitation on Capital Losses—Losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent of $2000 plus the gains from such sales or exchanges. . . .

"(e) Gains and Losses from Short Sales, etc.—For the purpose of this title—

"(1) gains or losses from short sales of property shall be considered as gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets; and

"(2) gains or losses attributable to the failure to exercise privileges or options to buy or sell property shall be considered as gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for one year or less.

"(f) Retirement of Bonds, Etc. — . . . amounts received by the holder upon the retirement of bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates or other evidences of indebtedness issued by any corporation (including those issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), with interest coupons or in registration form, shall be considered as amounts received in exchange therefor."

Some Examples.

The following examples may be of assistance in applying these provisions: (1) During the calendar year of 1934 Mr. A. has an ordinary net income (salary less business expenses, personal exemption, etc.) of $10,000. He sells stock held for six months at a profit of $1000, and a house held for three years at a profit of $5000. He also exchanges bonds held nine years at a loss of $20,000, of which 40 per cent, or $8000, can be taken into account under subsection (a). His net taxable income is $8000—$10,000 (ordinary net income), plus $1000 (100 per cent of profit on stock), plus $3000 (60 per cent profit on house), minus $4000 (part of $8000 recognizable loss on bonds equal to total capital gains), and minus $2000 (arbitrary loss allowance). (2) Mr. B. has an ordinary net income of $5000. He sells stock held four years at a loss of $4000, of which 60 per cent, or $2400, can be taken into account under subsection (a). He has no capital gains. His taxable net income is $3000—$5000 (ordinary net income), minus $2000 (arbitrary loss allowance where no offsetting capital gains). Neither Mr. A. nor Mr. B. can carry over to 1935 or subsequent years any part of the loss not used for 1934. (3) Mr. C. has an ordinary net income of $8000. He sells land held by him for 15 months at a profit of $5000. He has no capital losses. His taxable net income is $12,000—$8000 (ordinary net income), plus $4000 (80 per cent of profit on sale of land).

Section 117 of the 1934 law takes the place of Sections 23 (r-t) and 101 of the 1932 act—Section 23 limiting losses from the sale or exchange of securities held by individuals or corporations for less than two years to the amount of the gain from the sale of securities held for a like period; and Section 101 providing that where property held for more than two years is sold or exchanged, 12½ per cent of the gain or loss may be added to, or deducted from, the tax on the rest of the taxpayer's net income.

Because of its newness several provisions of Section 117 should be emphasized. Subsection (a), which contains the percentages, applies to all taxpayers (including individuals, partnerships, estates or trusts) except corporations. Moreover, it applies to all property, except that specifically excepted, whether it be real or personal, tangible or intangible, and regardless of how long it has been held. Furthermore, it applies whether such property was acquired by purchase, exchange, gift or inheritance. However, since it mentions only sales or exchanges, it does not prevent the deduction where there is no sale or exchange of 100 per cent of the loss sustained on the total worthlessness of stock, the abandonment of a business asset, or the total or partial uncollectibility of a bond, note or other debt. Under these circumstances a taxpayer should not attempt to establish a tax loss by selling his worthless stock, bonds or notes for a nominal consideration.

An Exception.

Section 115 (c), Revenue Act, 1934, makes an exception to these rules in cases where a stockholder has received liquidating dividends in excess of the cost basis of his stock. It states:

"Distributions in Liquidation—Amounts distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation shall be treated as in full payment in exchange for the stock, and amounts distributed in partial liquidation of a corporation shall be treated as in part or full payment in exchange for the stock . . . Despite the provisions of Section 117 (a), 100 per centum of the gain so recognized shall be taken into account in computing net income. . . ."

Such being the law, if a taxpayer who has owned stock for several years sees that he will sustain a large gain on liquidation because of the low cost basis of his stock, he should, prior to corporate action ordering the liquidating dividend, sell the stock for a fair price to another taxpayer. In this way the first taxpayer will have to take into account only a certain percentage of his gain, and the second taxpayer will be no worse off from a tax standpoint. Although such a transaction may be questioned by the bureau, it should be approved as a legitimate method of minimizing taxes. A taxpayer is not required to sit by idly twirling his thumbs until a tax liability alights on him. If he is warned of its approach, or if he sees it coming, he may seek such shelter as the law offers in an effort to escape or diminish its blow. Since nothing is said in Section 115 (c) about allowing stockholders to deduct 100 per cent of their loss on the liquidation of a corporation, only the percentages of loss specified in Section 117 (a) can be used.

Corporations.

Ordinary corporations are specifically excepted from the provisions of subsection (a) of Section 117. Consequently they cannot use its percentage provisions. But they are not excepted from any of the other parts of the section. As a result, where a corporation has losses from the sale or exchange of "capital assets," the total of its capital losses for its taxable year commencing after Dec. 31, 1933, are allowable in its return for such year only to the extent of $2000, plus the amount of its gains from sales or exchanges made during such year of any of its "capital assets." To illustrate: Assume that a corporation has taxable ordinary net income from its regular business of $50,000 for its calendar year of 1934, and in addition has capital gains of $12,000, and capital losses of $20,000. Under these circumstances its taxable net income for such year is $48,000, computed as follows: $50,000 plus $12,000, minus $12,000 (part of loss equal to amount of gain) and minus $2000 (arbitrary loss allowance). It gets no benefit in any year from the unallowed balance of $6000 of its 1934 capital losses.

According to some tax experts the short sale provision set forth in Section 117 (e) (1) offers an easy way of varying the percentage provisions of Section 117 (a).

This new method of dealing with gains and losses was adopted by Congress for the purpose of (1) stabilizing the revenue; (2) minimizing the unfair taxation of increases in value resulting from depreciation of the currency; (3) according more equitable treatment to small taxpayers whose taxes were not decreased by the former 12½ per cent capital gain and loss provision; (4) encouraging ordinary business sales which had previously been prevented by high surtaxes; and (5) conferring a benefit on all taxpayers by permitting all short or long term capital losses to be charged off against all short or long term capital gains. The necessity for the change is strikingly illustrated in the report of the sub-committee of the House Ways and Means Committee. It is there pointed out that Federal income tax receipts diminished from $2,842,000,000 in 1924 to $747,000,000 in 1933, and that this result was due largely to the then existing method of treating capital gains and losses. The new plan is a modification of the British system, under which such gains and losses are entirely disregarded.

Consolidated Returns.

In prior years affiliated groups of corporations (corporations connected by a 95 per cent stock ownership) have been permitted under certain circumstances to file a single consolidated income tax return on which was reported the aggregate detailed net income of all members of the group. This privilege was of considerable benefit to the companies involved, for on such return gains from inter-company transactions or dissolutions were disregarded, and the loss of one member of the group could be used to offset the profit of another. It was granted to prevent tax evasion by the shifting of gains and losses and was based on the theory that several corporations, which together constitute a single economic enterprise, should be taxed as one unit. However, by Section 141 of the 1934 act, Congress withdraws this privilege from all corporations except railroad companies. It justified its action on the ground that the former consolidated return provision had decreased the revenue in depression years.

This step was taken over the protest of the Treasury Department, which, in its recommendations to Congress, pointed out that the abolition of this privilege would not prevent the loss of one subsidiary from being absorbed by another, or by the parent corporation, for the following reasons: "Subsidiary corporations now showing loss in separate statements could arrange by inter-company contracts and by readjustment of accounting methods, to obtain a fair share of the profits of the affiliated group. There is no way to prevent the bulk of such contracts because the Treasury cannot hold that a contract which enables a company to make a profit is necessarily unfair or evasive. Moreover, full recognition of inter-company transactions would often result in deductible losses as well as taxable gains."

This change in the law should be carefully studied by all affiliated groups of corporations. If the existence of the group is to be continued, inter-company contracts should be revised at once so as to prevent unrecognizable losses. This should not be done, however, in such a way as to run afoul of the rule that transactions are not recognized if they are consummated for the sole purpose of avoiding taxes, if they cannot be justified by legitimate business reasons, and if they involve an abrupt and radical departure from the taxpayer's normal operating procedure. On the other hand, if the group is to be dissolved, attention should be paid to Sections 115 and 117. Moreover, if income is reported on the basis of a fiscal year which has not yet ended, the group should be dissolved before the close of such year, if, but only if, gain will result from liquidation. The 1932 act applies to such a transaction and does not recognize the gain. However, if there will be a loss, such action should be deferred until after the close of the year, for then the 1934 act can be invoked, and part or all of the loss taken into account.

Preventing Juggling.

Although affiliated groups can no longer file consolidated returns, it must not be thought that they will be entirely free to avoid taxes by juggling inter-company accounts. Section 45 of the new law gives the Commissioner wide powers to prevent such practice. It states:

"In any case of two or more organizations, trades or businesses (whether or not incorporated * * * and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the Commissioner is authorized to distribute * * gross income or deductions between or among such organizations, trades or businesses, if he determines that such distribution * * is necessary to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any such organizations, trades or businesses."

This section is substantially the same as, but somewhat broader than, Section 45, Revenue Act of 1932. Although seldom invoked during the period of consolidated returns, it will now assume greater importance. How effective it will be is doubtful, for its application is limited by the doctrine that any attempt to measure the tax on one person's income by reference to the income of another is contrary to due process of law. Income cannot be created by mere fiat of Congress or administrative officials.

Time Limits.

As a general rule the Commissioner now has three years, instead of two, after the taxpayer's return is filed, within which to assess additional taxes due for taxable years commencing after Dec. 31, 1933. If there is omitted from gross income an amount properly includable therein, which is in excess of 25 per cent of the amount of gross income stated on the return, the period is extended to five years. The reason behind this rule does not apply where income is disclosed on the return, but is claimed not to be taxable. If the taxpayer files no return, or files a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade the tax, additional taxes can be assessed at any time. A return filed before the last day prescribed by law is presumed to have been filed on the due date. (Sections 275 and 276).

Having granted the commissioner a longer period within which to assess additional taxes, the new law also extends the time within which the taxpayer may file a claim for credit or refund of tax overpayments paid for years commencing after Dec. 31, 1933. Under Section 322 such claims must be filed within three years—instead of two—after the return was filed, or within two years after the tax was paid, whichever period expires the later. This section also states that the amount of the credit or refund shall not exceed the part of the tax paid during the three years immediately preceding the filing of the claim and that if, on appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals from a deficiency assessment of the commissioner, the board finds that the taxpayer is entitled to a refund or credit, such refund or credit shall be granted only of that part of the overpayment which the board determines, as a part of its decision, was paid within three years before filing the claim or filing the appeal petition with the board, whichever is earlier. These provisions present a cogent argument against the taxpayer executing waivers of the statutory period for assessing deficiency taxes. Such waivers do not extend the time for filing claims for credit or refund.

Except where the taxpayer files no return, or files a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade, deficiency income taxes imposed by the 1932 and 1928 revenue acts must still be assessed within two years from the date when the return was actually filed. No limitation period which had already expired before May 10 of this year is revived or extended by the new law.

Penalties.

Infractions of the revenue laws are severely punished. A deficiency assessment is increased by 5 per cent if due to negligence or intentional disregard of the rules and regulations; and by 50 per cent if due to fraud with intent to evade the tax (Sec. 293). Willful failure to pay the tax, or to make a return, is penalized by a maximum fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for one year, or both. A willful attempt in any manner to evade or defeat the tax subjects one not only to the 50 per cent penalty, but also to a possible fine of $10,000, imprisonment for five years, or both (Sec. 145).

GERMANS LOST MARNE BEFORE WAR STARTED

working for; to outflank the Germans' right (western) or marching flank.

Here was where Von Schlieffen's plan and the one actually carried out were fatally divergent for the Germans.

Under Von Schlieffen's plan there would have been enough troops on the German right or marching flank to insure two things. First, no gap would have been opened between Von Kluck and Von Bulow thus facing the first with the terrible dilemma which confronted him the first days of September.

What Might Have Happened.

Second, Von Kluck would have had enough troops to attack Paris from the north and at the same time to have others cross the Seine to the west of Paris. Thus he would not only have outflanked the French and British once more but would have gotten in their rear as well.

This would have compelled Joffre's left to retreat eastward towards the French right along the eastern fortified zone of the French eastern frontier, producing the Sedan which Von Schlieffen had planned.

Whether it would have ultimately worked out this way or whether Joffre would have extricated his army and successfully retreated farther south no man can say.

However, from the day the German right (Western) flank was too weak to continue outflanking Joffre's left (Western) flank, the tables had begun to turn against a decisive German victory which would put France "out of the picture" for the rest of the Great War.

Why was not the German right flank kept strong enough as Von Schlieffen planned?

The first day of 1906 Von Schlieffen was succeeded by Von Moltke as chief of staff. Von Moltke did not want the position. It is said that the Kaiser overruled his objections because he wanted the

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Labor day failed to bring impetus to the financial markets this week, as business, labor and financial uncertainties continued to befog the autumn outlook.

The United States Treasury financing, to be announced Monday, held the attention of Wall street. The decline of recent weeks in Treasury obligations was not wholly checked, but the market felt that the Treasury would accomplish its $1,725,000,000 refunding operation at moderately attractive terms.

Efforts to dress up the high-grade bond market were attributed to Treasury sources. The decline in the dollar in terms of gold currencies, and the outflow of the metal was checked by sudden selling of French francs by agents which usually act for the Treasury's stabilization fund. And the Government guaranteed obligations—the Home Owners' Loan and the Federal Farm Mortgage issues—were bolstered up by a ruling permitting banks to lump them with direct obligations of the Government in their statements.

Opinion was divided in the financial district at the end of the week as to whether the Treasury would restrict its new offering to fairly short-term obligations, such as three to five year notes, or whether it might try some bonds, or perhaps about eight-year maturity. The shorter term obligations, it was said, could be most readily sold, but some experts thought a coupon rate of a trifle over 3 per cent would undoubtedly make a longer term offer sufficiently attractive, despite the recent resurrection of the inflation bogey.

Gold, Silver Stock Prices Off.

A distinct desire to down the inflation talk was seen in the selling of French francs, which lifted the dollar back above the gold export point, and in the evident cessation during the past week or two of purchases of silver for the Treasury in the London market. Uneasiness over inflation, however, stems not wholly from monetary measures, but from indications that heavy relief and recovery-priming Government expenditures will be continued for an indefinite period. However, some authorities assert that this expenditure can go on for some time before becoming a real inflation threat.

A notable development in the stock market was a wide break in gold and silver stocks. How much "sound money" signs may have had to do with that, and how much it may have represented reduced large earnings estimates, for some of the companies, or even liquidation of pools in advance of the anti-manipulation provisions of the securities and exchange act, taking effect Oct. 1, was not evident. In any case, the Stock Exchange launched an investigation of a wide break in the shares of U. S. Smelting, leading silver issue.

Wheat was the only one of the principal markets to show much vitality. Futures at Chicago rallied about 3 to 4 cents to the best prices since mid-August. Corn and cotton were narrowly changed for the week. The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 shares receded 1.9 points to 70.6, and of 60 corporate bonds, .07 to 83.4.

Quiet Week-End Trade.

Stocks settled a little lower at week-end session in a routine market.

Speculation marked time all around pending the important Maine election on Monday and announcement over the week-end of the Treasury's financing plans. The textile strike and business trends were given secondary consideration in the market discussion of events.

United States Government bonds slipped a bit, while the financial district tried to guess the terms of the forthcoming Treasury offering. Otherwise the investment market reflected much the same waiting attitude evident in stocks and commodities. The dollar, too, pursued a quiet and steady course in foreign exchange dealings.

Small losses overshadowed minor gains at the finish of share dealings. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks sagged three-tenths of a point to 70.6.

Turnover in the two-hour session was only 211,400 shares. American Can, American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, du Pont, U. S. Steel and other important shares moved narrowly, closing with minor changes up and down.

Some Stock Movements.

Gold and silver shares straightened out into a steady course after their sharp declines earlier in the week. U. S. Smelting & Refining, which had dropped from a top at 141 to within a fraction of 119, closed a trifle higher after moving in a range of less than two points. Alaska Juneau recovered ⅝ of a point. American Sugar, Continental Can, Louisville & Nashville and Union Carbide lost 1 to 2 points.

New York City Traction shares alone distinguished themselves for strength. They were stimulated by reports of additional unification moves. Manhattan Guaranteed jumped 5½ points, Interborough shares 1½ and B. M. T. more than a point.

The cotton market here closed before the Government published its monthly crop estimate, showing a small increase. Futures ended 10 cents higher to 25 cents a bale lower. Cereals were heavy, corn and wheat closing fractionally lower.

General Motors' August report showed sales to consumers in the United States totaling 86,258 units, compared with 101,243 in July and 86,372 in August, 1933. World sales to dealers amounted to 109,278 against 134,324 in July and 97,614 in August, 1933. Cram's reports estimated automobile production this week had increased 5580 to 32,588 units on a recovery from the pre-Labor day curtailment. That compared with 43,121 in the same week last year.

Wheat closed ⅜ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel lower and corn was off ½ to ⅝c. Oats were down ⅛c to up ⅜c. Rye sagged 1⅛ to 1⅜c and barley was unchanged to up 1 cent. At Winnipeg wheat ended unchanged to ¼ of a cent a bushel easier. Cotton finished 10 cents higher to 25 cents a bale lower.

Sterling firmed ¼ of a cent at $5.00¼, and the French franc was unchanged at 6.68 cents. Belgian belgas, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs advanced .01 of a cent each to 23.78 cents, 68.62 cents and 33.08 cents, respectively. German marks were .01 of a cent better at 40.20 cents and Canadian dollars improved 7-32 of a cent at 103.09⅜ cents.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES BEFORE CROP REPORT; LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Trading in cotton today was attributed largely to evening up accounts in preparation for the Government crop report which was issued right after the close. Prices held generally steady until near the close, when they reacted under liquidation with December selling off from 13.35 to 13.27 and closing at that figure. The general market closed barely steady net two points higher to five points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of four to 11 points and although there was some short selling trade buying absorbed the offerings on comparatively moderate reactions and there was very little Southern selling in evidence.

Pressure increased toward the close, however, and Southern selling increased. October declined from 13.22 to 13.14 and May from 13.53 to 13.43, and last prices were at or within a point of the lowest for the day.

The Government report placing the indicated condition of the crop as of Sept. 1 at 53.8 and the indicated total production at 9,252,000 bales, was about 200,000 bales above the average expectation of New York Cotton Exchange members as revealed by the canvass of last Thursday, and compared with last month's indication of 9,195,000 bales.

As trading here ended before the report made its appearance, there was no market reaction to the showing, but the opinion was expressed by local brokers that the increase in the estimate might cause technical readjustments when business was resumed next week. Reports reaching the trade here from Chicago said the market there had reopened at declines of about 25 to 32 points. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearances at the end of the week was estimated at 49,476 bales against 100,488 last year.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Some lead smelters reduced quotations by $1 per ton late in the week, apparently to attract demand, but other sellers who had booked fair orders recently held prices unchanged. Demand was mostly for nearby needs, as consumers were not inclined to place additional October business, pending clarification of the general business outlook.

Zinc also became available at concessions owing to continued indifferent demand, but some smelters maintained prices on a belief that reported mine curtailment would result in a firm ore situation. Because of light steel operations and consequent poor business from galvanizers, the lower levels failed to attract interest. Statistics for August reflected an increase in smelters' stocks owing to decreased shipments.

While foreign copper prices eased to a discount of 2 cents under the unchanged basis of 9 cents a pound for Blue Eagle electrolytic, the domestic market remained in a dull condition. The lower prices available in Eruope were said to have attracted buying from practically all foreign consumers but Germany.

The lowest prices for tin since early summer were registered last week as the market declined in sympathy with the action of London. At the same time there was little or no consumer buying to bolster the market as tin plate operations remained at the relatively low figure of 40 per cent of capacity and those in the grade saw little prospect for any immediate improvement.

Antimony was unchanged with business light. Some uncertainty was said to exist with reference to the price situation in China.

With steel ingot production at a shade under 20 per cent of capacity, the trade saw no prospects for marked change, as consumers held off, seasonal declines occurred in automobile buying, and railroad orders were completed. Hopes for any improvement were based largely on prospective large public projects.

Although finished steel and iron ore prices were unchanged, uneasiness over the situation was said to have been reflected by the decline in scrap.

WHEAT, AFTER ADVANCE, TURNS DOWNWARD WITH COTTON

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Jarred by a sudden break in the cotton market, lower prices for wheat and corn became the rule late today, reversing an earlier upward trend.

Profit-taking sales incident to a week of almost continuous gains, did much to help ease wheat values down at the last. The fall of cotton prices followed issuance of Government figures showing a yield of cotton in excess of trade expectation.

Wheat closed unsettled, ¼ @ ⅜ under yesterday's finish, December new $1.07⅛ @ 1.07⅜; corn ⅜ @ ⅝ off, December new 79¾ @ 79⅞; oats at ⅜c decline to ⅛c advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents loss to 5 cents gain.

Before the tumble of cotton quotations disturbed traders, wheat had ascended to fresh high price levels for the current movement. The principal immediate stimulus for wheat market upturns came from indications of a broadening of European demand for Canadian wheat. It was asserted that European takings from Canada yesterday was about 1,000,000 bushels and this week's aggregate substantially larger than was the case last week.

New skyrocketing of barley to a fresh high price record for the season contributed impetus to the temporary upward swing of wheat. Barley showed an overnight rise of 3 cents a bushel, following a jump of 5 cents yesterday, the extreme limit allowed in any one session of the exchange. Furthermore, December barley today went to a premium over rye. Unusual scarcity of speculative offerings of barley was the chief reason assigned, but the greater part of the barley advance disappeared when wheat values reacted in the late dealings.

Corn and oats took their cue mostly from the action of wheat and from rainy weather over the corn belt. A big cut in corn production figures was expected to be officially reported Monday, but appeared to have been discounted in advance.

Provisions, although steadied by grain strength, turned weaker afterward in sympathy with cotton.

U. S. ISSUES FEATURE QUIET BOND TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The bond market was quiet but somewhat dispirited today and prices generally pointed lower throughout the brief session.

Transfers totaled $6,890,000, par value, with United States Government securities accounting for about $4,220,000 of this aggregate. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues declined two-tenths of a point at 83.4. On the week this average was off seven-tenths of a point.

As in recent previous sessions, corporation bonds were neglected for the Federal section. Aside from scattered loans, however, price changes were rather narrow and meaningless.

The Governments were somewhat reactionary on the eve of the Treasury's announcement Monday of the terms of its September-October financing. Dealers and traders were still uncertain as to just how Washington would approach the forthcoming operations involving more than $1,700,000,000.

Home owners' loan and Federal farm mortgage bonds displayed some resistance, but these ended with declines of 6-32s to 12-32s of a point. Losses among the Treasuries ranged from 1-32d to 10-32s. The called Liberty Fourth 4¼s managed to hold a gain of 1.32d.

In the corporate groups, Pressed Steel car 5s lost 4 points at 41 and Otis Steel 6s dropped 2 at 60. Namm & Son 6s, on the other hand, rallied 2½ points to 76, United Drug 5s were up 2 at 83 and Republic Steel 5½s gained 1¼ at 95. Some loans of Burlington, Cleveland Union Terminal, New Haven and Southern Railway were down about a point each.

Several German obligations recovered a point or so. Bonds of Argentina and Finland were up as much. Japanese loans steadied.

This was considered a small decline in view of the fact that there was nearly a 4-point drop in operations of the steel mills of the country which stood at 22.9 per cent for the month compared with 26.7 per cent in July. U. S. Steel usually operates several points below the average for the country as a whole.

SATURDAY'S CURB TRADE IS SMALLEST IN YEARS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Transfers on the Curb Exchange today dwindled to 34,000 shares, which was one of the smallest Saturday totals in years. Price changes were narrow with slight recessions predominating.

Many of the more important issues were slow to open if they appeared on the tape at all. Quotations were mixed from the start and the mild irregularity prevailed throughout the abbreviated session.

Swift & Co. and Swift International displayed some improvement. Lake Shore moved a bit higher but Newmont and New Jersey Zinc were easier. Other metals, including Wright Hargreaves and Bunker Hill & Sullivan, were about steady.

Changes, New Features Scheduled on KSD

ADELE RONSON

"THE GIBSON FAMILY," radio musical comedy written by Courtney Ryley Cooper and Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz, Broadway composers, will have its premiere on KSD at 7:30 next Saturday night. Statements from NBC headquarters say that this series has been written and designed in an attempt to create a new form of broadcasting art. It has been widely publicised through musicians and theatricals and literary men and women of prominence. Don Voorhees will have general charge of the programs, and his orchestra will be used. Lois Bennett, soprano, and Conrad Thibault, baritone of Capt. Henry's Show Boat, will sing the leading roles of Sally Gibson and Jack Hamilton, the dude ranch owner. Loretta and Jack Clemons will play the juvenile "leads." Adele Ronson and John McGovern will handle the speaking parts for Miss Bennett and Thibault in much the same manner as singers and actors are used for roles on the Show Boat programs. Emmett Whitman, noted Negro actor, will play the family servant, "Awful."

KSD'S "One Man Family" series, which has been shifted to 4 o'clock Saturdays, has just been awarded a medal for "distinguished service to radio" by a radio magazine. It was the first series originating on the West Coast to be thus honored. In "One Man's Family" broadcasts, J. Anthony Smythe plays "Henry Barbour"; Billy Page, "Jack Barbour"; Barton Yarborough, "Clifford," and Kathleen Wilson, "Claudia."

J. A. SMYTHE.

Hal Kemp's orchestra is billed on KSD'S Hall of Fame period at 8 o'clock tonight.

Having concluded his 40-month radio contract, Al Jolson has signed off the Paul Whiteman program Thursday nights. He is expected to turn to movie making.

Annette Hanshaw has ended her cruise on KSD's Show Boat Thursday nights, it is reported. She has signed a contract for a series with Glen Gray's orchestra and Walter O'Keefe that will open Oct. 2 on the CBS chain. She has been on the Show Boat program since it started two years (101 performances) ago.

COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Networks News, Studio Gossip.

KATE SMITH

KATE SMITH is to be in complete charge of the first of those projected programs which the CBS chain is designing to better its daytime schedule. The feature will be called "Kate Smith's Matinee," and will run an hour, from 1 to 2 on Wednesday afternoons, starting this week. In addition to officiating as master of ceremonies, Kate will produce the show and select the entertainers.

Sue Read, singing actress, and John Evans, a Canadian tenor, will be the soloists new to American listeners presented by Roxy on his opening program at 6 o'clock next Saturday evening on the CBS net and KMOX. Viola Philo, one of Roxy's old soprano stars, will be a "guest." Another feature will be a new quartet. There is much interest in Roxy's new series because of his purported plans to attempt a novel "air pictures" method of broadcasting.

Ralph Kirbery, the "Dream Singer," and Harold Levey's orchestra will begin a new Treasure Chest Sunday series at 12 noon today on the WEAF net. WLW, WMAQ, WHO and WDAF are among stations listed.

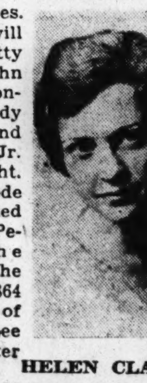
Connie Boswell and the Boswell Sisters trio have been engaged for the first 13 weeks of Bing Crosby's series, which is set to begin Sept. 18 on the CBS chain and be broadcast at 7 o'clock Tuesdays.

Gina Vanna, operatic soprano, and Emery Darcy, baritone, are being built up in support of Tony Wons in his House on the Side of the Road programs at 2:30 Sundays on the WEAF net, and WSM and at 3:30 Sundays on WMAQ, WLW and WOC.



HELEN CLAIRE

ROSES AND DRUMS will return to the air at 3 o'clock today, but on the WJZ net and KWK instead of the CBS chain. As before, the dramas will deal with Civil War episodes. Helen Claire will again play Betty Graham, and John Griggs will continue as Randy Claynore and Reed Brown Jr. as Gordon Wright. Today's episode will be entitled "Guns Before Petersburg." The time will be the summer of 1864 with the armies of Grant and Lee locked in a bitter struggle.

The Musical Memories program, starring Josef Koestner's orchestra and Edgar Guest, will shift to 5:30 Tuesdays, an hour and a half earlier than now, starting Sept. 18.

name Von Moltke there in the army list. The great Von Moltke who defeated France in the decisive campaign of a few weeks in 1870 was the uncle of Von Schlieffen's successor.

Von Moltke made changes in Von Schlieffen's plan. There resulted in the right or marching flank of the German army not being kept as proportionally greater than the center and left as was the case in the original plan.

Strategist's Last Warning.

Von Schlieffen knew it and, while in retirement, did his best to prevent any change. In 1913 when he died at the age of 80 his last words murmured to his son-in-law, Gen. von Hahnke, were: "It must come to a fight. Only make the right wing strong."

Von Moltke, however, leaned towards a victory in the territory made famous by his uncle's campaign of 1870, that is, in the Verdun-Metz-Nancy region. Lieutenant-General William Groener says: "Late . . . Aug. 21, 1914, Gen. von Moltke . . . in the Hotel Metropole, Coblentz . . . told them (the officers of the general staff) of the 'great victory' the Sixth and Seventh Armies would win in Lothringen. It was to be his victory, the one he had developed . . . With this operation is was evident Moltke intended to emulate his great uncle, however . . . the old Schlieffen . . . stood against him." (The testament of Count Schlieffen by Gen. William Groener.)

From 1910 Gen. Joffre steadily worked preparing himself and the French army in so far as was in his power for the coming war with Germany. Through his own promotion and increased powers given him through reorganization of the French high command he ultimately was practically in full control.

To his foresight, studiousness, knowledge and determination great progress was made in French preparations. He was unable to get the howitzer field artillery and other equipment he wanted. The time was too short for him to inculcate the lower grades of the officers' corps with the tactical doctine he believed essential. He admits frankly in his memoirs that he underestimated the number of troops Germany would immediately put in to the field because he was not prepared for the number of divisions and army corps they organized from their reservists.

Joffre's Opportunity.

As was true on the German side, he organized and carried out war games not only indoors but on the ground with nothing but officers, similar to those being carried out today in New Jersey by our Chief of Staff, Gen. MacArthur. He even succeeded in getting information concerning some of the German war games in which they were trying out their plans for the invasion of France and changed his plans and war games accordingly.

From the time the great retreat began he struggled to outflank the German right. When the opportunity came through Von Kluck moving eastward to close the gap between his army and that of Von Bulow, then Joffre struck.

Gen. Gallieni, the military governor of Paris, foresaw and argued for the same movement. Manoury's VIth French Army carried it out. The British and Fifth French armies struck in their turn. Next on the right was the IXth French Army, which already had distinguished itself under its recently promoted commander, the fiery Foch.

The retreat once started spread as far as Verdun. From this point of the German advance and retreat south to the Swiss border the French and German armies remained facing each other in practically the same position.

There were, as is true in any big event, other things than those given above which contributed to the German defeat. However, the more the evidence accumulates, the more plainly it is seen that they were of minor importance. This is particularly true of such events as the transportation of a small part of Manoury's army by Parisian taxicabs, which so struck the popular imagination.

The battle was fought by approximately 120,000 British and 1,000,000 French on the Allied side and 1,000,000 Germans.

Radio Trade Notes

Singer to Introduce Philco High Fidelity Set.

IN a special broadcast recital by Lucrezia Bori Wednesday night, Sept. 12, the new Philco "high fidelity" receiver will be publicly introduced. Her first song will be broadcast in the usual manner. Then she will sing it in a glass enclosed, soundproof studio, and it will be reproduced by the Philco set, and her voice as it comes from the receiver's speaker will be picked up by microphones and then broadcast over chain stations.

A committee of notables, headed by Clarence H. Mackay, chairman of the board of the New York Philharmonic Society, as well as leaders in music, education, art and science, will be present at the ceremonies.

This "high fidelity" set is designed to reproduce naturally over a wider range of tones and overtones than thus far has been possible with commercial receivers. It will cover from 50 to 7500 cycles, virtually the entire musical range required for naturalness. This is made possible by new type of R. F. amplifiers, the selectivity of which can be broadened for high quality reception or narrowed for selectivity, and improvements in the set's Class A audio amplifier, as well as designing of a new speaker, with sound beam diffuser and sound diffusing cabinet, to send sounds to every part of a room. The Philco inclined sounding board also is used. The diffuser consists of an assembly of vanes, with angles and dimensions calculated on a scientific basis.

U. S. CAN CONSUME ALL IT PRODUCES EXPERTS NOW SAY

wants of the people at the peak of prosperity in 1929 fully or reasonably well satisfied? The data we have assembled regarding incomes and consumptive expenditures of American families at various income levels furnish an adequate basis for such an examination.'

The economists proceed to make an interesting calculation as to what would happen if the six groups of families having less than $5000 a year income in 1929 each had their incomes stepped up to the group ahead. In other words, if the 5,800,000 families with an average income of $650 were given an average income of $1150, the next group, almost the same in size, would be stepped up to $1994, and so on until the highest average income—that of the sixth group—would be about $5330.

If Consumption Increased.

"This moderate stepping up of family incomes," the authors say, "would result in an increase of consumptive expenditures amounting to about $15,000,000,000, or nearly 25 per cent above the 1929 level. If this were accompanied by corresponding changes in the incomes of unattached individuals the total increase in consumptive expenditures would amount to nearly $19,000,000,000.

"It is possible to show the effect of these assumed changes in family incomes on family expendtures for major types of consumptive goods and services. The increases are, in round numbers, as follows: Food and non-alcoholic beverages, $3,100,000,000, or 18 per cent; shelter and home maintenance, $4,700,000,000, or 26 per cent; attire and adornment, $2,200,000,000, or 27 per cent, and other consumers' goods and services, $5,400,000,000, or 29 per cent."

Apparently thinking that some persons might consider $5000 too high for 1,232,000 families in the sixth group, the authors state that if all the families in the country were assured an income of $2500—70 per cent of the families had less than this amount in 1929—the increase in consumption would amount to about $16,000,000,000.

The authors contend that if the lower income levels were raised to a point sufficient to permit all persons to have at least a modest standard of living, working hours could be shortened. This probably will arouse as much controversy as any of the six fundamental conclusions in the final chapter of the book proper.

Summarys.

Following is a summary of the arguments of the economists:

The actual production of 1929 was accomplished on an industrial work week which averaged 51 hours. The potential 1929 production of $97,000,000,000 (about a 20 per cent increase over the actual $81,000,000,000 calculated in "America's Capacity to Produce") was also predicated on the assumption of a 51-hour average work week. If we were to shorten the working week to 30 hours, as has frequently been suggested, with a view to absorbing all complete or partial unemployment, production would be greatly reduced. Assuming no change in man-hour efficiency, the reduction from the 1929 basis would be two-fifths, giving a production of $58,000,000,000, of which about $51,000,000,000 would be competitive goods. If we assume that improved techniques and methods have increased man-hour productivity since 1929 by as much as 25 per cent, the production on a 30-hour week basis (for the same population as in 1929) would be approximately $63,000,000,000. Under these conditions, consumption would have to be reduced below the 1929 level by some 10 per cent, since consumption in 1929 was about $70,000,000,000. On a 40-hour week, with a 25 per cent increase in efficiency, and the same level of employment as in 1929, production would be approximately the same as in 1929.

Answering the Technocrats.

The economists, however, doubt that there has been a general increase of 25 per cent in man-hour efficiency since 1929, although conceding that great strides have been made in this direction in many manufacturing industries. They make the point that in many industries the most skilled workmen have been retained and as the less efficient workers are absorbed the average unit cost will tend to increase.

Answering the technocrats, the economists say that practical and financial difficulties bar the way to the immediate attainment of the technocratic economic goal. "Looking forward," they say, "One may to be sure, paint a picture of productive potentialities that would seem to make the realization of vastly higher living standards easy of attainment. By assuming that all of our existing industrial plant and equipment, except the very latest models, could be summarily scrapped—without cost to anybody—and be replaced forthwith by the best that is known to science, one can conjure up—as some imaginative people have done—vast productive possibilities. But we are confronted unfortunately by stern realities: old plant and equipment cannot be scrapped without financial costs; nor can the latest improvements be installed instantaneously on a universal scale. The railroad industry affords perhaps one of the best examples of what might be accomplished theoretically; but the realization of the productive economies there possible is held back alike by the immediate financial costs involved, by conflicting interests of the various railroad groups and—not least—by the opposition, incorporated in legislation, of railroad laborers who fear the effects of such improvements upon the demand for their services.

Gradualness.

"In the light of such practical considerations as these the production dreams of engineers have to be liberally discounted. The most that can be hoped for is a gradual increase in productive output, as existing plant and equipment can be replaced by more efficient types and as new methods can be progressively introduced. It is helpful, in considering this problem, to recall that during the great era of technological advancement between 1900 and 1929, per capita production in the United States increased by less than 40 per cent.

"In due course we can expect a much larger production from the same expenditure of human energy than has yet been possible. But for the immediate future we cannot count on production taking care of itself if the work week is materially reduced. In any event, we are desirous of raising the standard of living substantially above the level hitherto realized—not merely restoring it to the unsatisfactory level then prevailing."

As stated at the beginning of this article, the authors do not reveal their proposals for raising the standard of living substantially above the present level. In the two volumes at hand they have presented a great deal of interesting—and in many respects startling and shocking—statistical material. the next volume, scheduled to come out within the next few months, they promise to consider "the relation of our pecuniary or financial system to the fundamental hypothesis in which we are interested." The fourth volume should be of the greatest interest. The authors promise "a possible prescription for the acceleration of the nation's economic progrers.' A great many people, now suffering from the depression, will be eager to hear what remedy a group of disinterested economists offer.

PARISH ACQUIRES THREE ACRES IN JENNINGS HEIGHTS

Will Be Site for Eventual Erection of Church, School and Parish House.

50 FEET WEST OF CITY LIMITS

Merchants Interested in Five-Story Building at Broadway and Franklin Avenue.

Three acres of land, fronting 158 feet on the south side of Garesche avenue and 158 feet on Lalite avenue, with a depth of 450 feet between the two streets, in St. Louise de Marilla Parish, recently established, in Jennings Heights, has been purchased by Father M. J. Clarke, pastor. The tract is situated 50 feet west of the City Limits.

The title was taken in the name of Archbishop J. J. Glennon. The purchase will provide a site for the eventual erection of a church, school and parish house. A home for the nuns teaching in the school is also under consideration.

The land was owned by the Jennings Heights Land and Improvement Co., of which E. A. B. Garesche, attorney, is president. The purchase price was not disclosed.

According to the records, the tract acquired was part of 3000 acres purchased 100 years ago by the late James Jennings, great-grandfather of Garesche, for $45,000, or at the rate of $15 an acre. The entire amount was paid in gold.

The tract included what is now known as Jennings Heights, West Walnut Park, West Walnut Manor and Belle Mead Manor. Pending the erection of the proposed group of buildings, a temporary frame church will be erected to accommodate 300 members.

Option Expires.

Attention is focused on the five-story building, occupying approximately a quarter of a block at the southwest corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue, as adapted for a variety of purposes.

The commodious corner structure has been under negotiation several times during the last year. Speculating on its possibilities, a group of business men in this part of the city, headed by Wayne Stedelin, president of Stedelin Bros., commission concern at 824 North Fourth street, recently acquired an option to purchase the property. Negotiations are expected to be renewed for the option, which expired last Monday.

The property is owned by Famous & Barr Dry Goods Co., which absorbed the old Famous Department Store, which occupied the building.

Now Used as Warehouse.

The building is now used by the Famous & Barr Co. as a warehouse. Comprising 24,275 square feet, including the basement, it has a frontage of 185 feet on Broadway and 135 feet on Franklin. It was designed for a department store when this part of the city was a flourishing center in construction, it is available for both wholesale and retail purposes.

In 1924, Wayne Stedelin purchased the property at the northeast corner of Franklin avenue and Sixth street, 85x131 feet, owned by the Scott estate. The reported consideration was $700 a foot for the Franklin avenue frontage of 81 feet, the record price for Franklin avenue property. In addition, Stedelin paid the commission incident to the sale, which was handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., now a part of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co. Stedelin made the purchase predicated on the benefits to accrue, as a result of the widening of Franklin avenue, then of contracted width, as provided for in the $87,000,000 bond issue. Stedelin has been a consistent purchaser of property in this part of the city.

Fraternal Building.

The Fraternal Building at the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Franklin avenue, recently was acquired by J. A. Lasky, proprietor of the Franklin Furniture Co., from the John E. Scudder estate. Designed primarily for fraternal orders, the five-story structure has a frontage of 51 feet on Franklin with a depth of 120 feet. The purchase price reported was nominal contrasted with the original cost of the building, which was built when downtown Franklin avenue was in its heyday. The building is situated in the block east of the Globe-Democrat building at the northwest corner of Twelfth street and Franklin avenue.

Niehaus Building Purchased.

The southwest corner of Eighteenth and Papin street, owned by Maude Niehaus, was purchased last week by Walter J. Hazlett. The improvements consist of a three-story building consisting of stores and rooms. The site has a frontage of 117 feet on Eighteenth with a depth of 25 feet on Papin. N. S. Woods handled the transaction.

STUDY OF FAMILIES DOUBLING UP IN CITIES

Household Mergers Found to be Nearly as Numerous as Total Vacancies.

A cumulative study of the housing of urban Americans shows the number of families "doubled up" in household mergers in 63 United States cities early this year was almost as large as the total of vacant residences, the National Association of Real Estate Boards has announced.

Basing its figures on findings of the Federal real property inventory, the association pointed out the number of "doubled up" families in these cities, 162,770, contrasted with 177,197 existing vacant residential units, whether fit or unfit for use.

The inventory was taken in the early months of 1934, and the study was based on figures released to date by the Department of Commerce.

"Undoubling" Also "Under Way."

Reports to the association, it was said, indicated that "undoubling" was under way rapidly in a number of cities during the spring. "While undoubling appears, in part at least, checked in more recent 'hesitation' months," the association said, "existing doubling is both a quantitatively important factor and a highly mobile factor of potential new space demand, conditioned principally upon employment."

In the 63 cities for which figures have been released, the study shows the existence of 1,701,350 families. Of these, 162,770 were found to be doubled up with other families, an average of 9.5 per cent of the total.

"The 63 cities have a combined population of 6,804,620 persons," the association pointed out. "If they are a fair sampling of the urban population of the United States, totaling 69,954,623, then at the time the inventory was taken there would appear to have been in the nation as a whole approximately 1,649,000 doubled families."

Where Doubling Exceeds Vacancies.

In 23 of these cities the number of doubled families exceeded the total number of vacant residential units, fit and unfit, it was said. Cities so reported included Atlanta, Ga.; Austin, Tex.; Baton Rouge, La.; Binghamton, N. Y.; Burlington, Vt.; Columbia, S. C.; Dallas Tex.; Des Moines, Ia.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Lansing, Mich.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Oklahoma City, Ok.; Richmond, Va.; St. Paul, Minn.; Shreveport, La.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Topeka, Kan.; Trenton, N. J., and Wheeling, W. Va.

Detail of the inventory shows percentage of doubled families was as high as 16 per cent in Atlanta and Jacksonville and 21 per cent at Wheeling.

With a total of 2,312,260 residential units in the 63 cities, and 177,197 vacant units, the average vacancy was found to be 7.6 per cent.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN—IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT

WE WILL PUT ON SEVEN ADDITIONAL MEN WHO NEED EMPLOYMENT AND WHO WISH TO TRY TO SEE IF THEY CAN DO THIS WORK. WE WILL TRAIN SUCH MEN FREE, FURNISH FULL EQUIPMENT WITH NO DEPOSIT REQUIRED. THERE IS NO EXPENSE; BUT THOSE WHO CAN QUALIFY CAN MAKE $150.00 TO $400.00 OR MORE THE FIRST MONTH.

While you cannot make money here unless you earn it, many men who never previously even thought they could do work of this kind have found it to be just the opportunity they sought for years and are making more money then they ever previously dreamed of making. We have men making up to $750.00 a month. Others $600.00, $500.00, $400.00 and $300.00. On the other hand, many fail to fill the requirements and cannot do the work.

Experience in sales work is not necessary. Some of our best men never sold anything before. Men who made as high as $50.00 their first day in the field knew nothing about selling other than what they had learned the previous two days from our sales instructor. This man is himself an experienced salesman who first went into the field and made a splendid record selling this product. He is a man of earnest and sympathetic understanding with the problems of the beginner. He can and does awake and activate the latent abilities of men to do creative work. Many men who least suspect it possess very great and very valuable sales ability. It is not unusual for a beginer to make $20.00 to $40.00 his first few days here.

Perhaps he can help you to make a success of this work. It is worth a try. The training is free. The opportunity is open. If you can do it, you make real money and have assurance of its permanence. If you cannot do it, no harm done. The experience will have been valuable. Last year was the biggest year in our business, nationally and locally: and this year is following the same program of progress.

This is a new product by an established institution—the largest of its kind in the world, and the product already has a greater sale than anything in the world ever offered for the same service. It is now being introduced in this market. This is a genuine present opportunity for cash, and also for future progress in the certain growth of the business. It is for men who have foresight—men who are in earnest about seeking a sound opportunity to get in and work ahead.

Our requirements of you are that you be honest, of good reputation, active, alert, willing to learn and do the following things:

To learn (as taught) how to make a clear and convincing explanation of why you have called to see your prospect.

To learn (as taught) how to show the product so it will reveal the absolute need for it and the necessity of buying it.

To learn (as taught) how to persuade some one to do that which positively ought to be done.

To be honest in your own thought, so that you are entitled to confidence.

To work hard every day to make a genuine success in return for the privilege of a genuine opportunity in a permanent position with good people who will deeply interest themselves in helping you to get started and to get along.

This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good, substantial positions. Please do not apply for these positions unless you feel you can meet these requirements. Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15, at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive Sts.

GETALONG, A LONG SHOT, WINS INAUGURAL AT FAIRMOUNT

Babe Ruth Names Six American Leaguers on All-Star Team

DIZZY DEAN GETS PLACE ON TWO-MAN MOUND STAFF

Post-Dispatch Ruth Contest Winners to Be Named Sept. 16

PRIZE winners in the Post-Dispatch's Babe Ruth All-America team contest will be announced in all editions of the Post-Dispatch, Sunday, Sept. 16.

The clerical work of handling the many thousands of letters and analyzing the written analysis that accompanied each, is still under way.

Five judges this week will complete their task of choosing the prize winners.

The number of votes received this year exceeded any total in the history of the Post-Dispatch's competition, more than 16,000 letters having been received. Cash prizes totaling $700 will reward the contestants.

By Babe Ruth,

Chairman, All-America Board of Baseball.

(Registered United States Patent Office.)

Once again it is my privilege to name an All-America baseball team. This one, the thirteenth in a series which has gone on without interruption since 1922, will no doubt meet with some disapproval at one position or another, as all such selections are bound to cause. But I believe fans and writers will agree generally on most of the choices.

In offering this 1934 all-star team, I take the opportunity to express my thanks to the newspapers, the fans and the players for the prominence which they have accorded my selections in other years. The papers give these teams much space, fans write to me about them, and players discuss with me the merits of this or that player for a place on the team. For all of this I am grateful..

An all-star team of this type cannot be chosen on averages alone. Other conditions must be considered. Players must be rated on natural ability and general value to their teams, and also according to the particular conditions which may affect one team and not another. The glamour which goes naturally with pennant-winning and teams fighting for a flag, must be eliminated in some instances to get at true values.

In connection with these All-America teams I like to compare my choices each year with those of the members of the Baseball Writers Association. In 1932 a total of 191 members voted in October and the 10 players selected by the writers were the same 10 I had picked in August of that year. In 1933, a total of 186 members voted and they named nine of the 10 I had selected. We differed only on one pitcher. I chose Earl Whitehill and they named Alvin Crowder. So I will await anxiously the baseball writers' vote of this year, to be polled at world series time.

A. L. Gets Six Places.

This 1934 team of mine includes six American Leaguers and four from the National League. This same ratio prevailed in 1932 and in 1933. As the above paragraph indicates, the writers vindicated my choices each year as far as leagues were concerned, so I trust I will not be regarded as prejudiced in favor of the American League. In making these selections, I forget all about leagues. In 1929, I named six National Leaguers and four from the American. In 1925, 1927 and 1928 the leagues were even, five players from each. It would be a simple matter to reach such a balance every year, but that would not always be in line with merit.

The fact that one circuit may lead in numbers at any time is no argument in favor of league strength. These are choices of individual players, not teams.

As in other years the All-America Board of Baseball submits its choice of a team in conjunction with mine. This board consists of 10 sports editors, or baseball writers, from as many major league cities, and Christy Walsh, who organized the board. Each of these 11 members sends me his choice of a team. I compare these choices with my own, weigh the possibilities of all the players named, and then make the final selections.

Last year we agreed on nine of

WRAY'S COLUMN

Expanding Navin Field.

FRANK NAVIN, acting in the interest of his frenzied public, and perhaps in his own, will expand the seating capacity of Navin Field by 17,000 one dollar seats. That will increase the park's total capacity to 47,000 and world series receipts (if three games are played there) by $51,000.

Very little of that will come back to the club owner after all cuts and slices have been made in the melon. Since the stands are to be taken down after the series, their construction comes from a desire on the part of Mr. Navin to give as many of his addicts as possible a look at the big show, which, if it takes place as now expected, will be the first Detroit has seen in a quarter of a century.

Lest uneasy National Leaguers fear there will acrue some advantage to the Tiger club over the Giants, as a result of building these bleachers on the playing field, provisions have been so that Mr. Greenberg and other left field apple knockers among the Tigers will not have an advantage.

The new stands, in left field, will encroach on the playing area of the park twenty feet, reducing the left-field distance from the plate to 319 feet. This is only two feet less than the right field fence at Sportsman's Park.

While it is within easy hoisting distance for a good right-hand hitter, it actually is FORTY FEET farther from home plate than the same fence in the Polo Grounds at the nearest point where a home run may be hit. As chicken wire screens will build up the front wall of the new Detroit bleacher, left field hitters at Navin Field will find the going anything but soft.

The change will necessitate no

TWO DEANS MAY HURL FOR CARDS IN PHILADELPHIA

By J. Roy Stockton

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Frank Frisch and his Cardinals were here this evening, mourning over the bad weather that prevented them from bolstering their position in the pennant race at the expense of the Brooklyn Dodgers today. Casey Stengel's team has been in a bad slump and the Redbirds were expecting Paul Dean and Bill Walker to make it four straight over the Flatbush comedians, but the rain which started to fall Thursday evening was still falling intermittently and the double-header had to be called off.

There is a chance that the two games will be played Sept. 21. The Cardinals leave Boston the night of Sept. 20 and are due to play in Cincinnati Sept. 22. If the Dodgers can arrange to move up their game of Sept. 21, the Redbirds will stop at Brooklyn on their way to the land of the Redlegs and play off the two contests. Bob Quinn, general manager of the Dodgers, said today that he would set the necessary machinery in motion.

Two Deans May Pitch.

Frisch said he planned to start Paul Dean in the first game at Baker Bowl tomorrow afternoon and that he also might give Dizzy a chance in the twin bill, which, by the way, will be the first Sunday double-header in the city's major league history. Dizzy still has his heart set on 30 victories and his spirit has been so excellent that Frisch wants to give him every possible break. However, if Paul wins the first game, Frank may decide that Dizzy would do better to take another day's rest, in which case Bill Walker will be the St. Louis hurler.

If both the Deans pitch and win the family will reach the 40-mark, an objective that seemed rather re-

Browns Fail to Hit In Pinches and Lose To Senators, 5 to 1

By James M. Gould.

Washington's Senators, that game and crippled crew, have departed from St. Louis to be seen here no more until next year. They limped out of town last night and left the Browns frowning by taking the final game of the series of four, yesterday afternoon 5 to 1, thus earning an even break in the set.

However, on the season's play, the Browns held a big lead with 14 victories in the 22 inter-club contests.

Browns Outhit Senators.

Yesterday's game was strange in some respects. The Senators made their five runs on seven hits, while the best the Brownies could do was a single tally on eight safeties. All the Washington scoring—and hitting—was done in the first four innings, while Irving Hadley was operating.

In the last five frames, Hadley pitching three of them and Bill McAfee two, only one Washington player reached first. That was Schulte on a fumble by Strange in the sixth.

In the ninth with two down, Strange singled and Grover Hartley, the Browns' 46-year-old catcher, went in for his first time at bat since being restored from the coaching ranks to the active player list. The veteran promptly slammed a double to right center, but to no avail as Clift ended the game with a fly to Schulte.

Burke Scatters Hits.

Burke, opposing Hadley, and McAfee, kept the Browns' hits well scattered and thoroughly deserved the victory which brought the Senators up to within one and one-half games of the fifth-place Browns.

Two errors—by Grube and Hadley—helped the Senators in their scoring. They counted single runs in the first, second and fourth and slipped over two in the third. The Browns' lone run was manufactured out of Bejma's double and Pepper's single in the third.

Between the runs presented to

Breadon Might Sell Cards If He Got Right Price

SAM BREADON is not trying to sell the Cardinals, and has received no offers, he told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

This was in answer to a story from New York yesterday, in which a man close to major league baseball, who asked that his identity be withheld, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Breadon was prepared to sell his holdings in the Cardinals and the "chain-store" system if he could get a satisfactory buyer.

The informant said it was understood that Branch Rickey had even gone so far as to make trips to New York and Indianapolis to confer with prospective purchasers.

While stating that the club was "not on the market," Breadon added that "there never was a time that I wouldn't sell at the right price."

Jockey Cooper Suspended for Rest Of Fairmount Meet

R. G. COOPER, one of the leading riders at Fairmount in several past meetings, was suspended for the duration of the meeting yesterday when the stewards found him guilty of grabbing the equipment of a rival horse in the running of the fifth and feature race.

Cooper had the mount on Heavy Sugar, which finished second to Getalong.

The stewards who assessed the drastic penalty are J. T. Ireland and C. W. Hay, the latter a representative of the Illinois Racing Commission.

By Dent McSkimming.

Fairmount's opening day crowd of 8000 was treated to something of a surprise party. From the moment that Lepidus won the first race on the card and paid $30.46, the program was one of upsets with a climax in the feature event, the Inaugural Handicap, in which Getalong gave the favorites a good beating and refunded $37.18.

Rapidly changing track conditions were largely responsible for the unexpected turn of events. As the horses went to the post in the first race the running strip was so muddy as to be termed "heavy." A bright sun and steady breeze soon stiffened it up to "slow," and then toward the close of the day it was "good." It was not definitely suited to mudders nor was it the kind of a track that fast sprinters like. It was made to order for upsets. And they happened.

The betting public put most of its money on Captain Joy and Altmark, coupled; and Heavy Sugar and Goober. Getalong had finished second to Heavy Sugar when the latter set a track record at Thistle Down but this fact didn't seem to make much of an impression on the crowd. As expected, Just High set the pace for the first quarter, but every horse in the field was close to the leader as they reached the turn.

Getalong Slips Through Rail.

Jockey L. Machado had Getalong running easily in fourth position, but had no chance to advance because the three leaders, Captain Joy, Heavy Sugar and Just High formed a solid line. But, as they swung into the home stretch, the three, battling heads apart, pulled away from the rail, ever so little. There was scarcely racing room in that alley, but Machado took the long chance and tried to go to the front. Getalong was equal to the demand and snatched the lead. The others, however, were still full of run and the struggle through the stretch was a thriller. Getalong, under Machado's expert handling, scored a smashing victory by three-quarters of a length over Heavy Sugar with Captain Joy third.

Lepidus Pays $30.46.

In winning the opening race, Lepidus, under J. W. Frye, displayed remarkable courage and staying qualities. For, shortly after they turned into the home stretch, Keltner, working forward on the outside, came abreast and appeared to be moving faster than Lepidus. The latter, however, refused to stop. It was a thrilling stretch run, Lepidus finishing first by the margin of a head. The favorite, Squire Bob, beat only one horse in the field of eight. The winner refunded $30.46.

As the horses paraded past the grandstand on the way to the post in the second race, Jockey F. A. Smith was thrown from the saddle by Miss Mascara. The shout of awe that came from the crowd had a distinctly feminine tone. It was the women who gasped for fear the little rider would be injured.

Smith dusted himself off and climbed back into the saddle, apparently unhurt, but when he dismounted after bringing Miss Mascara home a winner, it was noticed that he was limping badly. His skill as a rider was largely responsible for Miss Mascara's victory. He had her away fast, stole a slight the 10 players. This year I differ on three players, just as I did in 1931. Following is the makeup of the All-America Board:

JACK MALANEY of the Boston Post.

WARREN BROWN of the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

TOM SWOPE of the Cincinnati Post.

ED BANG of the Cleveland News.

BUD SHAVER of the Detroit Times.

W. S. FARNSWORTH of the New York Evening Journal.

JAMES ISAMINGER of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

HARRY KECK of the Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph.

J. E. WRAY of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CHRISTY WALSH of New York.

I agreed with the board on catcher, first and second baseman, and one pitcher. My outfield choices are the three with highest votes in the poll—Ott with nine votes in two positions, Simmons with seven in two positions, and Paul Waner with six in two positions. Gehringer was the unanimous choice of the 11 board members and myself. We differed at shortstop, third base, and on one of the two pitchers. In the paragraphs devoted to each position, I offer my reasons for the selection of Arky Vaughan, Bill Werber and Jerome Dean over the players who received more votes from the board.

Five of the 10 players on the 1934 team have been chosen in other years. This is the seventh appearance of Al Simmons, tying the high mark which had been held only by Rogers Hornsby. Mickey Cochrane is named for the sixth time, and Lou Gehrig for the fourth year, while Paul Waner and Charley Gehringer become three-time choices. The newcomers are Lefty Gomez, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, Mel Ott, Arky Vaughan, and Bill Werber.

Chuck Klein and Joe Cronin are missing after four consecutive years. Pie Traynor after three years, and Bill Dickey after two successive selections. It is interesting to note that Simmons and Gehringer are the only 1933 selections to repeat, and that no player of the 1932 team is to be found in this year's group. However, two or more players from each of the five teams chosen from 1927 to 1931, inclusive, are named in the 1934 group.

Gehrig's Hitting Power Gives Him Edge Over Terry in First Base Race

Now for the various positions and the reasons why I have chosen the players:

FIRST BASE.

Lou Gehrig is named as the outstanding first baseman of the year, and I am sure that there will be few to disagree with this selection. In the vote by the All-America Board, Lou received nine of the 11 votes, with the two remaining ballots being cast for Manager Bill Terry of the Giants. Jimmy Foxx, the choice in 1932 and 1933, has not performed quite up to his standard for these two years, and Gehrig has outshone the heavy hitter of the Mackmen in allround play.

Gehrig is picked over Terry because of his greater hitting power. The Giants' manager is generally accorded an edge over Gehrig in the defensive side of the game, but in sheer hitting power Lou excels. He has had almost twice as many hits for extra bases as Terry has made, and he has been the leader of all major league players in driving runs home. I have always felt, too, that Gehrig's fielding has not been properly appreciated, because so much stress has been laid on his hitting.

Besides the first basemen mentioned above, Jim Collins, Sam Leslie, Hank Greenberg and Hal Trosky have distinguished themselves.

SECOND BASE.

There was "no contest" for the distinction of being the best second baseman of the year. The honor goes to Charley Gehringer of the Detroit Tigers, with plenty to spare. Recognized for the past few years as one of the outstanding players of the game, he has proved himself even more valuable this season. His sterling play has been a big factor in the Tigers' pennant drive. Charley is enjoying his greatest season as a hitter since he joined the Tigers and his fielding, as usual, has been brilliant.

Odell Hale of the Indians, Buddy Myer of the Senators, Frank Frisch of the Cardinals, and Billy Herman of the Cubs, are also rated highly on their season's performances.

SHORTSTOP.

My choice as the most valuable shortstop of the year is Arky Vaughan of the Pittsburgh Pirates. For the past four seasons the honor has been won by Joe Cronin of the Washington Senators, who still rates high among the players at this position. But the Washington manager has had one of those mediocre batting seasons, such as crop up in the lives of the best of players. Cronin's fielding, it seemed to me, was steadier than it had been in the past—at least it was in the games against the Yankees—but his drop in hitting cost him first honors.

Vaughan has hit .325 for the season, and from what I know about him as a defensive player, he gets the call for allround play. Bill Knickerbocker of the Cleveland Indians and Bill Rogell of the Detroit Tigers have starred at this position, as have Travis Jackson of the Giants and Dick Bartell of the Phillies. Jackson has made a marvelous comeback and he has again proved himself to be an outstanding shortstop. But he has hit about 40 points below the mark of Vaughan.

THIRD BASE.

Third base play in the two major leagues this season has shown some highly capable performers. New players have come to the fore at this position during the past two or three seasons, particularly in the American League, where only Willie Kamm remains as a reminder of the third basemen of a few years ago. In the National League the older players are holding on to better advantage.

Among the youngest players who have risen to stardom I regard Bill Werber of the Boston Red Sox as the best all-round performer among the 1934 third basemen, and I give him the place of honor because of his speed. As the best base runner in the two major leagues this season, he carries a value possessed by no other third baseman. His speed not only puts him in position to score runs which less capable runners would not be in position to score, but his presence on the bases lessens the effectiveness of any opposing pitcher.

Owen of Detroit received a higher vote from the newspaper jury which makes a selection each year in conjunction with mine. I readily agree that Owen has come along this year as one of the new stars of our league—a grand fielder and good hitter as well. But Werber has performed as well defensively against our club as any third baseman I have seen this year, and he, too, has been one of the outstanding hitters of the year. Add, then, the base running ability which none of his rivals can show, and he gets the call. Frank Higgins is another of the younger stars at third base, and Cecil Travis of the Senators is a capable hitter whose fielding will improve with experience. Stripp and Traynor have done the best work of the National League third basemen. Traynor was my choice for third base in each of the last three years.

LEFT FIELD.

An old familiar figure bobs up as left fielder. It is Al Simmons who had been a member of the outfield trio six times from 1927 to 1933, inclusive, missing only the 1932 team when Lefty O'Doul received the call. Occupants of left field have been particularly notable in high-class performances this year, with Heinie Manush, Goose Goslin, Roy and Bob Johnson, Ethan Allen, Joe Moore, Joe Medwick and Chuck Klein among the players whose work stood out. Klein's hitting has been far below his previous high standard, but he has done well despite this apparent dropping off.

I figured out the work of the various left fielders and the choice finally narrowed down to two—Simmons and Manush. On the play for the early part of the season, Manush excelled the White Sox outfielder, but during the latter part, Simmons has come along fast and has overcome that early advantage. I rate Simmons over Manush chiefly because of his superior throwing ability. Heinie puts more spirit into his play than Al does, but the Washington star lacks the physical capabilities, and also the driving power of the Chicagoan.

CENTER FIELD.

An outstanding player of several seasons past, though he never before had been a member of one of these teams, is the selection for center field. My choice is Melvin Ott, who qualified for this position when he played numerous games in center field during the first Western trip of the Giants this year and also for a time after they came back to the Polo Grounds. Ott is a right fielder generally, and a great one, as well as a grand hitter. During the past four years the superlative performance of Chuck Klein crowded Ott off the all-star team.

Ott would be a powerful candidate for the right field berth this season, but his work in center field permits the shift which works out to the best advantage in bringing the three leading outfielders of the year together.

RIGHT FIELD.

Paul Waner, a choice for the right field berth in 1927 and 1928, is back again after a lapse of six years. The Pittsburgh veteran and Ott were clearly the outstanding right fielders of the season. Next to these two I would rate Babe Herman of the Cubs, Pete Fox of the Tigers and Johnny Moore of the Phillies. Waner's powerful hitting entitles him to the honor over all except Ott, whom I rate on a par with the Pittsburgher or perhaps a trifle ahead in this year's play. These two and Simmons strike me as the best performers among the 1934 outfielders and they comprise the logical trio for the places on the All-America team.

Right fielders have not been as prominent this season as have the center fielders, or left fielders. But both Paul Waner and Ott have stood out brilliantly.

Rowe a Great Pitcher, but Dean's Work Entitles Him to Place on Team

CATCHING.

Back in 1925, I first selected Mickey Cochrane as the outstanding catcher of the year. Then for two seasons Mickey was in eclipse, but he came back in 1928 and from that time to the close of the 1931 season he led the field. During the seasons of 1932 and 1933, Cochrane was displaced by Bill Dickey of the Yankees, who enjoyed two brilliant campaigns. But this year Mickey is back again. And I am sure that there will be few who will rise to dispute the choice. Not only has his catching been up to his previous high standard, but he has been batting to a .324 average.

Managing a team has not interfered with the sterling work of the dynamic backstop, as many of us believed it would. It merely helped to add to his greatness by proving that he could do more things well than he has done before, and that he could bear a heavier burden without weakening.

Bill Dickey and Rick Ferrell were the others who vied with Cochrane for the distinction of being the best catchers in the American League, and Cochrane was without question the best of this trio. Hartnett and Lombardi caught well and were the best hitters among the National League's regular receivers, while Wilson and Mancuso also did grand work behind the bat. Lopez also enjoyed a good season. But none of these could match the allround performance of the Detroit leader.

PITCHERS.

And now for the selections which will cause more controversy, I believe than any others on this All-America team. It concerns the two pitchers. It would be a simple matter to choose three pitchers this year, and it would be easy to explain that every team should have at least three. But the board's ruling requires the naming of two so I will stick to it. If I had to name three I would select Lefty Gomez, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean and Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe.

With only two to name my choices are Gomez and Dean.

Why haven't I picked Rowe?

Not because I haven't a high regard for the pitching ability of this 22-year-old Detroit youngster. One has only to swing against him to know what a great pitcher he is. It wouldn't surprise me if Rowe goes on to become one of the greatest pitchers baseball ever knew, capable of ranking with the best of all time.

But on 1934 performances, I believe Gomez rates first, and a close analysis of the figures up to Sept. 1, when I had to make my selections, indicates that Dean had done just a little more than Rowe. Not a great deal, to be sure, but enough to make me feel that the Cardinal star is entitled to the honors.

First of all I'll explain my choice of Gomez. He has 24 victories to his credit, against four defeats. One defeat was a 1—0 game on May 30, when Earl Whitehill held the Yankees to one hit. His second defeat was a 4—1 setback by Cleveland on June 22, during which game the Indians got no more than two hits in any inning. His third defeat was the result of a long hit on July 18 when Gomez pitched only a part of the ninth inning against the Indians. The White Sox handed Gomez his fourth defeat last Friday. Lefty won seven games in a row, lost one, won two and then lost his third decision. He had 10 straight to his credit when stopped by the White Sox.

So much for Gomez as top pitcher of the year.

Why Dean Was Given Place.

Rowe's work has been more sensational and spectacular than Dean's, to be sure. But the Schoolboy profited because his winnings were bunched in a long spectacular streak. Up to June 15 Rowe had pitched only four victories for the Tigers, in a season starting April 17. That's almost two months!

Up to now, Dean has taken part in more games than Rowe; he has pitched more innings than the Detroit star, and he leads in complete games and shutouts, while issuing fewer bases on balls. Rowe excels by a slight margin in strikeouts per nine innings, also in hit allowance. Dean has more victories to his credit than Rowe. He has starred for the Cardinals all season, and he has been particularly successful against the Giants, the team the Cards had to fight for a pennant. Another consideration in Dean's favor was that the Cardinals rank some distance below the Tigers in hitting, and by a great margin in run making. Dean naturally did not have the hitting support that a team like Detroit would give him toward winning games.

Hence my choice is Dean over Rowe, while still conceding that the Schoolboy is one of the great pitchers of recent years.

Other prominent pitchers have been Carl Hubbell, Tex Carleton, Curt Davis, Van Mungo, Charley Ruffing, and Tom Bridges. But Gomez, Dean and Rowe have done better than any of these.

There you are, ladies and gentlemen of the baseball public—including my sand lot friends! And now a new thought comes to me — I would like to know your opinion regarding this year's selection. Write me care All-America Board of Baseball, 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. Davis

They Come and Go.

FULL soon the educated toe
Will make the sporting page
And pitching feats of Schoolboy Rowe
No more will be the rage.

But every sport must have its day
On diamond, grid or track;
Each in its turn must blaze away
Then gracefully fall back.

Same Old Rabbit.

Both Heydler and Harridge, presidents of their respective leagues, aver that there has been no change in the ball since the season started. Indicating that the rabbit is simply a state of mind.

Anyhow, if the ball hasn't been de-rabbited. we have the satisfaction of knowing that it has been debunked.

What to Do!

The man on the sandbox says the movies have you in a run-up. You take the kiddies to see a picture that has been pronounced okay and then get slapped in the face by a lot of previews of coming attractions showing the worst features of each. How come?

A crystal gazer says Detroit will clinch the pennant on Sept. 20.

Nice gazing, Swami! Now take another squint and tell us when they will clinch the w. s.

Crystal gazing is all right as far as it goes, but the trouble is the game is played with baseballs instead of glass balls.

Louis Von Weise looked into the crystal not long ago and said: "It looks like first division!" Then the smoke got in his eyes and everything went black.

However, the Browns may finish fifth this year and next year they will only have to move up one notch to gain a place among the first four.

Mr. Rowe, Meet Mr. Hubbell.

WHICH indicates that Schoolboy Rowe
Is talking through his straw chapeau.
He may be right but after all
The Schoolboy doesn't know it all,
For there's a certain guy named Hubbell
Whose middle monaker is Trouble.

Silence Is Golden.

In spite of the passing of the silent movies and the fabulous salaries of the talkie stars, Charlie Chaplin is still the richest actor in Hollywood. Indicating that money talks if Charlie doesn't.

Of course, Charley doesn't spend much for clothes. He has worn the same suit, shoes, hat and cane for years. He ought to have money.

and signed on with "Doc" Kearns. Enzo says he wants to earn his own way and he thinks that the "Doc" is the guy who can show him the way.

Never let it be said that "Doc" doesn't know the ropes inside and out. He invented the word "We" before Col. Charles Lindbergh was ever heard of.

Our old friend Phil Todt, now playing first base for St. Paul, has equaled the American Association record of 50 straight games without an error and is still going, unless he makes one before this is printed. Indicating that Todt is very much alive.

FIGHT AND OTHER SPORTS EVENTS DELAYED BY RAIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—A tropical storm roaring up out of the southeast, today handed knockout blows to a world's title boxing bout, the East-West polo matches, the men's national tennis championships, major league baseball and a host of other small and large sports events scheduled for the Eastern area.

Promoters of the Barney Ross-Jimmy McLarnin 15-round welterweight championship fight, twice previously postponed for 24-hour stretches, took no more chances on the present weather and put the fight over a full week, until next Saturday, Sept. 15.

The first of the East-West polo matches scheduled for the Meadowbrook Club on Long Island, was set back until next Wednesday, with the second match to be played Saturday and the third, if necessary, on a date to be set later. International Field looked like a lake today.

The men's tennis championships at Forest Hills, already three days behind schedule, were moved back another 24 hours. The final is now scheduled, weather permitting, for Wednesday.

The major league baseball games rained out were wiped permanently from the schedule unless it should happen that the National League pennant race narrows down to a point where they might decide the winner, in which case they would be played. In this category were the St. Louis-Brooklyn doubleheader and the final game of the series between the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs, both washed out.

The only sports rugged enough to withstand the attack of Old Man Weather were golf, horse and dog racing. The fields were cut down even there but the programs went on.

Normandy, Maplewood And University City Strongest in County

University City, Normandy and Maplewood are the three schools which are most likely to be leading the league when the 1934 St. Louis County League football season is over. This conclusion is drawn from the reports of the coaches after the first week of practice, which ended last Friday. This pre-season estimate is based on the veterans returning to the schools and the new players that have reported for practice.

One new coach and four assistant coaches will be at county schools this season. The new head coach is Ben Douglas, former Grinnell College star, and a member of the Brooklyn Dodgers' professional football team last year, who will take over the coaching job at Maplewood High School.

All-America End to Coach.

Assisting Douglas will be Paul Moss, Purdue's All-America end in 1931 and 1932. Moss also played professional football last season, being with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Orville E. Boekemeier, end on Missouri University's team the past two seasons, will aid in coaching the team at the high school from which he graduated, St. Charles.

George Kappelman, Warrensburg Teachers' College graduate, will assist Bob Geddes in directing the Ritenour team.

James R. Cretcher, Albion College, will assist at Clayton.

University City has tied for or won the County League title five out of the six years that Coach Clarence A. "Stub" Muhl has been directing the team. Last year it was the only high school in this district that was undefeated or untied, although it tied for the County League title with Normandy and Kirkwood when it had to forfeit a game due to the use of an eligible player.

Muhl Has 12 Letter Men.

Twelve letter men return to make this season's prospects the best that Coach Muhl has ever had. Backfield men, headed by All-County Quarterback Dick Yore, are speedy and good ball carriers, but a passer and punter is needed to make the backfield function effectively.

One side of the line must be replaced, as a guard, tackle and end are lacking.

With this promising material, the University City Indians face a difficult schedule, for they must play four important contests in succession.

Beginning with the intersectional game against Tuscaloosa, Ala., on Oct. 27, the Indians face Kirkwood, Normandy and Maplewood on successive week-ends. This means that Muhl must keep his men "keyed up" for four successive games. However, Muhl has met almost every situation that has come up before in County League football and it may be that, using his plentiful reserves, he may win all four of these games.

Normandy probably will have the heaviest team in the league, as a large squad of unusually heavy boys has reported, among them being eight letter men. From the letter men and prospects out, a team averaging 170 pounds per man could be put on the field.

Harold Tracy, one of the best halfbacks in the County League last year, will be the key man of the offense this season, and may call signals. Tracy is co-captain of the team.

An All-County guard, Ed Scannell; a fine big tackle, Normand Meyers, and two good ends will be the start of Normandy's line. Mel Aussieker, end last year, and co-captain of this year's team, will be shifted to a backfield position.

Two Schools Have Night Games.

Normandy will join St. Charles this year in presenting night football to county high school followers, four games and one practice contest being scheduled for the Vikings' field at night. Normandy will play the longest season of any of the county schools, starting with a practice contest against Ben Blewett, Sept. 15, at night, and ending with Wellston on Thanksgiving morning. Ten games are on its schedule.

At Maplewood, two new coaches will direct this year's squad, with Douglas taking over the head coaching duties, and Moss coaching the line.

Douglas plans to use a punt formation, with plenty of passes and trick plays. Eight letter men are in the group of 150 players that have reported. This large number of boys is due to the fact that Maplewood is going to have ABC teams playing. About 50 of the squad belong to the varsity team.

Moss is delighted with the prospects for his line this season, saying that his linesmen are going to be plenty "tough" for opponents. Moss is drilling the linemen on fundamentals and a well-coached team probably will take the field when Maplewood plays its first game under the floodlights at C. B. C.'s field on Sept. 21.

Star Backs Return to Kirkwood.

Kirkwood has an All-County player returning in Ben Peeples, halfback. Peeples, John Loveridge and Bob Johnson, halfbacks, and Fred Krienkamp, guard, are the only letter men at Kirkwood, and a small squad of 35 has turned out for the team. But this squad, while small, contains many good prospects, including Bill Heffelfinger, a splendid passer and line plunger; Louis Wasson and Bud Wallach, two likely looking guards, and Harvey Cox and Bob Van Patten, centers.

Kirkwood has been consistent in finishing high in County League standings, and if Peeples can repeat his fine work of last season, and some of the prospects come through, this year's Kirkwood team may again be leading or tied for the title as it was last season.

Webster Groves will have two tackles around which to build its team, Gaynor Blake and John Tyler, co-captains, these being the only letter men. A large squad of 125 furnishes Coach Froebel, F. Gaines with a chance to fill in the numerous vacancies caused by graduation last season, and many players returning from last year's squad may make Webster Groves the surprise team of the league.

Wellston, Ritenour, Clayton and St. Charles appear to lack the veterans and replacements that the other schools possess so that they probably will be battling the other teams with the hope of keeping the scores low or creating a major upset. In games among themselves, these four schools appear to be nearly equal, with possibly Ritenour having a slight edge due to its larger enrollment.

ST. AGATHAS AND WEICKS TO OPEN MUNICIPAL TITLE SERIES TODAY

Nixon lf	Dulle cf
Savage ss	Wilkes 1b
Saussele cf	W. Gabel 2b

Umpires—H. Donovan, plate; J. Finnegan, bases. Scorer—C. Dailey.

The "world series" of Municipal baseball is scheduled to get under way today when the Weicks, champions of the South Side League, meet St. Agatha, title winners in the Wilson South Side Sodality League in the first of a three-game series to decide the championship of the Municipal Baseball Association. The game is scheduled for Diamond No. 1 at Fairgrounds Park and will begin at 3:15 p. m. The title series was originally scheduled to open last Sunday, but inclement weather forced a postponement.

One change has been made in the lineup of the Weicks. Manager Tony Simonic has decided to send Carl Boskoff to second base in his position. Otherwise the lineups are the same as those that carried both teams through to the final. Charles "Lefty" George will be on the mound for the Weicks with Otto Fraizer doing the catching. Art Erbs is expected to get the call to handle the pitching duties for St. Agatha and Jack Held will be behind the bat.

The Weicks and St. Agatha teams are two of the four that were seeded in the eliminations. Each team has scored three victories and with both teams at full strength today's contest is expected to bring out some of the finest baseball that has been seen on a Municipal diamond this season.

Another feature of this championship series is that the two teams are managed by brothers. Tony Simonic directs the play of the Weicks and Joe Simonic is manager of St. Agatha. Both finalists are South St. Louis representatives.

The second game of the series will be played next Sunday and if a third contest is necessary to decide the championship it will be played two weeks from today.

Two preliminary games are scheduled to precede the title tilt. In the first game, starting at 11 a. m., the Bishops of the South End Intermediate League will play the Kingdom House Tigers of the South Side Y. M. C. A. Brotherhood League. The second game, starting at 1 p. m., brings together the Police Department nine of the Mound City League and the Sunrise Club.

MUNY HORSESHOE TITLE WILL BE DECIDED TODAY

The final series of 16 games for the Municipal Horseshoe pitching championship will be played today between the Sunsets, Carondelet Divisional winners, and the Angelicas, champions of the Fairgrounds Division. The matches will start at 9:30 o'clock this morning at Carondelet Park.

The Sunsets took a lead of 10—6 in the first set of 16 matches played at the Fairgrounds Park. Six all-time records were broken and one tied in the first contest. Sunset needs to win but seven of the 16 matches today to win the title.

them and those which they manufactured legally, the Senators took very little time breaking in the run column and not much more in adding to their tally. As a matter of fact, they scored in each of the first four innings.

A double by Stone and a pass to Harris marked the Senators' first. Hadley steamed up to strike Manush out, but Stone and Harris started a double steal and when Grube threw into left field, Stone scored. A second-inning run was legitimate. Schulte opened with a single and, after Susko flied out, went to third when Kerr doubled. Burke promptly singled Schulte over.

The Browns were overtaken again by generosity in the third. With one down, Manush hit to Burns, and Hadley, who took the throw, failed to touch first. Bolton then got a flukey triple on an apparent one-bagger which bounced away from Hemsley and Manush scored. Bolton followed Heine over after Pepper caught Schulte's long fly. The fourth saw a fifth Washington run, which was made up of a single, a sacrifice and another single.

Burke didn't appear to have very much "stuff," but the Browns couldn't score until the third, when Bejma doubled to left and Pepper singled him across.

Hornsby Grounds to Burke.

After the third, Burke's "nothing ball" continued effective and not a Brownie even reached first in the three following frames. In the seventh, with one gone, Grube managed a safe bunt past Burke and took second on Strange's hit to right. The runners advanced as Hornsby, batting for Hadley, was thrown out by Burke and both were stranded when Clift, more or less calmly, accepted a third strike.

The pinch-hitting business brought Bill McAfee in as the Browns' pitcher. Bill did right well when he pitched two hitless and scoreless innings, retiring the Senators in the ninth on three pitched balls, but Burke continued his mastery over the Browns, and the Senators went away with an even break.

Brownie Notes

MANAGER HORNSBY has Ed Wells, his only left-hander, Knott and Newsom ready for the double-header with the Yanks today. If necessary, he says he'll use his entire staff to bring victory. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock.

The Browns have announced the purchase of Pitcher H. Ashley Hillin from the San Antonio farm in the Texas League. Hillin, 22 years old and 6 feet, 3 inches tall, is a right-hander who has won 24 and lost 11 this year.

With Bejma and Hemsley in the outfield, the Browns muster eight right-handed hitters against left-handed pitching. Burns is the only one to swing from the "wrong" side of the plate.

Today's double-header is composed of the regularly scheduled single game and that booked originally for next Wednesday.

Hadley was just about out of a bad first inning situation when he struck Manush out with two on but Grube's low throw to Clift gave the Senators an unearned run.

Earl Combs, Yankee outfielder, who was badly injured on July 22, saw the game. He will leave the hospital today and soon will go home to Richmond, Ky., his home ,to spend the wnter.

The final of the Washington series attracted a ladies' day crowd of 2500.

He Gets Along Pretty Well— Getalong Winning the Fairmount Inaugural

Heavy Sugar is shown finishing a close second in the feature race of the opening day program. G. W. Fowler, who rode Heavy Sugar, was suspended for the balance of the meeting for a foul committed in the running of this race.

lead, but lost the advantage at the half-mile ground. Then it was that he went to work, picked her up under vigorous urging and outlasted Alamae and Northvale to win going away by four lengths. Smith is the boy who led the riders at Thistledown and it appears that he may repeat here.

Tarpon Wins by Three Lengths.

Tarpon, running for I. S. Shafer, took all the color out of the running of the third race by getting off to a good lead at the start and stretching it to three lengths at the finish None of the others was ever a serious challenger.

If six furlong races were run on a straightaway course, the big brown mare Galapan probably would win her share of purses, but since there are turns to be made she is just a $700 plater. For Galapan has such a bad habit of bolting at the stretch turn that she even does it in the morning workouts, and she did it again in the fourth race. Thus, she lost the advantage of a three-length lead, and Royal See went on to win the race, with Big Blue second. It was Frye's second winning mount.

Double for Jockey F. A. Smith.

Barcardi Sweep, going in his very best stride, overtook the flying Transfix in the home stretch of the sixth race to score a double for Jockey F. A. Smith. It was largely a two-horse race with Transfix setting the pace for three-quarters of a mile and losing it only in the stretch run when Smith let Barcardi Sweep loose. Blind Hills was third, badly outrun. Barcardi Sweep's victory cut into the succession of long-shot victories. He paid $5.20.

Just Like a Rodeo.

Trying to get the field of six lined up for the start of the seventh race was as good as a rodeo. Jack Murphy and Boston Common bucked like bronchos and finally Boston Common unseated her rider, Joe Dyer, and it was several minutes before he could recover sufficiently to remount. Then, when he insisted on riding, the crowd gave him a big round of applause. So, Little Joey, all out of appreciation for the good will of the fans, gave Boston Common a million dollar ride, caught and passed the pacemaker, Clinton, after going three quarters and won the race in a drive. Ogee finished behind Clinton. The winner paid $10.16.

Lionhearted, a pacemaker from the start, was in front all the way to win the eighth and closing race of the day. Sis Largo closed fast in the home stretch, but was too far back to catch the winner, and Plunging Sun was third.

The quinella, Lionhearted and Sis Largo, paid $15.02 for $2.

TEXAN IS VICTOR IN PROFESSIONAL SKEET SHOOT

If in the course of your Sunday drive into the county you are suddenly disturbed by a series of explosions strangely like the noise of war, don't dash for shelter. For you probably have come within earshot of the Bridle Spur Hunt Club's grounds on Geyer road where the Missouri Eastern Zone tournament is in progress. And there's no danger of anyone being hit, except a poor "skeet."

The hunters are blasting away today for the second round, starting at 9 a. m. And the casualties among the skeets is likely to be terrific, for the shooters are all crack shots. A "skeet," incidentally, is a clay target, ejected into the air at weird angles by a mechanical device, and the game is to hit as many targets as possible.

In the course of yesterday's firing, leaders were determined in four classes: professional, class A, class B and class C, as well as the two-man team event. A similar program will be conducted today and championships of the Eastern Zone decided. The meet is being held by the Missouri State Skeet Shooting Association.

The two-man team event resulted in a tie between C. E. Michel-G. E. Crosby, and H. Siebens-Dr. C. E. Magee, each with 183. In the shoot-off, the Michel-Crosby team won with a total of 47 against 43.

Winners yesterday in 100-target competition were:

Professional: H. Eller of Texas, 94.

Class B: G. K. Miltenberger, Lakeside Gun Club, 89.

Class C: Three tied at 80 (Aug. H. Busch III, C. J. Dando and Brad Shinkle Jr.). Dando won with 24 out of 25 in the shoot-off while Busch and Shinkle each hit 20.

Other scores in the professional competition were: Art Killam, Alton, 88; W. F. Siegmund, 82; H. L. Maitland, 81.

THREE SEEDED STARS WIN IN DISTRICT TENNIS

By Davison Obear.

The St. Louis District men's tennis championship opened yesterday afternoon on the Clayton Municipal courts after a postponement of a week due to rain and wet courts. Play will continue today.

Favorites advanced through yesterday's play in the men's singles. In the only three-set contest, Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr., St. Louis Country Club star, eliminated Leo Boldenweck, second ranking Clayton player, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Only three of the eight seeded players got into action. The three players drew opponents in the opening round while the other five drew byes. McNeill Smith, East St. Louis star, won from H. G. Hawkins, 6—0, 6—1 in one match, Ray Wiese disposed of Dan Schlafly, 6—1, 7—5 in another, and Charles McMillin, the third seeded player to see action, won from Russell Hadden 6—1, 6—3. Although winning only one game in the first set Hadden showed much improvement in the second and won three games from McMillin, second seeded player in the tournament.

Karl Kammann, Belleville entrant and former District champion, eliminated another player from the East Side when he defeated William Biel of Granite City, 6—1, 7—5. Biel put up a stiff fight in the second set but Kammann showed flashes of the form which kept him at the top of the District singles list not long ago.

LOCAL AMERICAN LEAGUERS GET WELLER; WALSH TO START WORK

Acquisition of Louis (Rabbit) Weller, former Haskell Institute backfield star, by the St. Louis team of the American League, and an announcement that the Gunners, independent eleven, would begin to work out tomorrow at West Side Softball Park, were yesterday's developments in the professional football world.

The leaguers also made it known they would begin regular practice tomorrow at C. B. C. athletic grounds. Coach Choppy Rhodes has had 14 men taking running and other exercises for three days in Forest Park.

Weller's Feats.

Weller, a speedy half-pint ball-carrier, gained fame in his college football days for making long runbacks of punts. Last season he played with the Boston Redskins and ran a punt back 55 yards for a touchdown against the New York Giants. This cost him his job, because after that the National Pro League teams wouldn't punt to him. Manager J. W. Yates of the new league team says Coach Lone Star Dietz of Boston recommended Weller to him after he, Yates, assisted in inducing Arnold Arenz of St Louis U., to sign with Boston. Weller has accepted the offer of the local eleven and a contract has been mailed to him.

Coach Rhodes expected a number of new players to arrive over the week-end to join in the two-a-day workouts, beginning tomorrow.

Chile Walsh, coach of the Gunners, plans to put his squad through limbering up exercises, preparatory to the first regular practice next Saturday. By that time he hopes to have his full squad of 30 men on hand.

Those Expected.

The backs who will romp through the inaugural workout are Dick Frham, the big blocker from Nebraska University; Blake Workman, an accurrate passer from Tulsa University, and Benny La Presta and Manuel "Fat" Rapp, a pair of ball-luggers who learned their football under Walsh at St. Louis University. With the exception of Rapp, who is playing his first season in pro ranks, these players were with the Gunners last season. Joe Spudich, the little triple-threat star, is due tomorrow but he is not certain if he will arrive in time for the workout.

Sandy Sandburg and Babe Lyons, giant tackles; Mack Gladden and George Rogge, ends, and Homer Reynolds, guard, all experienced pros, who also were with the Gunners last season, are the linemen who will make their season's first appearance here tomorrow.

Chester "Swede" Johnston, the ponderous fullback, who was the Gunners' big drawing power last season, along with some of the other 1933 veterans, new professional players and numerous ex-collegians, are due to report sometime this week, according to Walsh.

The Gunner management already has started work on its coming schedule and reports that the 1934 list of games will be a lot tougher than last season's. The Gunner officials plan opening their season the last Sunday of the month, Sept. 30. A team that never before played here is likely to be the Gunners' opponent. With the exception of the National League elevens, all the Gunners' other foes will be aggregations new to local fans. There are several powerful elevens in and around New York, Boston and Philadelphia which are being sought by the local team.

Indians Hit Ferrell Hard; Win Twin Bill.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 8.—The Indians won both games of a doubleheader from the Red Sox today, jumping on Wesley Ferrell for 14 hits to win the opener, 5 to 1, and pushing across three runs to win the nightcap, 3 to 2.

Far From Perfect.

CROWDS on the field and ground rules were once permitted even in world series games. Many years ago this writer campaigned against both. but it was not until Commissioner Landis was empowered to handle world series contests that the matter was taken up officially and the fields cleared of interference.

Not that world series or even championship play is conducted ideally, even today. It never will be until major league baseball is able to standardize the area and shape of its parks, bar advertising from all its fences and have all the fields located identically with reference to the sun. Of course that never will happen. The change would cost too much.

Nevertheless the present haphazard park system contains so many inequalities as to cause continual complaint that this or that park helps home batters and gives the home team a big advantage on its home grounds, since it plays 77 games there as against 11 for any rival.

The dimensions of many of the parks are absurd. Perhaps the most grotesque is the Giants' park, where the right field fence is only 257 feet, 8 inches distant and left field only 279 feet, while center field stretches out 505 feet from the batter.

Yankee Fences Close.

THE next worst park in either circuit is not Baker Field, the Philadelphia National grounds, of which we read so much, but the Yankee stadium, where the fence Ruth shoots at is only 295 feet from the plate—26 feet nearer than right field at Sportsman's Park. Left-field fence is only 301 feet. This affords an easy shot for both right and left-hand batters.

At Philadelphia the "band box" park, so called because of a 280-foot right field distance (larger than the Polo Grounds, please note), the left field fence is 341 feet.

Screens Are Spoil Sports.

IT is the contention of some club owners that even though the fences are close, screens raised to adequate heights prevent the too easy home run.

Quite true. The short fields with screens, however, also prevent the thrilling long runs and deep catches by outfielders.

The screen stops the ball above the outfielder's hands, and it drops to the grass a two-base hit. Without a screen it probably would have been an out. Short length fields transform putouts into extra-base drives. The effect is just the same as if there were an overflow crowd on the field.

However, in justice to club-owners, it must be said that there isn't any way out of the dilemma. Such as the grounds are, in most cases they are the best that could be obtained. It is unlikely that anything can be done about any of them, as there is no room for their expansion.

Any baseball club owning its own park that contemplated moving or rebuilding would have to talk in terms of half a million or more. The money isn't here today. So we will have to put up with screens, or deaden the ball to a point where they can't reach the fences with long drives. Perhaps that will be the ultimate solution.

Phil Ball Tried It.

ONLY one club-owner in recent years has attempted a major expansion of his park—the late Phil Ball. He did not live to profit by the change, as far as his own club was concerned.

Like the good sport he was, he increased the capacity of his park about 15,000 seats to accommodate the National League, which was then riding on a wave of success.

Ball declared that his bill for rebuilding Sportsman's Park was $629,000—which was $25,000 more than he paid for the club, the real estate and all back in 1915.

A Clown Runs the Circus.

INDICATING that it takes brains to be a buffoon, note that the clown of the Washington Senators is now managing that major league unit.

True, he is only acting manager, in the absence of Joe Cronin, who is injured; but the choice very plainly shows that Cronin has confidence in the man who is paid wages for slow motion antics, climbing screens like a simian and playing foil to Nick Altrock—Al Schacht.

Schacht, in fact, is one of the smartest coaches in the game and he is stationed regularly at third base to do the stuff that good managers usually attend to, Rogers Hornsby for instance.

Having himself been a player and being an extremely keen observer, we are forced to take notice when Schacht volunteers the statement that the chances are against the Detroit club beating the Giants in the world series, if and when they meet—as they now seem likely to. Here is what Schacht told a member of the Post-Dispatch sport staff:

"The trouble with picking the winner in a world series is that some wild joker is likely to turn up unexpectedly, like Pepper Martin did for the Cardinals.

"But from what I know of the Giants and the Tigers—and remember we played against the Giants in last year's series, I would say that the outlook for Detroit is not too bright.

Only Two Good Pitchers.

"MY idea is that the Tigers have only two capable starting pitchers — Rowe and Bridges. Auker has a fairly good record, but many of his games have been won because of a heavy hitting attack behind him. That attack may not function against fellows like Hubbell, Schumacher, Parmelee and Fitzsimmons.

"Marberry is not the pitcher he was. He can be expected to go at top speed for only an inning or two.

"There are three dangerous batters in the Detroit batting order—Gehringer, Greenberg and Owen. Goslin hasn't been going so hot lately.

"It's been said before, but it's still true: the Giants have a tight ball club. They have a fine pitching staff, no definitely weak spots in the defense, and four truly great players in Terry, Ott, Jackson and Joe Moore.

"Anything can happen in a short series, but right now the Giants look plenty tough."

Incidentally, Schacht thinks that the Yankees lost the American League flag here in St. Louis when Earle Combs ran into the wall. He was on base frequently when batting leadoff, and with him out of the batting order the Yankees' attack was disorganized. He was their key man in run scoring. At that time (July 24) the Yanks were only two games out of first place.

KY LAFFOON AND RUNYAN TIE IN OPEN TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Ky Laffoon, sensational 25-year-old Denver professional, and Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., newly crowned national P. G. A. champion, tied for first place in the 72-hole Glens Falls open today with 280. They will play off for the title tomorrow over 18 holes.

Six strokes back of the leader at the half-way mark, Runyan made a gallant comeback with a pair of 68s today while Laffoon turned in a 69 and a 71. The Westerner needed a birdie two on the final green to win, but his 20-foot putt missed the cup by six inches.

DEMOCRATIC CLUBS WIN SEMIFINALS IN MUNY SOFTBALL

The first game of three to decide the championship will be played tomorrow night at 8:45 o'clock, preceded by a consolation game between last night's losers at 7:30 o'clock.

Gehrig's 44th Homer Helps Yankees Win.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Home runs by Lou Gehrig, George Selkirk and Tony Lazzeri brought in all the runs to give the Yankees a 7 to 1 victory over the White Sox today in their final meeting of the season. Gehrig's homer was his forty-fourth of the season.

Johnny Broaca handled the mound assignment for the winners. The bespectacled Yale alumnus allowed the White Sox only five hits and three walks to get the better of George Earnshaw in the mound duel, Earnshaw seeking another $500 bonus, limited the Yanks to eight blows.

Ruth, making what may be his last appearance here as a regular, drew an ovation from the crowd of 6000 when he retired from the game in the seventh inning.

CARRY OVER SURPRISE WINNER OF LAWRENCE REALIZATION

VICTOR OWNED BY OGDEN MILLS AND HIS SISTER; GOOD GOODS 3D

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Racing through a driving rain, a two-year-old filly and a three-year-old colt, neither among the leaders of their respective divisions, split nearly $40,000 today. They were Nellie Flag from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, winner of the twenty-eighth running of the Matron Stakes, and the Wheatley Stable's Carry Over, owned by Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the United States Treasury, and his sister, Mrs. H. C. Phipps, which acconnted for the Lawrence Realization at Belmont Park.

Nellie Flag, running six furlongs in the fast time of 1:10 4-5, kicked mud and water into the faces of 13 others of her sex and age to earn $20,550. Carry Over, coupled with H. C. Phipps' Cleves in a four-horse field, sped around one and five-sixteenths miles in 2:44 to take down $18,110.

Neither winner was given much consideration in the wagering, however, Nellie Flag paying 12 to 1 and Carry Over 8 to 1.

Nellie Flag crossed the finish line three lengths in front of Walter M. Jefford's 25-to-1 shot, Judy O'Grady, while another one and one-half lengths to the rear came Morton L. Schwartz's Good Gamble, also an outsider held at 10 to 1.

Carry Over also scored an easy triumph. The son of St. Germans set all the pace and finished the long journey one and one-half lengths in front of Schwartz's Observant, the odds-on choice. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Good Goods was another three lengths to the rear, leading Cleves by a head.

STATE BICYCLE TITLE RACES TO BE HELD TODAY

The Missouri State championship bicycle races for the junior and senior divisions will be held under the auspices of the Amateur Bicycle League of America this morning, starting at 8 o'clock in Forest Park around the Nathan Frank Memorial bandstand at the entrance of the Municipal Opera.

Eight races will comprise the program and are as follows: Junior class—½-mile sprint, 1-mile scratch. 2-mile scratch and 5-mile point race. Senior class—½-mile sprint, 1-mile scratch, 5-mile scratch and 10-mile point race.

The point race is an event in which the riders sprint at each mile mark for points with the cyclist gathering the largest number being declared the winner.

Points will be scored as follows: Five for first, 3 for second, 2 for third and 1 for fourth.

Riders from Kansas City, Mo., and Litchfield, Ill., are expected to compete.

Local riders competing in the senior division are Olin Bechtel, 1933 State champion; Louis Droz, city champion; Richard Suever, Eugene Gotsch, Chester Nelsen, Joe McNichols and Ray George. In the junior division, Bobby Pohl, city junior champion; Ken Connor, Al Talghader Jr., Clarence Mitchel and Joe Biondo will be seen in action.

Announcement has been made by the Century Road Club of America Missouri division, that its sixth annual bicycle derby and mid-western championship will be held in Forest Park Sept. 23. Fifteen events will comprise the program. Entry blanks are available and may be filed with Don Rehm, 3621 North Grand boulevard.

mote when Dizzy said in the spring that "me and Paul ought to win 40 or 45 games easy." Dizzy has 24 to his credit and Paul will be seeking No. 15 tomorrow afternoon.

Second -Guessing, Mr. Ruth.

The Cardinals were glad to hear that Babe Ruth had picked Jerome Herman as one of his pitchers, but they criticized the Bambino's selections for some of his other positions.

For instance, they respect Melvin Ott as a batter and a right-fielder, but they also know that Ott was taken out of center by Bill Terry as soon as the Giant manager learned that Melvin was unable to give a big league performance in the middle field. They would play Ott in right field or not at all.

Also, the boys questioned the wisdom of picking Werber to play third base with men like Traynor and Frisch performing at the hot corner in the National League. In fact, despite all the nice things that Ruth said about his third baseman, the Cardinals rank Traynor, Frisch, Owen of the Tigers, and Higgins of the Athletics ahead of Werber.

The first game will be started at three o'clock, according to a message to Secretary Clarence Lloyd. The state law does not permit the baseball park gates to be opened or players to appear on the field in uniform until two o'clock and the management decided it would take an hour at least for the crowd to gather and for the athletes to get the necessary practice. The law also provides that play must cease at seven o'clock, so that second game may have to be cut short.

TWO HOUSTON RECRUITS TO REPORT TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Pat Ankenman, son of the president of the Houston club of the Texas League and Don Gutteridge, recruit third baseman from Houston, will report to Manager Frisch tomorrow to spend the rest of season eating major league groceries and showing Manager Frisch what they can do with bats and baseballs.

Clarence F. Lloyd, secretary, made the announcement this afternoon on arrival of the Redbirds in Philadelphia. It was still raining, but Secretary Lloyd is not to be deterred by a little thing like rain when he has an announcement to make.

Tomorrow will be Frankie Frisch's birthday and the players were seriously considering presenting the Cardinal manager with a box of candy or a package of chewing gum.

BAZAAR WINS FEATURE AT ROCKINGHAM PARK

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 8.—E. R. Bradley's Bazaar carried her speed farther than was expected today as she splashed through the sloppy going at Rockingham Park to win the Mount Washington Handicap and its purse of $3860.

Considered only a top notch horse at a distance of one mile or less, the English-bred daughter of Tetratema stepped off one and one-eighth miles in 1:54 under 112 pounds to score by three lengths. Jack Howard's Advising Anna, winner of the Bennington Handicap a week ago, was second, beating Mrs. B. Burks' Flying Cadet, a 25 to 1 shot, one length for the place.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 8. — The old guard among the country's amateur golfers will have to go to work early and turn back the challenge of youth if it intends to make much progress in the thirty-eighth annual national amateur championship, an all-match play tournament for the first time in the present era, which starts over Brookline's historic country club tomorrow.

The United States Golf Association today announced the draw for the first round and it deevloped that eight of the 10 former titleholders and present champion in the field were assigned opening day matches, mostly against young newcomers in the national competition ranks.

George T. Dunlap Jr. of New York, current wearer of the crown, and Jess Sweetser, another New Yorker, who captured the title over this same course 12 years ago, were the two exceptions. Dunlap and Sweetser drew first-round byes, together with Johnny Goodman of Omaha and Lawson Little, the holder of the British amateur crown. They will start play Tuesday.

Ouimet Plays Jones.

The "freak" of the first-round draw found the veteran Francis Ouimet pitted against Bobby Jones. In this case, however, the Bobby Jones is an 18-year-old youngster from the Detroit district, making his first start in the national tournament. Young Jones was runner-up in the recent Western junior championship.

Such other veterans as Jesse Guilford, Chick Evans, Bob Gardner, Max Marston, last year's runner-up; Chandler Egan, titleholder in 1904-05, and Davidson Nerron, as well as Ross Somerville, Canadian winner of the United States crown in 1932, all learned who they will face tomorrow morning.

Despite a heavy mist and frequent showers today, many players stuck to their practice schedule. Sweetser, who won the national title here at the age of 20 in 1922, played two complete rounds but confessed only that he did the incoming nine in 37, one over par. Chester O'Brien, St. Louis, reported a 73. Tom Draper didn't play.

Lawson Little, the California husky, quit after 14 holes but he was hitting a terrific ball and satisfied onlookers he is one of the "marked men" in the tournament. Eight holes were enough for Goodman, who was even par for the distance. Ouimet was satisfied with a 38 for the first nine while Dunlap and Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati star, did not play at all.

Some Practice Score.

Three Philadelphians turned in some of the day's best practice scores. Dwight Armstrong had a 73, Perry Hall a 75 and George Grange a 76. Others reporting 76s included Jesse Guilford, former titleholder, and Frank Ross of Hartford, former New England amateur champion.

Until the U. S. G. A. announces, tomorrow, the remainder of the draw, including the set-up for the 68 players with byes, it will be impossible to tell how the distribution has affected the leading contenders or how many have been dropped into the same brackets.

Mt. Vernon and Edgemont Meet In Title Game

Manager Jimmy McLaughlin will lead his Mount Vernon Car Builders into Edgemont this afternoon for a game with the Edgemont A. C., defending champions, in a post-season contest to decide the winner of the first half championship of the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League.

The teams finished in a tie for the lead in the opening half with six games won and three lost after one of the hottest fights witnessed in recent years in the semipro circuit.

During the final half which terminated Labor day the 1933 champions, after getting off to a good start folded up to finish in seventh place, while Mount Vernon kept up its fast pace to lead the procession a half game ahead of the Alton Athletics.

On the season's play between the two contesting teams, Mount Vernon has the edge, gaining three consecutive conquests.

In an effort to capture the first half title Manager Ray Besse of the East St. Louisians has held several practice sessions during the past week.

Both games will start at 3 o'clock.

48-Year-Old Jockey Rides At Fairmount

JOE DREYER

When the horse, Bob's Luck, went to the post in the second race yesterday he was ridden by his owner, Joe Dreyer. Joe is nearing the half-century mark but he believes he can still do a better job of riding than some of the youngsters. He rode his Bag o' Roses to victory over a muddy track last Fall and he hopes to score with another winner here at this meeting.

MUELLERLEILE AND CONZELMAN START FOOTBALL WORK TOMORROW

By Harold Tuthill

A preview of the coming collegiate football season reveals that it is possible for both universities, St. Louis and Washington, to go through the season undefeated until Thanksgiving day when the two schools oppose each other.

Predicting an undefeated season for either school is a large order, so when both are picked to take their opponents right down the line it is even more hazardous. But of the nine games that Washington has scheduled two admittedly will be tough. They are with Illinois and Kansas and of course St. Louis University will stand in the way of an undefeated season for the Bears.

Similarly, St. Louis has only a pair of outside battles that right now are cause for alarm. They are with Xavier at Cincinnati and with Marquette at home, Nov. 9.

Bears Oppose McKendree First.

To go back and look at Washington's schedule, the leadoff team is McKendree, which the Bears walloped last year, 22 to 7. Next comes Illinois, an eleven which was only two touchdowns better than the Bears in 1933. Wabash, third on the program, had a record of four victories, two defeats and a tie in 1933, against schools that cannot be classed in the first rank. Simpson at Indianola, Ia., points to its last year's record of seven victories, one defeat and one tie, but the defeat was at the hands of Drake, 14 to 6, a team which also trimmed Washington, 6 to 0, so the margin of difference between Washington and Simpson last year was about the same.

The Bears expect to avenge that loss to Drake, which makes its appearance here Oct. 26, and is fifth on the schedule. Following the Bulldogs will be Butler, which bowed to Washington, 36 to 12, in 1933. Then comes Missouri, which, as everybody knows, had a terrible season last year and has a lot to make up before it regains its power. After Drake will be Kansas and that will be one game where the Bears probably will not be favored, although the Jayhawks only won half of their 10 games in 1933, losing four and tying one. St. Louis U. will close the season and that's one battle that always is a toss-up, regardless of the outcome of the local season.

Illinois Wesleyan Strong Last Year

On the St. Louis side, a cocky little champion, Illinois Wesleyan, will open here Oct. 5. The Bloomington representatives won the Little 19 Conference Championship last year and finished with six victories, two defeats and a tie. One of those losses was to Michigan State by a 20 to 12 score and the other was to John Carroll, 12 to 7.

If the Billikens have the power to run over Wesleyan, they should take the measure of Creighton, No. 2 on the program, for Creighton lost to Marquette by the same difference that St. Louis did, 15 points, in 1933. The Billikens will travel to Columbia Oct. 20 to try to better their 13 to 7 score of 1933 over the Tigers.

Xavier, the fourth opponent of the Billikens, is another newcomer on the schedule and St. Louis will play the team at Cincinnati on Oct. 27. Of Xavier's nine games last year, five were won and four lost. One of those victories was a 6 to 0 decision over Indiana and one of the losses was by 3 to 0 to Carnegie Tech, so Xavier appears to be a worthwhile enemy.

Bills Meet Marquette, Nov. 9.

Those four conclude the first half of the eight games. To start the second half, Missouri School of Mines will play here Nov. 2, and the Billikens should defeat the Miners. Marquette's Golden Avalanche will sweep down here Nov. 9, and that will be a real test for the Billikens. It also will give them a splendid opportunity to show that the 21 to 6 administered to St. Louis by Marquette last year was a big mistake.

Don Faurot's Kirksville Teachers will make their St. Louis debut on Nov. 16. Should the Teachers approximate the record they had last year when they won all nine of their contests, the result of the meeting with the Billikens will do much toward determining the Missouri State champion, for an undefeated season for St. Louis and Washington would make the winner of the Thanksgiving day game undisputed titleholder.

One really should belong to the Optimists' Club to even think about unbeatable seasons, but the doubters may change their minds if they were to watch the Bears and Billikens work out twice a day, starting tomorrow and continuing until classes begin in two weeks.

Both Strong on Reserves.

There is enough material at each school for two good teams, and this will do away with the bugaboo of lack of reserve strength to help out the varsity when the going gets rough. Moreover, Washington will have 20 letter men reporting for duty and St. Louis will start with 12 letter men. Almost everybody knows that there are some good sophomores eligible for both teams, so neither coach, Jim Conzelman of Washington or Cecil Muellerleile of St. Louis, will have grounds to complain about the size of their squads.

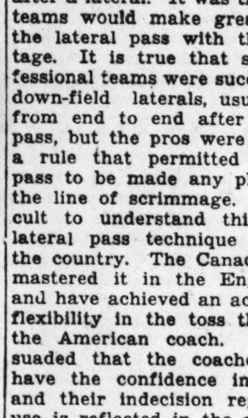
New Pass Rule Should Open Up Offense Near Goal, Conzelman Says

By Jimmy Conzelman,
Washington U. Football Coach.

There is only one new rule in 1934 intercollegiate football for the football fan to learn. This applies to a forward pass thrown over the goal line. The rule now reads: "The first forward pass in any series of downs (except on fourth down) which becomes incomplete by striking the ground . . . shall be penalized as though it became incomplete in the field of play. Any other forward pass which becomes incomplete in any of these ways on, above or behind the opponents' goal line is a touchback."



CONZELMAN

This merely means that the offensive team can take a chance on passing on the first down for a touchdown with only the minimum danger of losing the ball through an interception. the rule should loosen up offensive maneuvers near the goal line.

Of course, most teams will expect a pass within the 20-yard line on the first down, and I look for plays planned as passing threats to levelop into running plays to offset this expectancy of the defensive team.

The chance for a completed forward pass diminishes directly with the number of the down. It can be seen then that the best place to throw a pass is on the first down. Here the element of surprise is greater. The second down with long yardage to go signals the defense to watch for aerial plays, while the third down that carries long yardage is an invitation both to the defense and the filled stands to watch the ball thrown through the air.

The smaller size football will not be noticed by the layman. After some experiments in passing, I am convinced that passes will be thrown more accurately; to what degree it is difficult to say. The ball is easier to hold, an advantage to the player with small hands. Perhaps fumbling will be less frequent. Less wind resistance may help punters, but I doubt it.

The phraseology of many rules is such that interpretation meetings are required to clarify several points. While the Rule Committee has made strenuous efforts to simplify the reading of rules, there are many passages difficult to understand.

Lateral pass technique again failed to feature the 1933 season, despite the changes in rules preventing the defensive team from running with a recovered fumble after a lateral. It was thought that teams would make greater use of the lateral pass with this advantage. It is true that several professional teams were successful with down-field laterals, usually made from end to end after a forward pass, but the pros were aided with a rule that permitted a forward pass to be made any place behind the line of scrimmage. It is difficult to understand this lack of lateral pass technique throughout the country. The Canadians have mastered it in the English game and have achieved an accuracy and flexibility in the toss that amazes the American coach. I am persuaded that the coaches do not have the confidence in this play and their indecision regarding its use is reflected in the attitude of the players.

Somewhat better business conditions have contributed to increased advance ticket sales. With baseball interest waning except in cities harboring pennant contenders, the public mind is leaning toward the gridiron. Unquestionably the Chicago Bears and All-Star Collegians ushered in football interest three weeks ahead of other seasons.

COLOMBO'S TROJANS TO BE IN FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Pete Colombo's Trojans, claimants of the independent football championship of St. Louis for last year, will play in an organized league this season at the National Softball park. The team will be organized and coached by Frank O'Leary and Pete Colombo.

Playing on the Trojans will be: Ton Coster, former St. Louis University guard; Frank Bittner and Red Flynn, who played on the St. Louis University frosh team; Bob Frech, fullback of St. Viator; Dan Fawley, Little 19 conference all-star center with Milliken University; and Bud Cornell of Southern California.

ST. LOUIS SEEKS MAJOR LEAGUE HOCKEY STARS

Lack of activity on the part of the St. Louis Hockey Club, which will operate in the National League this winter, at the present time is due to a desire on the part of the league to do nothing here until after Sept. 24, the date when the territorial agreement with the American Association expires, Redmond Quain, president of the club, said in a telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

There have been rumors that the National League clubs did not like the idea of the transfer of the Ottawa franchise to St. Louis and would attempt to block the transfer at a meeting of the league Sept. 24.

In reply to a telegram, Quain wired the Post-Dispatch: "Nobody can block National League hockey in St. Louis. All clubs well pleased with move there, apparently, but if they weren't it would make no difference. Regret possible damaging effect of rumors to contrary, but feel public is drawing own conclusions from consistent accuracy of our forecasts and consistent fallacy of rumors.

"Have been trying to make deals with other clubs to strengthen St. Louis team. Have bid for Ching Johnston and Bill Cook of the New York Rangers, Horner of Toronto, and Young of Detroit. Have also tried to negotiate for Montreal defense men."

The appointment of Eddie Gerard, formerly of Montreal, to manage the St. Louis club recently was announced.

BREER MEETS SHINE IN SUBLETTE FINAL

Hugo Breer and Jack Shine will play this afternoon for the championship of the Sublette Park men's singles tournament. Breer defeated Ed Morris in a semi-final round match, while Shine eliminated William Thau in his match.

The match will be three out of five sets and will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Schalk Is Retained.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Sheriff Frank J. Offermann, president of the Buffalo International League baseball club, today announced the retention of Ray Schalk, former catcher and manager of the Chicago White Sox, as manager of the Bisons for next season. The former big league backstop has been manager of the Buffalo team since 1932.

Missouri Game Survey Under Way.

RUDOLPH BENNITT and W. O. Nagel, wild life technicians of the U. S. National Park Service in co-operation with the Missouri Game and Fish Department, have completed a preliminary general survey of Missouri and last week have begun a detailed study of conditions in various localities.

The technicians, operating out of Columbia, where they are on leave of absence from the University of Missouri, traveled more than 4000 miles through 92 counties to obtain the preliminary information.

"The systematic field work on populations of game and fur species in Missouri now under way is expected to reveal much of importance to game management policies of the future," Nagel said.

"Our job is really two-fold in that we expect to obtain a complete census of game and fur in the State and the distribution and living conditions which each species now shows and to learn as much as we can of the conditions and other factors that have led up to the situation as it now exists.

"Without the latter we should not know why our game and fur species are increasing, decreasing or holding their own and it would be impossible, when this survey is completed, to make any recommendations as to the future handling of our game and fur resources.

"With complete information as to past trends and present population and living conditions, however, the State will be in a position to know what to expect in the future and this is one of the greatest values of the present survey."

Fishermen who had planned to take one last fling on stream and lake over the Labor day holidays were largely disappointed. Streams were up and muddy and the weather was damp and cold. Few good catches were reported and these scattering reports came largely from the lake sections.

Field Trials and Fox Hunt.

Sporting events of special interest to Missouri dogmen announced last week include:

Missouri Valley Beagle Trials, Kingston, Sept. 27 to 30.

Kirksville Kennel Club Bench Show, Oct. 14.

Missouri State Field Trials, Sturgeon, Oct. 22-23.

Sedalia Field Trials, Oct. 26-27.

Word was received at Sturgeon that the Grounds Committee for the American Amateur Field Trials for 1935 would be in Missouri this month and inspect the 16,000-acre tract in Boone and Audrain counties, where it is proposed that the national trials should be held next spring. The State Game and Fish Department recently planted nearly 700 bobwhite quail on this tract.

Have Your Duck Stamp Ready

With Uncle Sam soon to begin collecting dollar bills off duck hunters the long moot question as to "How many duck hunters are there in Missouri?" is expected to be decided. It is estimated, however, that fewer than 10,000 duck stamps will be issued in Missouri as compared to the 160,000 State licenses which permit holders to hunt.

The number of duck hunters has decreased considerably in the last few seasons because of scarcity of waterfowl and for economic reasons. Hunters of upland game, including quail, squirrel and rabbits have increased, reports indicate.

Duck hunters, for the most part, are willing that they should be assessed the $1 for a Federal duck stamp as the funds derived from these stamps are to be used to purchase migratory waterfow refuges, breeding and resting areas. Federal regulations require that 90 per cent of the money collected on the duck stamps must be used for this purpose.

Barbara Briggs Is Married To Robert P. McCulloch

THE gardens of Pinewood, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Foster Briggs at Pine Lake, Hartland, Wis., was the setting for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Barbara Ann Briggs, and Robert Paxton McCulloch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McCulloch, 4384 Westminster place, which took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Tall Norway spruce trees and plots of late summer flowers beautified the garden, which is divided into two terraces. The ceremony took place before the lily pond and the fountains on the upper terrace and the guests assembled on the lower terrace. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Holmes Whitmore of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Milwaukee.

The bride was attended by Mr. McCulloch's sister, Mrs. Whipple Van Ness Jones of St. Louis, as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Joan Nichols, Detroit, Mich.; Miss Charlotte Haynes, Daytona Beach, Fla.; Miss Betty Jones, Oconomowoc, Wis.; Miss Lansing McKee, Miss Claribel Seaman, Miss Harriet Mackie, Miss Alice Kopmeier and Miss Maud Eeels, all of Milwaukee. John I. Beggs McCulloch was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Stephen Foster Briggs Jr., a brother of the bride; Whipple Van Ness Jones, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom; James F. Bleakley, Charles H. Sommer Jr. and George F. Stevens Jr., St. Louis; Robert M. Love, Great Neck, N. Y.; Daniel M. Schuyler, Chicago, and Frank W. Jones Jr., Oconomowoc.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with a cowl neckline and long tight sleeves of the satin that came to a point over the hand. The closely fitted skirt fell into a four-yard train and her veil of tulle was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an ivory prayer book, that her mother had carried on her wedding day. A marker of white orchids and white satin ribbons adorned the prayer book.

The matron of honor and the bridesmaids wore gowns alike of bois de rose moire. The gowns were designed with short sleeves and a stiff collar that followed the neckline to a deep V at the back. The skirts molded the figure and fell in short trains. The attendants wore wide brimmed hats of brown velvet and brown slippers and carried large bouquets of roses in yellow, copper and peach shades.

Mrs. Briggs wore a brown and gold cloth ensemble with a brown velvet beret trimmed with a short veil. Her flowers were a corsage of green orchids. Mrs. McCulloch wore an afternoon gown of dark blue lace shot with silver threads and a black velvet hat. Her flowers were blue Vanda orchids worn in a shoulder corsage.

The bridal party received the guests before the lily pond and later supper was served in the gardens. There was dancing on the lake shore. Mr. McCulloch and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Honolulu. They will return home in time for Thanksgiving and will live at 1850 East Kane place, Milwaukee.

The bride was graduated from the Wheeler School, Providence, R. I. and last year attended Bennington College, Bennington, Vt. She was to have made her debut next Christmas.

Mr. McCulloch is the grandson of the late John I. Beggs of Oconomowoc and Wilwaukee, Wis. He attended Country Day School here and Princeton University. He was graduated from Leland Stanford University two years ago with a degree of mechanical engineering. He has been spending the summer with his parents at their estate, Beggs' Isle, near Oconomowoc.

SORORITIES and FRATERNITIES

IN accordance with the rules adopted by the college Panhellenic Association, the formal rushing season at Washington University will begin next week. Invitations for the first two parties to be given Thursday and Friday will be mailed tomorrow from the office of the dean of women. Invitations to the next two parties are to be called for at that office by the rushees on Saturday. Preferential bids and invitations for the last two parties will be given out Friday of next week. The bids will be returned by the rushees at the College Club Sunday afternoon, Sept. 23.

Each organization will receive the names of the students who have accepted bids Thursday, Sept. 27, and formal pledging services will be held that evening.

Panhellenic has limited the amount which any chapter may spend on rushing to $100 which includes gifts from alumnae chapters and mothers' clubs. The association acts in the capacity of a court to try all infringements of Panhellenic rules and the penalties include the denial of pledging and social privileges for one year.

Rush captains chosen by the sororities this season are: Miss Virginia Hawkins, Kappa Alpha Theta; Miss Ruth Hicks, Pi Beta Phi; Miss Marlee Rossiter, Delta Gamma; Mis Carolyn Kech, Gamma Phi Beta; Miss Virginia Grace, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Miss Edith Maurer, Alpha Chi Omego; Miss Emily Chipley, Phi Mu; Miss Helen Ross, Delta Delta Delta; Miss Marjorie Stephens, Alpha Xi Delta; Miss Bernice Brauch, Zeta Tau Alpha.

Miss Edith Maurer is president and Miss Jeanne Louise Herring, secretary, of the Panhellenic Association of the university.

The first meeting of the season of the Pi Beta Phi alumnae chapter will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. George Myers Hagee, 7135 Maryland avenue, and will be followed by a buffet supper. The hostess group includes Mrs. John R. Vaughan, Mrs. Nelson Rehnquist, Mrs. Frank Cavanaugh, Mrs. Vincent M. Carroll, Mrs. Frank Cann and Mrs. C. A. Clark. The business session will be devoted to convention reports. The sorority has granted charters for two Canadian chapters. They will be installed this fall at the University of Western Ontario and a Dalhousie University.

Miss Dorothy Davis of St. Louis, the delegate from Drury College, won the cup given to the delegate who contributed most to the success of the convention. Miss Annie Meroe Burnet, delegate of the Washington University Chapter, won the first prize for the best costume worn on stunt night. The convention voted to reopen the high school which it formerly maintained in connection with its settlement school in Gatlinburg, Tenn., and to increase the amount of the national endowment fund for organization work at national headquarters of the sorority.

Members of the graduating class of the Washington University chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha will be initiated into the alumnae organization of the sorority at a dinner meeting to be held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lorena Chamberlain, 5948 Clemens avenue. Miss Eleanor Coulter, Miss Virginia Capps and Mrs. Kenneth Korkoian will be assisting hostesses.

Sigma Chi has announced the appointment of James S. McAtee of St. Louis as national traveling secretary. He is now the guest of the University of Missouri chapter.

Mrs. Oscar V. Cole, 25 Marshall place, Webster Groves, will entertain the alumnae of Gamma Phi Beta at a buffet supper at her home tomorrow evening. Miss Laura Hinchman, Mrs. Harry T. Lange and Mrs. Orville Mitchell will be assistant hostesses. Gamma Phi Beta convention reports will be given. The meeting was the largest in the history of the sorority and was attended by a large delegation from St. Louis. Mrs. Lester Wright, a former member of the Washington University chapter, now living in Chicago, was reappointed national executive secretary. The University of Missouri chapter won the award given to the group conducting chapter business most efficiently. Following the discussoin of expansion policies, it was decided by the convention that the sorority hereafter would give greater consideration to establishing new chapters in smaller colleges of approved standing. It was voted to establish a Gamma Phi Beta endowment fund, the money to be used for the maintenance of camps for underprivileged children.

Mrs. Ronald J. Foulis, past president of the St. Louis Panhellenic Alumnae Association, was reappointed national examiner at the convention of Delta Gamma held at Green Lake, Wisconsin. The Washington University chapter won the award for highest scholarship rating in province five which includes universities in Southwestern states. On account of economic conditions both here and abroad, the convention opposed the establishment of fellowships for foreign study, and voted to increase the scope of the present endowment for student loans in American colleges. The loans will not be limited to members of Delta Gamma. As a future expansion policy, the delegates favored granting new charters to smaller colleges of high standing rather than to large universities where there are many organizations represented.

Mrs. W. Leland Jones, 222 East Pacific avenue, Webster Groves, will be hostess for the dinner meeting of Chi Omega Alumnae Tuesday evening. Mrs. C. F. Rinehard, Mrs. Carl T. Felker and Mrs. H. S. Woodard will be assistant hostesses.

MAN IN NAVY FOR 20 YEARS SEEKS HIS FOUR BROTHERS

Harry Mueller, who ran away from an orphan's home at Wellston 20 years ago and enlisted in the Navy, seeks to find his four brothers he thinks are living in St. Louis. In a letter to the Post-Dispatch, written from the Naval Torpedo Station at Newport, R. I., Mueller stated:

"I am ready to retire after 20 years in the service and would like my relatives to know about it. I had a pretty hard road to travel when a youngster and I would like everyone to know I have made good in the service." He is a chief petty officer.

Winter Relief in St. Louis to Cost An Estimated $1,000,000 Monthly; $19,018,000 Spent Since 1930

Figure for Each 30 Days Will Be Twice as Much as Was Expended in 12-Month Period Four Years Ago.

Looking forward to the sixth winter of the depression, those directing unemployment relief in St. Louis anticipate that the cost of aiding the needy will be about twice as much each month as it was during the whole 12 months of 1930, the first year when widespread unemployment first made itself apparent in the relief rolls.

Every two weeks during the winter of 1934-35, they estimate, expenditures for relief will approximate the total spent in 1930. In that year $650,500 was spent in St. Louis and the county for relief. In the coming months, it is anticipated, relief expenditures, now about $1,000,000 a month, will go well over that figure.

In 1930 the whole sum spent for relief was obtained in the campaigns for voluntary contributions conducted by the private charitable organizations. In 1934, about the same amount of private funds are being spent, but these represent only about 7 per cent of the total.

City Financed 19 Pct. of Work.

The city, through the $4,600,000 relief bond issue, has been able to finance about 19 per cent of the work, and the State has contributed 8 per cent. The balance, 66 per cent, comes from the Federal Treasury. These percentages are calculated on relief expenditures for the first half of 1934, but exclude the CWA program financed last winter by the Federal Government.

From 1930 through the first half of 1934 the depression has caused an outlay for unemployment relief in St. Louis and the county of $19,018,929. Toward that cost private charities have contributed $5,313,119; the Federal Government, $9,207,486; the State, $474,926; the City of St. Louis, $3,930,995; and the St. Louis County government, $92,403.

Since the problem has passed far beyond the point where voluntary efforts can contribute much toward its solution and is now largely in the hands of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, it is difficult for relief administrators in St. Louis to forecast what may be the experience this winter.

However, Peter Kasius, director of Citizens' Committee anticipates that in St. Louis alone 35,000 families and 10,000 unattached persons may be in need of help. To aid them on a straight direct relief basis, he figures, will take approximately $1,200,000 a month.

Speculation on New U. S. Program.

But there persists among relief workers a feeling that the FERA will not be content to go through the winter on a direct relief basis. Reports are current of new plans brewing in Washington for a relief program as dramatic as was the CWA which gave jobs to 4,000,000 men and women last winter.

None professes to know what the new course may be, if it develops. It may follow the lines of the CWA, or it may have the Government leasing factories and hiring the unemployed to produce in them the goods they need. Speculation has centered on these two possibilities.

Whatever may be done in such directions, the cost of relief, initially, will be much greater than on a direct relief basis. That something of the sort will be attempted, appears to be taken for granted. What it may prove to be is a large unknown factor in any calculation of the winter's relief needs.

United Relief Plans.

Plans are being laid, however, for the third annual United Relief Campaign, in which Catholic, Protestant and Jewish relief and welfare agencies will again appeal for support. This will begin late in November, and $3,000,000 or more will be sought, not only for family relief agencies, but for hospitals, old folks' homes, child care organizations and similar agencies.

Also the Clothing Bureau of Citizen's Committee, 815 North Broadway, is gathering discarded garments for distribution among the needy. Mayor Dickmann has given over the use of the Municipal Auditorium as a collection depot for old clothing, beginning tomorrow, and clothing will be accepted also at the fire department stations.

The city government, faced with exhaustion of bond issue relief funds by April, has taken steps to devise new sources of revenue with which it can continue to carry its share of the relief burden, with the likelihood that a sales tax will be enacted to provide for this and other municipal purposes.

Government Takes Major Burden.

Because the various units of government have now definitely accepted a major share of the relief burden, less public attention has been drawn to the problem than in the days when relief costs were far less, but fell chiefly on the private agencies which had to make repeated appeals for public support.

Expenditures of funds voluntarily contributed were $650,577 in 1930; $1,213,822 in 1931; reached a peak of $2,453,785 in 1932 and fell off last year to $642,305, not far from the 1930 figure and about at the level that prevailed even in "good" times. It was last year that the policy was established of leaving to private agencies the care of those in distress because of sickness, death or desertion of the wage earner or other factors not the direct result of the unemployment emergency.

While no public funds were used in 1930 for relief, in 1931 the city provided $554,836 and in 1932 expenditures from public funds totaled $1,444,703; in 1933, $7,260,275, and in the first half of 1934, $4,491,030. In the fall of 1932 the first Federal funds were received, $608,886 from the RFC, which was nominally a loan. This practice was continued through the early months of 1933, when the city and county got more than $2,000,000 from the RFC. In the summer of 1934, when the FERA was established, the fiction that these advances were loans was abandoned.

Expenditures Jump.

Combining the expenditures from public and private relief funds shows that the cost of relief jumped from $650,577 in 1930 to $1,768,658 in 1931; $3,896,488 in 1932; $7,902,580 in 1933; and $4,798,626 in the first half of 1934.

In 1930 there were 11,016 relief cases under care; 32,801 in 1931; 53,584 in 1932; 77,235 in 1933, and so far this year there have been 57,925. Stated in another fashion, the average monthly case load was 3126 in 1930; 9075 in 1931; 21,121 in 1932; 35,457 in 1933, and 37,947 in 1934.

In 1930 the average family on relief was allowed $16.25; $13.19 in 1931, $14.17 in 1932, $17.26 in 1933 and $19 in 1934. This steady rise reflects largely the degree of destitution of each family when admitted to the relief rolls. In 1930 most allowances were of a supplementary nature, the families were able to earn a few dollars, or borrow a little from friends, or sell some of their possessions. Now the experience is that those coming on relief are utterly destitute, and must have all of theirs needs supplied by the releif agency. Higher prices for food are another factor in the increase.

JAPANESE OFFER CHINA TWO WAYS TO SETTLE LOANS

One Proposal Is That Peiping Recognize Manchukuo; Other Is for Sino-Japanese Bloc.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 9.—China's indebtedness to Japan is one of the three most important issues between the two countries, according to a statement made by Koki Hirota, Japanese Foreign Minister, soon after his assumption of office. The other two issues enumerated by Hirota were: Resumption of through railway traffic between Mukden and Tientsin and reduction of the Chinese import duties on Japanese goods.

Since Hirota made his statement, through rail traffic has been resumed between Manchukuo and China and the tariffs on Japan's more important exports to China have been greatly reduced, a new schedule having become effective July 1. But with the Nanking government unable even to meet its monthly pay roll, the debt question appears unlikely to be settled soon.

History of Loans.

During 1918 and 1919, when the United States was advancing large sums to the nations of Europe, Japanese bankers were investing war profits in Chinese loans. These loans, which aggregated between $350,000,000 and $500,000,000 (gold), were advanced to the leaders of the Anfu clique which then controlled the Peking (now Peiping) government.

The money was theoretically earmarked for industrial projects such as mining and railway development, long-distance telephones and wireless stations and currency reform. Actually most of the funds were expended on civil war or found their way into the pockets of the Anfu militarists and political leaders.

Later in 1919 the Anfu clique was driven out of office. Subsequent governments have repudiated the loans and the officials of the present Nanking regime maintain that they do not even have any records of the loans. They are generally known as the "Nishihara" loans, because most of them were negotiated through a Japanese banker of that name.

Proposals by Japan.

It has been unofficially reported that Japan has approached China with two proposals designed to liquidate the loans without actual cash payments. One is that China recognize the Japanese-created state of Manchukuo. In return Japan would cancel or greatly reduce China's debts. This proposal is based on the fact that many of the Nishihara loans were nominally advanced for the development of Manchuria.

The other proposal provides for the formation of a Sino-Japanese "economic bloc," whereby Japan would assume control of the rehabilitation of China. Under this scheme China, Manchukuo and Japan would each appoint representatives to a joint economic commission which would supervise China's economic and financial development and arrange for economic and financial co-operation among the three countries.

Neither plan has been officially announced, but both have been widely discussed in the Japanese press. The second plan would undoubtedly meet with serious opposition from all of the major Powers which have vested interests in China.

EUGENE R. BLACK TO SPEAK IN ST. LOUIS SEPT. 19

Former Governor of Federal Reserve Board Will Address Commerce Chamber Members.

Eugene R. Black, who resigned as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board last month to resume his old post as head of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank and assume the unofficial position of "liaison man" between the Government and the banks, will address a members' assembly of the Chamber of Commerce the night of Sept. 19 at Hotel Jefferson.

About 400 reservations already have been made and business men from other cities near St. Louis have been invited to attend.

In his new unofficial capacity, Black, considered a conservative, is attempting to increase the flow of private capital to expedite economic recovery.

IN AID OF CHARITIES OF FATHER DEMPSEY

S. W. Fordyce Chairman of Fund Campaign Which Will Begin Wednesday.

A campaign for funds to help support the free restaurant and other charities directed by Mgr. Timothy Dempsey will open Wednesday, Samuel W. Fordyce, chairman of the campaign, announced today. No definite amount is to be sought, but it is hoped to raise sufficient money to enable Father Dempsey to continue his work throughout next year.

The headquarters of the Campaign Committee will be in Room 914, 1218 Olive street, and firms and individuals are urged to send in their contributions by mail, as there will be no canvass for funds.

"There is every indication that the need for relief will be even greater this winter than it was last year," said Fordyce, "and it is anticipated that the maintenance cost of Father Dempsey's various institutions will be considerably larger than it was last year. Father Dempsey's charities have proved indispensable in giving food, shelter and other material assistance to the needy—quickly and without red tape. His work is charity in the truest sense of the word and nowhere is aid bestowed on such a large scale at such a low expense."

Besides the restaurant, Father Dempsey also operates hotels for needy men and women, a home for convalescents and a day nursery.

How Japan Trains Soldiers To Face Death Like Robots, Die Rather Than Surrender

Aim Is to Make Each Man the Fighting Equal of Three in Army of Any Other Nation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOKIO, Sept. 8.—Estimates of "comparative strength," which will increase as the armament discussions of next year draw closer. fell in one important particular. Men under arms are enumerated as so many digits, and the "comparative strength" of the army depends on the total of these digits. But how about the comparative strength of the digits?

Japanese newspapers, reporting the new program for intensifying military training, state as an accepted fact that the Japanese soldier is already the equal of two soldiers of any other nation. that he should be made the equal of three. Thus, the Japanese army would possess triple strength without increase of numbers.

At first glance, this is merely bombast. But after a detailed study of the making of a Japanese soldier, one begins to see a gulf of difference between his training and that of any other soldier on earth. The soldier of any other nation is trained to live and make a good job of it. The Japanese soldier is trained to die.

Death the Greatest Honor.

Japanese officers have laughingly denied that they consider the Japanese soldier one whit better mentally, morally or physically than the soldier of the Occident. Yet they insist that he is a "better soldier" because he courts death as his greatest honor.

The training of men who will go to their deaths with the unswerving directness of steel robots is a wierd and unworldly process.

Two thousand years ago Bushido taught the Japanese race to think well of itself, and the Japanese individual to regard himself as nothing but dirt. The "one" must give himself for the "all."

Active military training begins at the age of 6. Boys in the first year of school are taught to march, drill, do the goose-step, sing war songs and marshal platoons of wooden soldiers.

At 12 they are provided with light rifles and uniforms with brass buttons. Military instructors drill them thoroughly in the manual of arms. There is a parade ground and drill hall in connection with very middle school. Also there is a sacred vault containing the pictures of the Emperor and Empress, and these are taken out on special occasions and venerated by the assembled students. There are frequent excursions to military shrines and war memorials.

Yearly Schoolboy Maneuvers.

Each year there are military maneuvers of schoolboys. During May of this year 10,000 students participated. They were divided into two opposing "armies," the one entrenching itself along a river bank, the other attacking the position an hour before dawn. The "armies" were equipped with rifles, machine gune, grenades and field guns and were commanded by regular army officers.

From the age of 6 to 17 the future soldier is drilled in loyalty to his immediate family, the larger family which is called the nation, and the Emperor, who is the "father" of all. This goes on until many students when asked, "What is your dearest wish?" will sincerely enough set down this answer, "To die for my beloved Emperor."

After graduation the Young Men's Association, a militant body which has a branch in every village, usually under the direction of a former soldier, continues the preparation of the student for war through emphasizing patriotism.

Then comes conscription. The young Japanese must put forth his best effort to be conscripted, and does so, for it is considered an honor. He must first pass a stiff examination. Those who pass are further weeded down by a ballot so arranged that only one out of eight can succeed. The others are drafted into the reserve.

Other Feelings Put Aside.

The recruits are acclaimed by the commanding officers in special ceremonies, and letters are sent to their families, instructing them in the conduct becoming to the relatives of a soldier. His life, which has been claimed by the Emperor, they must consider before their own. They must under no circumstances be a handicap to him in the performance of his duty. Many a mother has committed suicide rather than be a burden on her soldier-son.

Two small boys who would have no one to care for them if their father obeyed the call to active service in Manchuria bared their bodies to his sword and died with the Emperor's name on their lips recently. Another conscripted father gave his motherless daughters to a brother. It is not uncommon for wives to be divorced and sent back to their parents when the call to arms comes.

The conscript drills all day, cleans equipment in the evening, and, by way of amusement, listens to lectures on the duties of the soldier.

His pay is small and he is not allowed to receive gifts of money from his parents. His officers, likewise, some of them from rich families, are not permitted to enjoy private means. They must live the common soldier's life and eat his food—rice and vegetables.

Capture Is Dishonor.

The conscript's required two years are passed in increasing rigorous training. Whatever topographical features the country nearby possesses are used. If there are mountains they must be climbed where the climbing is hardest. If there are marshes they must be waded. Rivers in flood are crossed by raft or improvised bridge. Deep snow means an exhausting "snow march." The bitterest days in winter and the hottest in summer are seized on as appropriate times for field exercises. When the ground is frozen, trenches are dug.

All this is intended to give not merely physical training but moral stamina. The result is a fighting machine that is obtuse to discomfort, seeks always to submit itself to new tests, and looks on self-sacrifice as the normal way of life or of death. Death rather than surrender is a strict rule of conduct. To be taken prisoner is "a dishonor of the greatest magnitude." During the Shanghai incident, Maj. Koga, lying unconscious on the field, was taken prisoner. When released he went to a military shrine and committed suicide. Gen. Araki praised Koga as a hero. "Whatever the circumstances," he said, "one cannot expect to live after being taken prisoner by the enemy."

Crawl in Cannon Muzzles.

This training explains why it is easy in the Japanese army to get volunteers to serve as human bombs, or to ride within torpedoes to certain death, or to wedge their bodies into the muzzles of cannon so that the obstruction may blow the guns to bits before they may fall into the hands of the enemy.

THIRD OF STOCK EXCHANGE REGISTRATION BLANKS FILLED

Process Is Required Under Securities Control Act of 1934.

About one-third of the 75 corporations whose stocks are listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange have so far filled out and returned the registration blanks sent to them a week ago yesterday by the exchange.

Registration is required under the securities exchange control act of 1934. The Chicago Stock Exchange reported last week that 134 of the 262 corporations whose stocks are listed there have returned registration blanks. Reports from New York were that 502 applications for registration had been received by the New York Stock Exchange.

At a special meeting yesterday members of the St. Louis Exchange adopted an amendment to its by-laws making willful violation of the exchange control act "conduct inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade." The exchange may discipline its members for such conduct.

PORK PRICES IN CITY ARE HIGHEST IN YEARS

Some Recession Last Few Days Because Consumers Are Turning to Other Meats.

Reflecting a wholesale market combination of increased hog prices attributable to the Government's processing tax and a hog shortage, prevailing retail pork prices in St. Louis are higher than they have been for a number of years.

Meat dealers, however, point out that consumers are turning to other meats, which usually are more expensive than pork, but now are cheaper. This tendency, it was shown, has resulted in a depreciation of pork prices during the last few days, although the prevailing level still is high.

Typical retail pork prices quotations yesterday were 29 cents a pound for chops, 20 cents for fresh ham, 22 cents for loins, and 45 cents for tenderloins. In July, before the rise began, chops sold as low as 12 cents, hams 9 cents, loins 9 cents and tenderloins 25.

Cheaper than pork, ordinarily termed "the poor man's meat," were such meats as chuck roast, ground beef, soup meats lamb chops, even some steaks.

Big Sales Last Month.

While the increasing momentum of a "consumer's strike" is beginning to force pork prices down, packers were enabled last month to dispose of millions of pounds of cured meat, purchased about eight months ago when hogs were cheap, ranging between $3.50 and $5 for 100 pounds, at the higher prices.

Approximately 40,000,000 pounds of cured hog meat was released during the month of August by packers located in the seven principal western markets, including this area. Provision statistics show a withdrawal from packing houses in this area during the month of about 6,500,000 pounds, including lard.

Fresh meat, sold usually within 10 days of its receipt, is predicated on current market conditions with the packers depending upon the choice cuts to "carry the load" for the entire hog, since about half the hog represents inedible matter and lard, sold far below the price the packer paid for the hog.

Recent Price on Hogs.

Hogs were quoted yesterday at about $7.50 a hundred pounds, a recession from the $8 quotations the latter part of last month. To this must be added the processing tax of $2.25. This tax, used to finance the Federal hog reduction program, is collected by the packer for the Government and passed on to the consumer. It goes back to the farmers who signed hog reduction agreements, less expenses of administering the program.

Livestock men estimate that consumers in the St. Louis metropolitan area will pay about $15,000,000 in processing taxes on hogs alone during 1934. This national expense of farm relief, including corn crop allotments, is estimated at $350,000,000.

Cousin of Grover Cleveland Dies.

By the Associated Press.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 8.—Eugene W. Cleveland, 77 years old, died here Friday. A technical engineer, Cleveland originated the seven-inch valve stoke for locomotives, an achievement which revolutionized engine construction. His great-grandfather was the founder of Cleveland, and his father, Charles de Wolf Cleveland, was a first cousin of President Cleveland.

ST. LOUIS-ST. PAUL STEEL RATES UPHELD

I.C.C. Examiner Recommends Dismissal of Missouri Valley Cities' Complaint.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended today dismissal of the complaint of trade organizations in four Missouri Valley cities against freight rates on iron and steel articles from Chicago, St. Louis and Duluth to Omaha and other points.

Trade organizations of Omaha, Sioux City, Ia., and Sioux Falls and Aberdeen, S. D., alleged the rates were unreasonable and prejudicial; they also said the rates on certain iron and steel articles from Duluth to Minneapolis and St. Paul were discriminatory.

Examiner William A. Disque, who heard the case, said that "the record establishes that the rates assailed are not unlawful as alleged."

The examiner's report is preliminary and tentative, and the commission has yet to make its decision.

'There is nothing new about the maintenance from Chicago and St. Louis of much lower rates to the Twin Cities than to the Missouri Valley cities," Disque said in his report.

"Wide disparities in favor of the Twin Cities existed for many years prior to Dec. 3, 1931, but on that date they were removed by the rates on the 32.5 per cent basis. On Oct. 26, 1932, the existing rates to Twin Cities, representing substantial reductions, were established by the railroad, having been justified in another case.

"The defendants are maintaining the reduced rates to the Twin Cities as a necessary means of holding to their line traffic that might otherwise go by truck from Chicago or Duluth; by truck or river barge from St. Louis; or by lake from such points as Chicago, Cleveland, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., as far as Duluth and thence by truck.

"The principal force behind the establishment of these rates was actual and threatened truck movements from Chicago. The rates are supposed to approximate the truck rates and their establishment had the effect of practically stopping the truck movements.

"Complainants seek relatively the same rates to the Missouri Valley cities as applied to the Twin Cities. claiming the truck competition exists to both sets of destinations and calls for equality of statement of defendants. In May, 1934, upon the receipt of information on shipping interests that truck competition from Chicago to Missouri Valley cities had developed, defendants decided upon rates from Chicago of 35 cents to Omaha and Sioux City and 36 cents to Sioux Falls, with related rates from St. Louis and Kansas City. They later decided to not meet these reductions, but let the situation remain as it was, at least for the time being, hoping that the NRA code of fair competition, requiring delivered prices to be made on the basis of the all-rail rates and regardless of the rates of other agencies of transportation, would hold most of the traffic to the rails.

"The testimony, taken in early April 1934, is to the effect that the code covered only a few of the iron and steel articles, and that it affected only manufacturers thereof and such jobbers as agreed with to observe the code."

WILLIAM E. HUTTON, FOUNDER OF INVESTMENT HOUSE, DIES

His Success Story Was: "Bank on U. S. and Remember That Few Bear Speculators Die Rich."

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 8.—William E. Hutton, founder of the investment house bearing his name, and "a bull on America" long before the phrase was coined, died of pneumonia at his home today.

He retired in 1925 and thereafter revealed his one-sentence success story: "Bank on the United States," he used to say, "and remember that few bear speculators die rich."

Distilling attracted his first business interest. Then he thought he saw more opportunity in investment operations. He became a one-man, one-desk investment house. By the time he retired, W. E. Hutton & Co. was an influential house with offices in New York and sundry cities of the Middle West.

Financial statistics mixed themselves up with baseball averages, stories of the good old days of baseball and of finance poured with equal facility from his tongue, and there was no restraining him when there was a ball game to be seen in town.

Hutton was born in Belmont County, Ohio, and moved to Cincinnati in boyhood. He was listed as a veteran of the Civil War, but actually his war service consisted of little more than guard duty against Morgan's raiders around Cincinnati. He had two sons, J. M. Hutton and W. D. Hutton.

Hutton became ill while visiting the world's fair in Chicago 10 days ago, and became bedfast on his return home. He will be buried here Monday.

37 SWIMMERS SAVED BY MERAMEC PATROL

Rescue Crew Credited With Unrecorded Number of 'Assists' During Season.

The Meramec River Patrol saved the outdoor swimming season just closed, according to the annual report issued yesterday by Charles F. Schmidt, president of the patrol.

The number, smaller than in former years, was due, in part, to the fact that the Meramec this year lost much of its attraction as a holiday spot because of the stagnant condition of the water.

Since it was organized seven years ago the Meramec River Patrol has saved the lives of 228 persons, in addition to making an unrecorded number of "assists" for swimmers and canoeists encountering minor difficulties. During the winter months the members of the patrol meet twice weekly for a swim in indoor pools.

The projects included public roads on which 8186 were employed receiving $337,895; other Federal work employing 4501 with a $245,881 payroll and non-Federal construction, giving employment to 3577 and providing wages of $177,628.

Materials ordered for Federal projects, excluding public roads, were valued at $444,852, and for non-Federal work, $1,093,446. Non-Federal work included railroad construction made possible by PWA loans.

Robbed of Clothes and Auto.

CHICKASHA, Ok., Sept. 8.—Two brothers-in-law, kidnaped yesterday by two convicts who shot a guard and escaped from the State prison, were released last night four miles west of Chickasha. The two, Charles Reguleski and Dominic Sokoloski, were unharmed but were forced to change clothes with the convicts, who also took their car. They said the fugitives, Danzil Chastain and Burt Pope, both lifetermers, had two pistols and one round of ammunition and that they announced they intended to rob a bank. They wounded a guard and commandeered a mail truck.

RITCHIE STAKES CAREER ON QUEST FOR FIFTH TERM

Maryland Executive's Nomination Is Certain Next Wednesday — Election Not So Sure.

BREAKS POLITICAL PRECEDENT IN U. S.

No Man Has Been Party Choice for Governor Five Times Straight Without Defeat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 8.—A political precedent for the United States is to be established next Wednesday in Maryland by the renomination of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in the Democratic primary. Chief executive 16 years in a state where previously none had been re-elected since Colonial days, Ritchie is certain to be his party's choice for a fifth term. George L. Radcliffe, a New Dealer and former business associate of President Roosevelt, is equally certain of the Democratic senatorial nomination and of being opposed by a Republican conservative in November.

In no other state has a man been nominated for Governor five times straight without a defeat. Alfred E. Smith had the New York Democratic gubernatorial nomination five times in a row, but with one defeat in the lot. He was renominated in 1920, only to lose to Nathan L. Miller in the Harding landslide. Smith's four terms at Albany covered eight years in the aggregate. Gov. Ritchie's four terms cover 16 years straight.

George Wylie Paul Hunt, seven times Governor of Arizona and now a candidate again, had two breaks in his record, never five terms straight and no tenure of office as long as Gov. Ritchie's.

Governorship Is Prized.

The Governorship of Maryland is a political prize rated by Marylanders as second only to the Presidency. In salaries and perquisites the position pays close to $55,000 a year, including the fine old Colonial executive mansion in Annapolis, a regal state yacht and generous allowances for entertainment and traveling, in addition to salary and maintenance. The Governor is not only the boss of the dominant political party; he is the center of the social life of the Free State.

To hold that office for another four years against all precedents and other men's ambitions Gov. Ritchie, now in his fifty-ninth year, is staking his political future. He could have had the United States Senatorship for the asking. His party would have nominated him hands down and his election this year probably would have followed without difficulty.

To avoid a party schism, Senator Millard C. Tydings, who must run two years hence, all but begged Gov. Ritchie to drop the Governorship now and take a term in the Senate. Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, a rising figure in the Maryland Democracy, tried to force the Governor's hand by announcing himself a candidate for the Maryland Governorship. The Eastern Shore, resenting the Governor's interference with its little lynching party last year, served unmistakable notice of hostility. Even the Governor's own political lieutenants wondered if the pitcher might not be going to the well once too often.

Filed and Went to Europe.

Tydings introduced a candidate of his own for the Governorship, but Gov. Ritchie went through with his determination just the same. With three other candidates already in the race, two of them strong contenders, the Governor spurned a party conference to prepare a slate and filed for his fifth term. Then he went off to Europe for six weeks.

It looked as if the Democratic party were headed straight for disaster against an otherwise good outlook. The Republicans took courage. Senator Phillips Le Goldsborough, Republican, facing a re-election contest, decided to abandon Washington and seek a return to the governorship he had held some 20 years ago. Harry W. Nice and H. Webster Smith, aggressive Baltimore lawyers, filed for the same nomination.

John Phillip Hill, once a Republican member of Congress from Baltimore, filed for the Republican senatorial nomination. Joseph I. France, the only candidate to oppose President Hoover for a renomination in 1932, became a second major candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination.

Democrats Untangle Themselves.

When the nomination lists were all in, every Marylander with a semblance of national prominence was involved directly or indirectly. Obviously, Maryland looked like good fighting ground to Democrats and Republicans this year. But then the Democrats began to untangle themselves.

Radcliffe, President Roosevelt's friend and Senator Tydings' candidate for Governor, turned about, abandoned the gubernatorial race and announced for the senatorship. Mayor Jackson, protesting that this disorganized his strategy, dropped out of the governorship contest and joined in the welcoming reception when Gov. Ritchie returned triumphantly from a month on the French Riviera to find his opposition reduced to a single comparatively obscure candidate of a year's standing—Dr. Charles H. Conley of Frederick.

It assured Gov. Ritchie's renomination. Re-election in November will be another matter. The Republicans may make it easy or hard. Recapturing the Governorship against an organization 16 years in the building seems out of the question if conditions are normal and the Democratic party is united.

Two Senatorial Candidates.

For the Democratic senatorial nomination Radcliffe has only one opponent, William M. Maloy. Maloy is a vigorous Baltimore lawyer, but with an organization of doubtful strength. With Senator Tydings and many of the other leaders behind him, Radcliffe is considered certain of nomination.

Radcliffe is an Eastern Shore business man. He is a former vice-president of the Fidelity and Deposit Co., incidentally the first bonding company in the United States. Before going to the Governorship of New York, President Roosevelt held a corresponding position with the same corporation in New York. Radcliffe was his senior and superior.

When Roosevelt became President, he made Radcliffe his Federal Relief Administrator for Maryland. Since Radcliffe is an earnest backer of the Roosevelt policies, his nomination will assure a clear-cut New Deal issue in the Maryland senatorial contest in November. All the major Republican senatorial candidates are conservatives by present standards. The choice probably lies between France and Hill. France is a man of means and no mean orator, but it would be unsafe to say he has an edge on Hill. Linwood L. Clark and C. Wilbur Miller are others who filed for the Republican senatorial nomination.

In normal years it is against the Maryland tradition to send a Republican to the Senate. The tradition this year may well depend on the New Deal issue. Maryland is not its strongest supporter. No newspaper in the country is more outspoken against the Roosevelt policies than the independent Democratic Baltimore Sun, leading Free State newspaper. Editorially it is in the forefront of the attack. Frank R. Kent, its able and incisive front-page columnist, never misses a chance to fire a satirical shaft into the administration. If the New Deal wins in Maryland in November it will win against considerable oppositilon in the President's own party.

An inventory of the estate of Mrs. Cora Seward King, filed in Probate Court yesterday, shows personal property valued at $129,574, consisting principally of bonds totaling $121,756. Real estate in St. Louis County and in Jones County, Hood County and Wheeler County, Texas, also was listed but not appraised.

Mrs. King bequeathed the bulk of her estate to her three daughters, Mrs. Cora Lee Rose of this city, Mrs. Helen Gethman of Geneva, Switzerland, and Mrs. Marie Shackleton of Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. Rose, Francis J. Seward, Jr., a nephew, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. were appointed executors.

A former resident of St. Louis, Mrs. King died in Geneva June 18. She was the widow of Hamilton King, who served as Minister to Siam for 14 years during the administrations of Presidents McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Taft.

INCOMPETENT M'CORMICK HAS $3,385,000 INCOME

Conservators' Disbursements Include $81,000 for Doctor's Bills, $55,000 to Lawyers.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Stanley McCormick, adjudged incompetent several years ago, had an income of $3,385,678.05 last year. His conservators, including his wife, Mrs. Katherine Dexter McCormick, his brother, Harold F. McCormick, and the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., won the approval of the Probate Court today for the manner in which they had distributed the money.

The conservators' report gives an idea of what it costs a rich man to be sick. For example, $81,395 went for medical bills and $8000 more for "therapeutic treatments."

Other disbursements included $100,000 as fees to the Continental Bank, $15,000 to Harold F. McCormick as co-conservator, $30,000 to the law firm of Mayer Meyer, Austrian & Platt as attorneys for the estate, $25,000 to Newton D. Baker as attorney for Mrs. McCormick, and $250,000 as an allowance to Mrs. McCormick herself, whose previous allowance had been only $200,000.

Orpheum Opening Completes Line-Up Of Movie Houses

OPENING of the Orpheum Theater next Saturday by the Warner Bros. organization will complete the line-up of movie houses that is likely to remain during the coming season, since the Fanchon and Marco management, with five theaters, is keeping two of them, the St. Louis and Grand Central, dark indefinitely.

The Orpheum will open with a single feature, "British Agent," starring Leslie Howard and Kay Francis. Double bills will follow, however, since Warner Bros., with their own pictures and the Paramount and R-K-O product to show, will virtually be required to play double bills at the Orpheum and Shubert, their other first-run house, to take care of the output.

An interesting development in bookings last week was the assigning of Mae West's picture, "Belle of the Nineties," a Paramount picture, to the Fanchon and Marco interests, who will show it at the Ambassador, beginning Thursday. Before being recalled to Hollywood last summer for fumigation, the picture was originally scheduled for the Ambassador. With acquisition of new Paramount releases by Warner Bros. locally, there had been an announcement that the Mae West picture probably would be shown at a Warner Bros. house.

APPARENTLY motion pictures, aside from legitimate fare at the American Theater, will be the only entertainment offered to St. Louisans in any predictable future. Stage shows are expensive ventures and it is almost certain that if one were to be presented this winter it would be only one—probably at the Ambassador. Stock companies, which in past years used the Orpheum and Empress, would now find both showing films. and only one or two other possible stages would be available.

Wiring of the Orpheum for sound pictures represents the final extension of talkie equipment to the legitimate houses in town. Extensive repairs have been made by Warner Bros. in getting the theater ready. Patrons will find a new box office arrangement, a new smoking room on the first floor, a washed and repainted interior, new carpeting and new coverings on the seats.

The 2200-seat house had been gathering dust, before Warner Bros. took it over, since January, 1932, when Mary Hart closed her stock company operations. Originally the St. Louis house of the Orpheum circuit, it was taken over by R-K-O when that organization was formed with Orpheum as one of the component interests. R-K-O vaudeville went to the St. Louis Theater, a bigger house, and R-K-O subleased the house to the Arthur Casey Stock Company and Mary Hart, who followed. Eventually, R-K-O abandoned the Orpheum, St. Louis and Grand Opera House, which it also controlled. The Orpheum was built in 1916 and is owned locally by the Cella real estate interests.

Bergner in "Escape Me Never."

"Escape Me Never," the London stage success starring Elizabeth Bergner, is to be made as a screen play in England, with Miss Bergner repeating her role. Dr. Paul Czinner, her husband, who directed her in "Catherine the Great" will also direct the new picture, which will be released through United Artists.

John Charles Thomas First Condon Artist

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS, American baritone, will open the 1934-35 recital season in St. Louis, appearing in the Music Hall of the Municipal Auditorium on Wednesday evening, Oct. 31, as the first attraction of the Condon Concert Course. Thomas' appearance last season under the same auspices, and his success at that time, resulted in his re-engagement.

Second of the five attractions on the Condon Course will be the American violin virtuoso, Albert Spalding, whose recital is scheduled for Thursday evening, Dec. 13. The pianist engaged for the series is Ernest Hutcheson, who is said to have the most exhaustive repertoire of any living pianist, some 700 compositions in all. His Sunday evening radio recitals during the past several seasons have attracted world-wide attention. Hutcheson will appear on Thursday evening, Jan. 17.

The fourth event, on Thursday evening, March 28, will present Rosa Ponselle, leading dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who has not been heard in St. Louis for several years. The final attraction will be on Thursday evening, April 11, when Tito Schipa, lyric tenor, will be heard in recital. All Condon concerts will be held in the Music Hall and every seat will be reserved.

Walthall Gets New Contract.

Henry B. Walthall, who has just completed a featured role in the new Will Rogers picture, "Judge Priest," has been signed to a long-term contract on the basis of his work in the Irvin S. Cobb story. Walthall, star of silent films, now making a comeback, will have a major role in John Erskine's "Bachelor of Arts," which will go into production early next month.

The Old Hat in the Movies

by H. H. NIEMEYER

Most Players Have a Good Luck Charm of Some Sort and, Among the Males, It Usually Runs to Sky-Pieces—Municipal Opera Still Furnishing the Cinema With Stars, With Queenie Smith the Latest One to Crash the Gates.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.

THE films are continuing to remove Municipal Opera stars from the fields of music. Cary Grant has probably done better out here than any of the other imports from Forest Park and is lost forever to the stage. And now Queenie Smith, an occasional visitor to St. Louis for a week or two every summer, is about to take the plunge into celluloid. We saw, the other night, the first tests made here of little Miss Smith. Every person trying to break into pictures whether invited in or just trying on their own hook, has to take a screen test. Stage reputations count for nothing out here except, of course, when, after tests prove satisfactory, the important question of salary comes up. There have been occasions when big stars from the spoken drama have been unable to pass the camera examinations. Sometimes they just don't photograph even passably. Sometimes their voices won't get across in the "mike." It is possible, on occasions, to correct the faults but, at other times the player is simply out of films before he gets in.

Queenie Smith's tests were something more than satisfactory and she is assured of star billing in an early picture and, if she clicks, Municipal Opera will see her no more. Her trials before the camera were exacting. She went through a couple of reels of showing what she could do and registered everything, in a series of little sketches of her own making, from singing and dancing to tragedy. In the latter example of her acting, something new to the theatergoers back in St. Louis where she is known only for her work in light musical affairs, little Miss Smith went over remarkably well and it is that line of work that she is anxious to get placed. Her reputation as a musical comedy star, however, will be hard to shake off and her first picture will likely be along the lines of "Sally" or something of that sort. At all events Queenie Smith is in pictures.

AND there is W. C. Fields. Fields was trying, with more or less indifferent success to reach his place in the Hollywood sun when Municipal Opera reached out and got him, two or three summers ago, for "Show Boat." He went to St. Louis willingly enough then to play the role of Cap'n Andy in the Ziegfeld classic of Mississippi River days and the $3000-a-week-salary he drew down looked like a million to him. Now he is a real cinema luminary and several times that amount would not tempt him back to the stage.

Forest Park show goers may remember the old battered silk hat which Fields wore in "Show Boat." It was not just a part of the regular costume. It is the hat which he wears, at one time or another, in every picture he makes and the same top piece he used to wear in his vaudeville days when he was known best as a tramp juggler without a line to say.

The "old hat" superstition still has its adherents in Hollywood.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr., was the first of the stars to place great faith in an old bedraggled felt hat as a good luck symbol. One day, when he lost it, he advertised in the local newspapers offering $100 reward for the battered head piece although its original cost had been less than one-tenth of that, eight years before. Fairbanks recovered the hat and paid the reward.

Joe Penner is another actor who would rather part with his pet duck than his old hat. Penner's favorite, Ambassador Theater fans will recall, is a tiny cloth affair that he used to wear in vaudeville. When Penner was making a deal for a part in "College Rhythm," he wore that hat throughout the negotiations and has insisted on wearing it during at least some of the scenes in the picture.

LANNY ROSS, also of the "College Rhythm" cast, always carries with him an old panama that he wore in his college days at Yale. He wore it to the intercollegiate track races the day he was crowned intercollegiate quarter mile champion; he wore it to New York when under his direction, the Yale Glee Club won the intercollegiate title; he had it on his head the summer day he first went on the radio and he has worn it to and from the studio ever since he has been in Hollywood.

Director Elliott Nugent, now megaphoning "Enter Madame" with Elissa Landi and Cary Grant, rarely admits it, but his freshman cap, a little dinky red and white affair of his frosh days at Ohio State University is his good-luck piece. He carries it in his hip-pocket whenever he is working.

An old Stetson cowboy hat, of his Montana ranching days, is Gary Cooper's No. 1 charm. He wore it in the early days, when he was only a door-to-door canvasser for a Hollywood photographer and he wore it when he first was granted a screen test. Now, he doesn't wear it any more, but that hat occupies a place of honor in Gary's study, which is a museum for relics of his cowboy days. Gary says he would not part with that old hat for $500

But Fields' high silk hat is his charm. He discarded it when he first tried motion pictures and now blames his failure then upon this neglect. Now, you will note, he always wears it in at least one scene of his picture; its latest appearance will be in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The hat has been relined, cleaned a hundred times and rebuilt by the best hatters in the country, and has cost over $150 in repair bills, but Fields says that it's more than worth the costs.

EVERY time Fields signs a new contract, he weighs a number of items very carefully. Preparing to start work in "Back Porch," Fields today recalled that, although he received money for his first job as an entertainer, he had to pay for the privilege of working.

"It was at the Flynn and Grant Park, about 25 miles from Philadelphia," Fields told me. "I received $5 weekly, and a couple of meals a day. The proposition sounded great, so I accepted. But I had to pay my agent $1.50 a week, and the carfare from Philadelphia to the Park and back cost me $4 weekly."

Abbey Theater Tour To Include St. Louis

The Abbey Theater Company, Dublin, Ireland, will make an extensive tour of the United States during the coming season in a repertory of Irish plays. Present plans would make the company's arrival in St. Louis late in February.

Sailing for the United States on Sept. 29, the company will play at various New England and Canadian cities before opening at the Martin Beck Theater in New York on Nov. 12. Authors whose works will be presented are Sean O'Casey, W. B. Yeats, Lady Gregory, J. M. Synge, Lennox Robinson and others.

Freaks of Nature Sought for Picture

Activity on "The Mighty Barnum," screen adaptation of M. R. Werner's book on the world-famous showman, has started with a call for duplicates of the "marvels of nature" with which the late P. T. Barnum once startled the world.

The list includes a two-headed cow, a three-headed frog, a camel with three humps, a calf with five legs, Siamese twin chickens, a rooster that talks like a parrot and a cat that barks like a dog. These are for authentic touches in the story of one of America's most unusual figures. Wallace Beery is to play the title role.

Ann Sothern in "Blind Date," at the Missouri.

Dames.

JUST what Busby Berkeley is striving for by having a host of West Coast beauties imitate a kaleidoscope on the screen is not plain, but it is quite clear that in "Dames," at the Shubert, he does more striving than ever before. Until the screen achieves a third dimension, however, such visional elaboration must still look a great deal like animated cartoons. And, to save money, why not cartoons? The principal stunt this time is the "Eyes For You" number, a black and white affair with all the "dames" in the world looking like Ruby Keeler and riding around on a $40,000 contraption that appears to be the wedding of a Ferris wheel and an escalator on a turn-table. All of this, incidentally, plus a subway car barn, a laundry and a few other sets, are supposed to be presented in a mythical musical comedy at the Bijou Theater, New York (seating capacity, 615 persons!). The plot bears the impress of "42d Street," "Gold-Diggers of 1933" and successors from the same studio. Joan Blondell takes first honors for comedy and her "Girl At the Ironing Board" number quite plainly inspired by "The Man On the Flying Trapeze," is really an event in movie musicals. Hugh Herbert, as a millionaire on a morals crusade, lends a whimsical touch; Guy Kibbee and Zasu Pitts are what you expect. Songs in the show are not exceptional and one, "When You Were a Smile," seems to be quite pointlessly in bad taste. Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler are, of course, innocent and charming. And if you want to take Aunt Hannah with you to see them, she will probably get ideas for new quilt patterns from the Berkeley stuff.

Chained.

"CHAINED," at Loew's, is all-Hollywood, a special concoction to please the most customers. Such efforts usually represent pieces of more worthy efforts by the same stars melted into something that looks new but isn't. In box office appeal, "Chained" can't miss and almost anybody in the industry will tell you as much. There's Joan Crawford, style-setter for the American working girl, and Gable, the tired wife's delight. The male population will go along for escort, as usual. The story: Joan, speed-mad darling of Otto Kruger, ship owner, is sent to South American on a luxury liner so Otto can persuade friend-wife to go to Reno or some other climate. On the boat, Joan meets Clark, who is on the way to his horse hatchery in the Argentine. Love. Love, I tell you. Joan goes back to New York to tell Otto just how it is but since he has already ditched wife and children for her, she feels she cannot go South now. A sacrifice play she makes, with only Otto advancing. In a matter of a year or so, Clark comes to New York and Otto understands. Stuart Erwin, Clark's friend, has some gleaming lines, it's a nice cruise Joan takes and she has so many clothes—they're nice, too, although it is sometimes distracting to see the emotional lady with a hairdress that would delight a Tibetan chieftain's favorite or wearing a coat that makes her resemble a sampan fleeing from pirates. Miss Crawford has very much genuine, high-brow acting ability and deserves something with more substance to it than "Chained." Gable, a fine comedian, would be benefited if he were kept away from weak romantic passages. But, of course, there's no use getting angry about it.

Servant's Entrance.

FOR pure enjoyment, "Servants' Entrance," at the Fox, probably offers more than any other picture of the week, despite the fact that it has a rather ponderous weight around its neck in "She Was a Lady," which shares the bill. "Servants' Entrance" is made of something fresh, is not too exaggerated to be sensible and provides a wealth of human comedy. Janet Gaynor, as the daughter of a wealthy Swedish automobile manufacturer, is about to marry a boy named Karl, but decides that she will first learn how to be a good housewife. She hires out as a kitchen maid. In due time, she discovers she is more fond of her employer's chauffeur, Lew Ayres, than of her finance. Events weave themselves into a happy ending, with Lew, as inventor of a speedboat, going into business with his future father-in-law, Walter Connolly. Connolly's role of paternal cupid is almost his from "It Happened One Night," and worth even more chuckles. Ned Sparks as a gloomy newspaper cartoonist without an idea, Siegfried Rumann as a retired brewer for whom Janet works, and other characters contribute bits to a very pleasant evening. "She Was a Lady" is something about Helen Twelvetrees' true station in life and places where she tells people to get off. She really is a lady—that's what makes it very dull.

The Defense Rests.

BUILT of very ordinary stuff, "The Defense Rests," at the Missouri, rises above the average motion picture in that Jack Holt gives flesh-and-blood character to a screen lawyer, a "mouthpiece" for the underworld. The action opens with Holt, unethical but highly successful, making a commencement address at the school from which he was graduated. For publicity purposes, he takes some beautiful slashes at the ethics of his profession. One dizzy young thing in the graduating class, Jean Arthur, decides to go to work for him and teach him to be on our side. She gets the job and the tale moves through a murder and a kidnaping case. Jean, unsuccessful in trying to get Jack not to defend a kidnaper, works up a case of subornation of perjury against Jack himself. But Jack proves he is of stern stuff and enlists under the banner of the right. Justice, then, and union forever. The plot is well-knit, the action moves swiftly and there are several little gems, namely, Holt's commencement address and Nat Pendleton's remarks on fan-dancing. "Blind Date," also being shown, is a well-directed version of the familiar poor working girl-rich playboy romance.

There's Always Tomorrow.

POOR old dad has to fix the furnace, give the kids the car and can't even find a place to sit down to read the newspaper, in "There's Always Tomorrow," at the Ambassador. And it is the wife in this case, Lois Wilson, who forgets the anniversaries. So there is nothing to do but for dad, Frank Morgan, to stay out in the cold until along comes a little warmth in the person of Binnie Barnes. From then on, dad has "lodge meeting" every Thursday night, but no initiation, so far as can be told. What should happen but that the kiddies stumble onto the rendezvous and even meet the lady. From then on it's their problem to keep mama from finding out and keep dad at home. Binnie, of course, makes the noble gesture and dear mama never knows, but comes to her senses anyway. Morgan, who can give a good performance anytime, doesn't have enough to do in this case to be more than bewildered. Binnie's tales without names for the children are a genuine bore. "The Lady Is Willing," with Leslie Howard and the ubiquitous Binnie, is another Guy Bolton flimsy of the same variety as "Kiss and Make Up" and "Should Ladies Listen." It has Leslie Howard, as a detective, dressing up in a blonde beard, trying to recover money a French swindler has taken from various people and kidnaping the financier's wife. It ought to be funnier and the audience is ready to laugh at any moment. But it doesn't.

Hollywood "Says It With Music" On New Schedules

THE arrival of "Dames" at the Shubert serves to announce a season in which the screen musical, that many-headed hydra of the film lots, will again break forth in multifarious forms. Musicals as a screen element simply will not stay dead.

St. Louis in the near future will see Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in "The Merry Widow," "Caravan," a gypsy musical pageant with Charles Boyer, Loretta Young and Jean Parker, "Student Tour" with Jimmie Durante and Charles Butterworth, and the truly exceptional "One Night of Love," with Grace Moore.

"La Cucaracha," a musical short subject in color, is acquiring a considerable reputation in other cities where it has been shown and is due here soon.

FRED ASTAIRE and Ginger Rogers have just completed "The Gay Divorcee" and many other musicals are under way in Hollywood or about to start. In that list are "Casino de Paree" for Al Jolson, "Sweet Adeline," starring Irene Dunne and Hugh Herbert, "Music in the Air" with Gloria Swanson and John Boles, "Flirtation Walk" (Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell), "Here Is My Heart" (Bing Crosby, Kitty Carlisle), "College Rhythm," (Joe Penner, Lanny Ross), and "Sweet Music" (Rudy Vallee).

The Laurel-Hardy fantasy, "Babes in Toyland," promises to be one of their best efforts. Eddie Cantor will offer "Kid Millions." "Naughty Marietta" will be modernized for Jeanette MacDonald.

Meanwhile, no picture is made now without some music connected with it. There is melody at the opening or closing or incidental strains somewhere along the way. And Hollywood has all but lived down the maddening theme songs of its early days. Musical scoring has become so unobtrusive that many audiences leave the theater without being aware of having heard any music at all.

SCORING is now a highly artistic job. One studio, for instance, has a library of 300,000 musical selections from which to draw and virtually every phonograph recording offered in catalogues.

The score now suits even the locale and period of the story. In "Servants' Entrance" at the Fox this week, the locale is modern Sweden and the theme of a light comedy variety. The studio found that many old Swedish folk-tunes possessed the spirit wanted and borrowed freely from them. Composers wrote original numbers for sequences where the folk-tunes could not be employed but kept the same motif.

"We have learned many things about screen music, what we can do with it and what we can't," said James O'Keefe, head of the Fox studio music department, in commenting on "Servants' Entrance." "For instance, we can prepare or emphasize a mood or enhance it but we must never try to create one, nor try to attract attention to the music itself.

"Consequently, our chief aim is to point up the emotional quality of the picture as a whole and of each scene, without allowing the music to dominate. I am speaking, of course, of so-called background or incidental music, not of song numbers.

"Where formerly a musical director reached at random into the files labeled 'battle music,' 'love music' and the like and drew out a standard number, had it recorded and jammed it forcibly into a picture, now our own composers write an accompaniment for each scene that demands a musical accompaniment and fit it in as delicately as a watchmaker assembles a timepiece."

Veiled Prophet's Den Hums With Parade Preparations

Twenty Glittering Floats Being Built for His Majesty's 55th Annual Visit to St. Louis on Oct. 2.

In the dingy den of the Veiled Prophet on Ranken avenue, twenty floats that will form the glittering retinue of His Mysterious Majesty for his fifty-fifth annual visit to St. Louis the night of Oct. 2 are being rushed to completion.

Secrecy, which the Prophet appears to prize so highly, has been thrown about the proceedings in the den since last January when design of the floats was begun. Consequently, no one except the workmen, the artist-designer and a few of the committee who handle the Prophet's affairs in St. Louis between his visits, know what the theme of this year's parade is to be.

Within a few weeks, the committee will announce the theme and descriptions of the floats. But for the Prophet's subjects, particularly the children, this will whet, rather than dull the pleasure with which they will view the bright procession when having moved across the half-block of Ranken avenue to Laclede, it bursts into brilliance as its myriad electric bulbs take fire from the trolleys.

Berninghaus Back on Job.

Oscar E. Berninghaus, the St. Louis artist, who has designed the floats for the past six years, is back on the job this year. He received the theme of the parade from the committee in January, and went right to work.

First of all, he had to break down the theme into twenty subjects, each the subject of a single float. Then there was the job of designing each float to tell its story in such color and form as will appeal most pleasurably to the old gentleman and his subjects. Rough sketches were first submitted to the committee and later drawings in water color.

Preparation of the designs is complicated by the fact that the floats will be viewed from all angles. They must look as attractive to the man watching the procession from a twelfth-floor window as to the bright-eyed child that sits on the curb and watches the parade pass.

When the drawings are approved and construction is begun, the artist turns to the design of costumes to be worn by the mummers on the floats. Each float carries an average of seven persons, so that 140 costumes must be sketched in colors. These go to a staff of seamstresses, wig-makers and mask-makers, who get to work a few weeks after the carpenters, electricians and workers in papier-mache have begun to fashion the floats.

Artist's Work About Done.

Except for supervision, the job of the Prophet's artist is about done. Electricians, carpenters and other artisanss are rapidly drawing to the end of their tasks. Some day soon, when the floats are complete, the interior of the den will burst into glory as the lights are turned on and the last check is made. But nobody will be there but the close-mouthed workers for the Prophea. For the rest of the subjects of the Seer of Khorassan, there will be pleasant anticipation.

WENTZVILLE WOMAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Carrie Webb Struck Near Home — Young Driver Gives Bond.

Mrs. Carrie Webb, 65 years old, died at a St. Charles hospital at 11 o'clock Friday night of a fractured skull suffered an hour earlier when she was struck by an automobile near her home in Wentzville.

The driver, William Kenner, 20-year-old student, of Warrenton, told officers that Mrs. Webb stepped into the path of his machine on an unlighted street. He furnished bond pending an inquest.

Mrs. Webb, a widow, was returning home after visiting friends when she was struck.

BODY OF YOUTH SWEPT OFF TOP OF TRAIN IDENTIFIED

That of Joseph L. Parker, 19, Washington, Ind.; He Was Killed Aug. 14.

The body of a youth killed Aug. 14 when he and a companion were swept off the top of a Rock Island freight train by a low bridge near Bircher boulevard and West Florissant avenue, was identified at the morgue yesterday as that of Joseph L. Parker, 19 years old, Washington, Ind.

Identification was made by the youth's father, Charles Parker, a farmer. Other transients, taken off the train at Topeka, Kan., told authorities the youth had said he was from Washington, Ind., enabling police to find the family. Parker said his son was on his way to Kansas at the time of the accident. The body will be sent to Indiana for burial.

The other man killed was Bernard Kunce, 27, a painter, of St. Louis.

ALUMINUM ORE CO. PLANT TO RESUME WORK TONIGHT

Shift That Struck Aug. 10 Will Return to Job at 11 O'Clock.

Operations will be resumed at the Aluminum Ore Co. plant in East St. Louis at 11 o'clock tonight when the shift which did not report for duty at 11 p. m., Aug. 10, because of the strike, will go to work.

The strike was settled several days ago, but time was required to work out plans for reopening the plant. R. F. Rucker, general superintendent, said all departments will go into operation beginning tomorrow morning, following the schedule which prevailed when the strike was called. The plant has about 1400 employes.

Collinsville Protest on Sewage.

Directors of the Pleasant Groves School of Collinsville have protested in a letter to the City Council against city sewage emptying into a creek that passes the school. A similar protest was made two years ago, but was withdrawn when the town planned a sewer system to divert the sewage. The town recently abandoned the project, hence the new protest.

BROOM MAKERS' CODE AUTHORITY ORGANIZES

James A. Pelton of Council Bluffs, Ia., and Harry F. Ledlie of Amsterdam, N. Y., were elected president and secretary, respectively, of the Code Authority of the Broom Manufacturing Industry at a meeting yesterday at Hotel Statler. The business session, which opened Friday, was the first held by the authority members since their appointment last July.

Other members are Charles S. Brown of Paris, Ill.; Frederick C. Vollmer, Baltimore, Md.; H. P. Reynolds, Grand Prairie, Tex.; Del Arbaugh, Pueblo, Colo.; and Harry Ochman, Chicago.

Ralph H. Wales, assistant deputy administrator of the NRA, and McKenzie Shannon, legal adviser of codes, both of Washington, aided the members in organizing, as did two officers of the National Broom Manufacturing Association, Wayne H. Folger of Lockport, N. Y., and Frank F. Collins of Arcola, Ill., president and secretary, respectively, of the association.

A budget of $25,142 was voted to be used to enforce the code for one year. Funds will be raised by a levy of 1½ cent on each dozen of household and industrial brooms sold, and ½ cent on each dozen of whisk and toy brooms. Regional boards will be appointed to direct and enforce the code, which affects about 300 broom manufacturers in the country and about 5000 employes.

SLOT MACHINE OWNER GETS NEW INJUNCTION IN COUNTY

William Weinischke Dismissed His First Suit, Then Filed Another Petition.

William Weinischke, head of the W. & W. Mint Co., who dismissed his injunction suit to prevent St. Louis County officials from confiscating his slot machines last Wednesday after Circuit Attorney Mulloy had issued a temporary restraining order, filed a new petition yesterday in Circuit Court at Clayton.

Judge Mulloy again issued a temporary restraining order and an order to show cause returnable Sept. 21. The new petition is almost identical with the former, contending the slot machines are devices for entertainment and not for gambling.

COMPILING ST. LOUIS BOY SCOUT HISTORY

L. M. Hall Expects to Complete the Work for Silver Anniversary.

Lester M. Hall, dean of St. Louis scoutmasters, has returned from a vacation spent in Connecticut and in New York City, where he gathered information for the history of scouting in St. Louis he is compiling.

Much of the needed material had to be obtained from national scout headquarters in New York, he said, because of the incompleteness of records kept here in the early days of the scout movement. For several years Hall has been compiling information from old newspaper files, and he hopes to have his work completed in time for the Silver Anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America next February. He has been scoutmaster of Troop 46 since 1916.

Scouting in this country under the American plan, as distinguished from the British system and the Boy Brigades which existed here earlier, began in 1910, Hall says, and the St. Louis Council was organized in 1911.

The fall "kickoff" meeting of cubmasters of the St. Louis Council will be held at 7:30 p. m. Sept. 20 at Stix School, 226 South Euclid avenue. Each cubmaster is expected to attend, accompanied by at least one representative of his pack. Plans for fall activities, games and handicraft work will be discussed at the meeting. Much of the cub work depends on the boys' interest in hobbies such as collecting, handicraft and keeping pets, and training is given to prepare the cub for passing scout tests when he reaches the age of 12.

Field commissioners of South District will meet Tuesday at 6 p. m. at Hotel Saum to discuss plans for the Fall Rally and other district activities.

The North District field commissioners will meet at the North Side Y. M. C. A. at 8 p. m. Tuesday to plan fall activities, including the district rally to be held in O'Fallon Park, Oct. 6.

First plans for the fifth annual rally of the South District, to be held Oct. 6 in Tower Grove Park, provide for a program lasting all day instead of merely the afternoon as formerly. The rally will resemble the Camparall on a smaller scale, with contests for which the district flag and streamers will be awarded.

TROOP NOTES.

A record for the St. Louis Council was established Friday night when 10 Eagle Badges were awarded members of Webster Groves Troop 8 at a court of honor held at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Big Bend road and Bompart avenue. Those receiving Eagle badges are: Robert Berkenmeyer, Edward Breen, Donald Becker, Frank Dietch, Ralph Goerner, Robert Moller, William Miller, David Larson, Kenneth Schaefer and Paul Schwarz.

Bronze palms, awarded to Eagle scouts for obtaining five merit badges above the number required to qualify as eagles, were presented to John Schiffman, Julius Schiffman, George Rush and Donald Berkenmeyer.

In addition, 135 merit badges were distributed among 26 members of the troop, and eight other members of the troop were advanced in rank.

Scouts of Troops 92 and 262 of North District, together with representatives of Central District, participated in the dedication of a tablet by the Young Men's Division of the Chamber of Commerce on the site of old Indian council grounds at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue yesterday.

Troop 125 of Grace Presbyterian Church recently held its third encampment at Ferguson, completing a map begun on a previous trip. The day's program included a ball game and merit work under direction of H. C. Bryan, assistant scoutmaster.

MEXICAN INDEPENDENCE CELEBRATION IN ST. LOUIS

Native Dances by 40 Men in Native Costume at Event Next Saturday.

A Mexican dance and review, celebrating the 124th anniversary of the independence of Mexico, will be held next Saturday at 8 p. m. in Assembly Halls Nos. 1 and 3 of Municipal Auditorium. The festival is being sponsored by the Mexican Benefit Society of St. Louis.

The "jarabe tapatio" and other native dances will be presented by 40 young Mexicans in costume. Typical songs will be sung, and the music will be furnished by a Mexican orchestra. Following the program, a dance will be held in Assembly Hall No. 1. On Friday evening at 9 o'clock members of the society will offer an hour program of Mexican music.

The Mexican Benefit Society, a fraternal organization, was organized here in 1926 to assist the Mexican population of the city. Its membership includes both Mexicans and Americans.

Justified in Killing Stabber.

A coroner's jury at Collinsville returned a verdict of justifiable homicide at an inquest Friday night into the death of Alvis Williams, laborer, who died from injuries inflicted with a piece of gas pipe in the hands of Helmuth Thomas on August 28. Williams had stabbed Thomas in a fight.

FREE SPEECH GROUP FORMED IN ILLINOIS

Conference on Constitutional Rights Called for Saturday at Springfield.

A conference on "Constitutional Rights in Illinois" has been called at the Elks' Club, Springfield, Ill., for next Saturday.

The organization calling the conference is the Committee for the Restoration of Constitutional Rights in Illinois which has opened an office at 526 East Adams street, Springfield. The Rev. Clark Walker Cummings of Springfield is chairman and Edward L. Adams Jr. is secretary. About 40 persons have been named on the General Committee.

In circular letters inviting labor unions and religious, fraternal, liberal and radical organizations to send delegates, the purpose of the organization is said to be primarily to resist any movement that tends to deny freedom of speech or the right of public assembly.

"For the past two years," the letter says, "there has existed in certain parts of the State of Illinois a very definite denial of constitutional rights. Public meetings have been prohibited by order of sheriffs, police officers and public officials and the right of free speech denied. This has been done in direct violation of the laws and constitution of Illinois and the United States.

"During the past few months this repression has spread and a new movement has come into existence. In many places there have arisen organized reactionary groups whose aim is the suppression of freedom of speech and of assembly for those who disagree with them."

The committee fears such moves will lead to complete loss of freedom, if not checked, and to Fascism.

Kansas City Lawyer Pleads on Radio for Constitutional Rights.

The rights of habeas corpus, peaceable assembly and freedom of speech and press were described as bulwarks of American liberty by Cliff Langsdale, Kansas City lawyer, in an address broadcast last night over radio stations in St. Louis and Kansas City. The address was under auspices of the Radio Committee of the Missouri State Bar Association, which is sponsoring a series of talks on "The Preservation of American Liberties."

The speaker told how the guarantee of these rights came to be included in the United States Constitution and told of the struggle in England through which these rights were established long before the formation of the United States.

"We have long been entrenched behind these rights," he said. "So secure have we been for centuries that it may seem idle to contemplate their loss. So it seemed in Germany a few short months ago I need not comment on conditions there today. We must be constantly on guard that no self-satisfied attitude of mind will permit or condone the abridgement of any one of them, by any authority, or because of any emergency. The scars that would be left by any such abridgement or suspension would torment us long after the emergency was forgotten."

ST. LOUIS PEACE ACTIONISTS APPEAL TO SENATOR NYE

They Urge Increasing Political and Economic Co-operation to Stop Wars.

The St. Louis Peace Action Committee has written to Senator Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, urging that in making its recommendations to Congress the committee "take cognizance of the necessity of an increasing political and economic co-operation for furtherance of world peace."

The letter says that the local committee believes munitions makers have been instrumental in fomenting war and that removal of profits from war-time manufacture of munitions is advisable, but that it realizes war and preparedness profits are not the sole, and perhaps not the chief, cause of war. The peace committee says it will work for the election in November of a Missouri Senator and at least three Congressmen who will support peace policies.

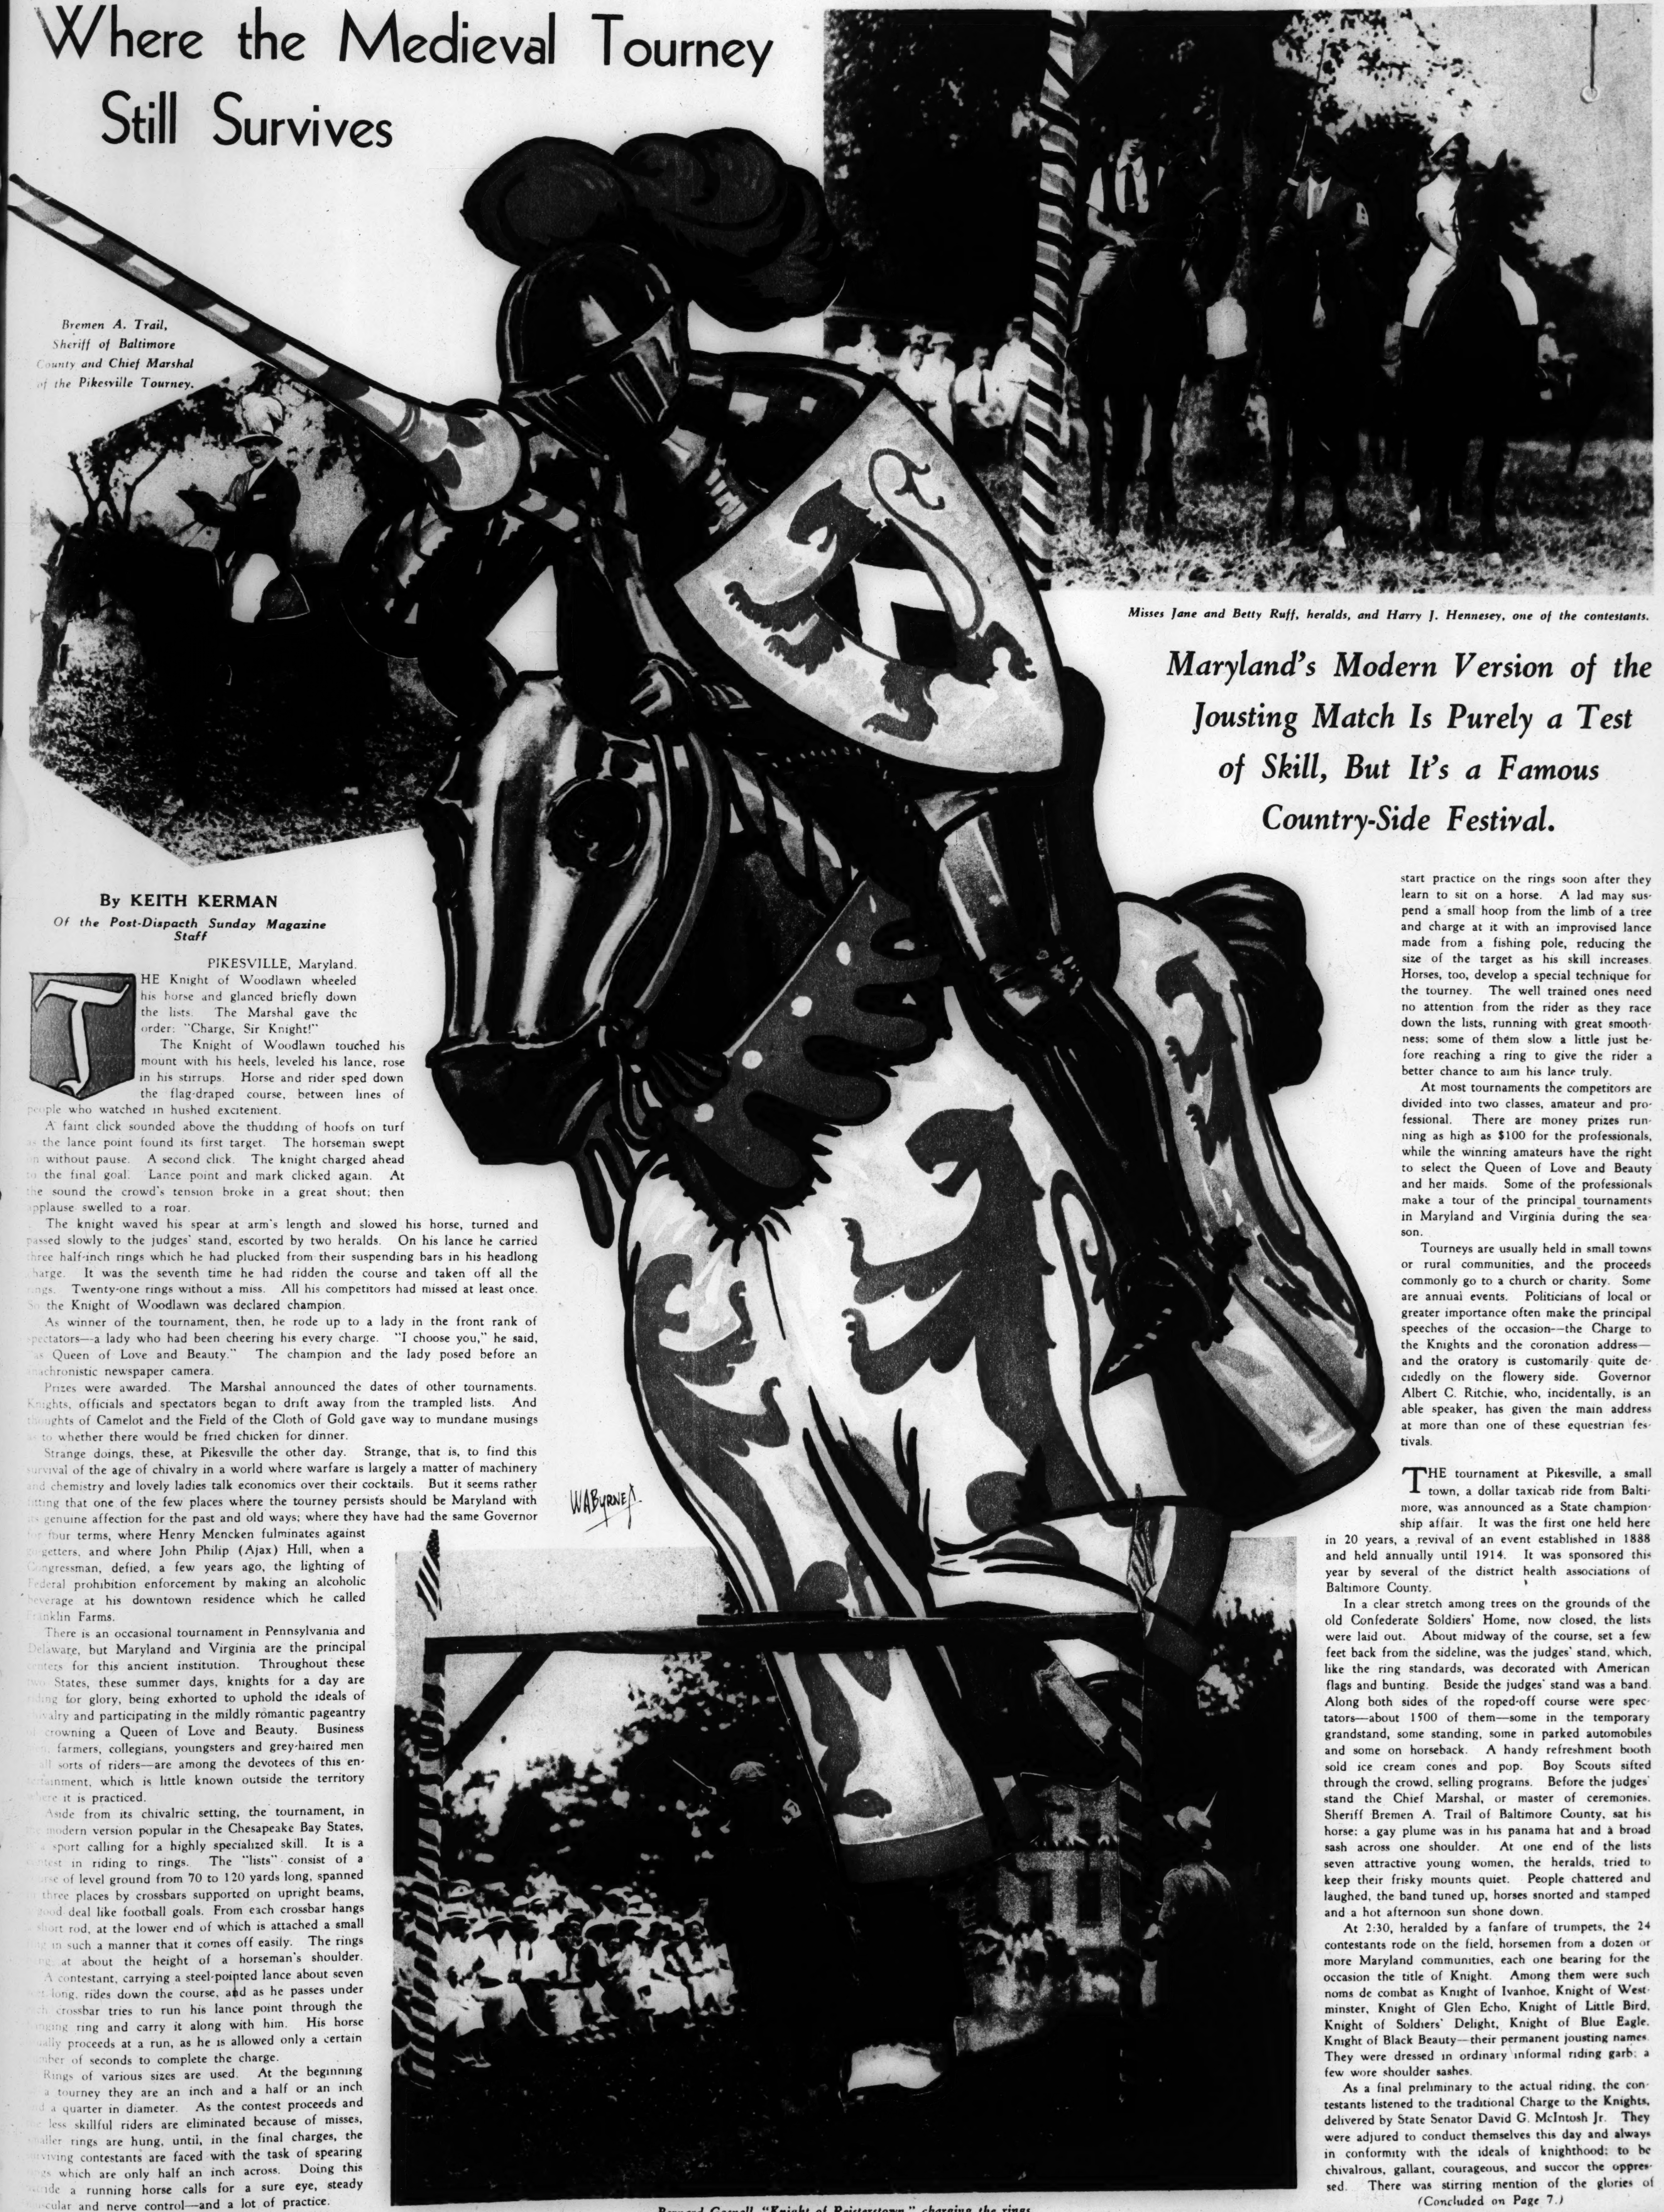
Where the Medieval Tourney Still Survives



Bremen A. Trail, Sheriff of Baltimore County and Chief Marshal of the Pikesville Tourney.

Misses Jane and Betty Ruff, heralds, and Harry J. Hennesey, one of the contestants.

Maryland's Modern Version of the Jousting Match Is Purely a Test of Skill, But It's a Famous Country-Side Festival.

By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispacth Sunday Magazine Staff

PIKESVILLE, Maryland.

THE Knight of Woodlawn wheeled his horse and glanced briefly down the lists. The Marshal gave the order: "Charge, Sir Knight!"

The Knight of Woodlawn touched his mount with his heels, leveled his lance, rose in his stirrups. Horse and rider sped down the flag-draped course, between lines of people who watched in hushed excitement.

A faint click sounded above the thudding of hoofs on turf as the lance point found its first target. The horseman swept on without pause. A second click. The knight charged ahead to the final goal. Lance point and mark clicked again. At the sound the crowd's tension broke in a great shout; then applause swelled to a roar.

The knight waved his spear at arm's length and slowed his horse, turned and passed slowly to the judges' stand, escorted by two heralds. On his lance he carried three half-inch rings which he had plucked from their suspending bars in his headlong charge. It was the seventh time he had ridden the course and taken off all the rings. Twenty-one rings without a miss. All his competitors had missed at least once. So the Knight of Woodlawn was declared champion.

As winner of the tournament, then, he rode up to a lady in the front rank of spectators—a lady who had been cheering his every charge. "I choose you," he said, "as Queen of Love and Beauty." The champion and the lady posed before an anachronistic newspaper camera.

Prizes were awarded. The Marshal announced the dates of other tournaments. Knights, officials and spectators began to drift away from the trampled lists. And thoughts of Camelot and the Field of the Cloth of Gold gave way to mundane musings as to whether there would be fried chicken for dinner.

Strange doings, these, at Pikesville the other day. Strange, that is, to find this survival of the age of chivalry in a world where warfare is largely a matter of machinery and chemistry and lovely ladies talk economics over their cocktails. But it seems rather fitting that one of the few places where the tourney persists should be Maryland with its genuine affection for the past and old ways; where they have had the same Governor for four terms, where Henry Mencken fulminates against go-getters, and where John Philip (Ajax) Hill, when a Congressman, defied, a few years ago, the lighting of Federal prohibition enforcement by making an alcoholic beverage at his downtown residence which he called Franklin Farms.

There is an occasional tournament in Pennsylvania and Delaware, but Maryland and Virginia are the principal centers for this ancient institution. Throughout these two States, these summer days, knights for a day are riding for glory, being exhorted to uphold the ideals of chivalry and participating in the mildly romantic pageantry of crowning a Queen of Love and Beauty. Business men, farmers, collegians, youngsters and grey-haired men—all sorts of riders—are among the devotees of this entertainment, which is little known outside the territory where it is practiced.

Aside from its chivalric setting, the tournament, in the modern version popular in the Chesapeake Bay States, is a sport calling for a highly specialized skill. It is a contest in riding to rings. The "lists" consist of a course of level ground from 70 to 120 yards long, spanned in three places by crossbars supported on upright beams, a good deal like football goals. From each crossbar hangs a short rod, at the lower end of which is attached a small ring in such a manner that it comes off easily. The rings hang at about the height of a horseman's shoulder.

A contestant, carrying a steel-pointed lance about seven feet long, rides down the course, and as he passes under each crossbar tries to run his lance point through the hanging ring and carry it along with him. His horse usually proceeds at a run, as he is allowed only a certain number of seconds to complete the charge.

Rings of various sizes are used. At the beginning of a tourney they are an inch and a half or an inch and a quarter in diameter. As the contest proceeds and the less skillful riders are eliminated because of misses, smaller rings are hung, until, in the final charges, the surviving contestants are faced with the task of spearing rings which are only half an inch across. Doing this astride a running horse calls for a sure eye, steady muscular and nerve control—and a lot of practice.

Many Maryland boys, particularly in the rural regions, start practice on the rings soon after they learn to sit on a horse. A lad may suspend a small hoop from the limb of a tree and charge at it with an improvised lance made from a fishing pole, reducing the size of the target as his skill increases. Horses, too, develop a special technique for the tourney. The well trained ones need no attention from the rider as they race down the lists, running with great smoothness; some of them slow a little just before reaching a ring to give the rider a better chance to aim his lance truly.

At most tournaments the competitors are divided into two classes, amateur and professional. There are money prizes running as high as $100 for the professionals, while the winning amateurs have the right to select the Queen of Love and Beauty and her maids. Some of the professionals make a tour of the principal tournaments in Maryland and Virginia during the season.

Tourneys are usually held in small towns or rural communities, and the proceeds commonly go to a church or charity. Some are annual events. Politicians of local or greater importance often make the principal speeches of the occasion—the Charge to the Knights and the coronation address—and the oratory is customarily quite decidedly on the flowery side. Governor Albert C. Ritchie, who, incidentally, is an able speaker, has given the main address at more than one of these equestrian festivals.

THE tournament at Pikesville, a small town, a dollar taxicab ride from Baltimore, was announced as a State championship affair. It was the first one held here in 20 years, a revival of an event established in 1888 and held annually until 1914. It was sponsored this year by several of the district health associations of Baltimore County.

In a clear stretch among trees on the grounds of the old Confederate Soldiers' Home, now closed, the lists were laid out. About midway of the course, set a few feet back from the sideline, was the judges' stand, which, like the ring standards, was decorated with American flags and bunting. Beside the judges' stand was a band. Along both sides of the roped-off course were spectators—about 1500 of them—some in the temporary grandstand, some standing, some in parked automobiles and some on horseback. A handy refreshment booth sold ice cream cones and pop. Boy Scouts sifted through the crowd, selling programs. Before the judges' stand the Chief Marshal, or master of ceremonies, Sheriff Bremen A. Trail of Baltimore County, sat his horse; a gay plume was in his panama hat and a broad sash across one shoulder. At one end of the lists seven attractive young women, the heralds, tried to keep their frisky mounts quiet. People chattered and laughed, the band tuned up, horses snorted and stamped and a hot afternoon sun shone down.

At 2:30, heralded by a fanfare of trumpets, the 24 contestants rode on the field, horsemen from a dozen or more Maryland communities, each one bearing for the occasion the title of Knight. Among them were such noms de combat as Knight of Ivanhoe, Knight of Westminster, Knight of Glen Echo, Knight of Little Bird, Knight of Soldiers' Delight, Knight of Blue Eagle, Knight of Black Beauty—their permanent jousting names. They were dressed in ordinary informal riding garb; a few wore shoulder sashes.

As a final preliminary to the actual riding, the contestants listened to the traditional Charge to the Knights, delivered by State Senator David G. McIntosh Jr. They were adjured to conduct themselves this day and always in conformity with the ideals of knighthood; to be chivalrous, gallant, courageous, and succor the oppressed. There was stirring mention of the glories of

NEW YORK.

THE jealous tradition of the Vanderbilts that all who bear Vanderbilt blood must be reared in the bosom of the Vanderbilt family is raising what may be an insurmountable barrier to prevent the glamorous Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, widow of the late Reggie, from gaining guardianship of her only child, Gloria Jr., 10 years old.

The odd circumstance of the young mother not having control over her youngster is due to the fact that when Reggie died in 1925 Gloria Sr., now 29, was not of legal age, so George W. Wickersham, eminent lawyer and public official, was named the baby's guardian. This queer legal quirk was welcomed by the blue-blooded clan, which has never wasted any affection on the woman the gay Reggie chose as his wife. It gave the Vanderbilts an excellent chance to rescue Reggie's child from the blight of being raised in an atmosphere not surcharged with the dignified mist of aristocracy, as the Vanderbilts conceive it.

The succeeding decade has widened rather than closed the gap. Gloria Jr. has spent most of her time under the wing of her paternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Reggie's sister Gertrude, on the Whitney estate at Old Westbury, Long Island. Gloria Sr., cold-shouldered by her in-laws, has gravitated to other circles. Much of this centers on the night life of Broadway, which is poison to the Vanderbilts.

Broadway welcomed the sparkling widow and applauded her friendship with A. C. Blumenthal, theatrical magnate and ex-pal of ex-Mayor Jimmy Walker. So constantly were the pair seen together in the night spots that rumors of impending marriage flew about. When these reached the ramparts of the Vanderbilt castles, the clan was surer than ever that it was doing the right thing. Gloria Jr. was a Vanderbilt and must be protected from the Broadway taint.

It was a distinct shock therefore when Gloria Sr. went into Surrogate Court recently and asked to be made guardian of her child. When the in-laws recovered their poise they went into a huddle and when they came out of it Mrs. Whitney sent her solicitors into court to file a writ of intercession. No Vanderbilt came to court, because Vanderbilts always settle their difficulties out of court, unlike the Goulds and other distinguished families. Eminent counsel in high collars conferred quietly in the chambers of Surrogate James A. Foley. John Godfrey Saxe represented Mrs. Whitney. Wickersham was represented by G. F. Butterworth of the firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft. Walter G. Dunnington of the firm of Dunnington, Gregg and Church filed a writ of intercession of Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, little Gloria's maternal grandmother, whose attitude on the battle for the child is not publicly known. Gloria Sr. was represented by the only non-society lawyer, Nathan Burkan, one of Broadway's favorite sons.

FINALLY tradition won first blood when counsel agreed to adjust the dispute outside the tribunal and launder the Vanderbilt linen privately. A long adjournment was taken and several informal meetings of the parties arranged.

Apparently an impasse was reached, for Gloria Sr., sailing a few days ago for England, told ship-news reporters that the situation was unchanged, which was taken to mean that she had her mind set on winning out.

Paradoxically, Gloria Jr. is a rich little girl and her mother a poor widow—comparatively. The child's fortune is estimated at $4,000,000, while the mother's income as recently as 18 months ago was disclosed as $112 a month. This situation arises from the fact that spendthrift Reggie so depleted his assets in the pursuit of pleasure that his widow's inheritance was only $82,000. There was a $5,000,000 trust fund left Reggie by his father, the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, but that went, by the provisions of the trust, to Reggie's two children, Gloria Jr. and Cathleen, a child by his first marriage, who has since become Mrs. Lawrence Wise Lowman.

Being a rich little girl, Gloria Jr. was given every possible advantage. Practically raised by Mrs. Whitney, whose devotion to her is unquestioned, the child got everything that the $60,000,000 Whitney fortune could purchase, as well as the benefit of $4000 monthly from her own trust fund. Several years ago she received wide and unwelcome publicity as the girl whose upkeep cost more than that of any other child in America.

No one who knows Mrs. Whitney believes Gloria has been unduly pampered. It is generally conceded that the aunt loves the girl as if she were actually the mother. But, on the other hand, none denies that the real mother is genuinely attached to the youngster.

Gloria Sr.'s shock when Reggie's will was read was not her last one. She received another last April, when Mrs. Alice Gwynne Vanderbilt died and left her $100,000. In most circles, having $100,000 dropped in one's lap is a stroke of fortune, but in this instance society looked upon it as a slap, for the dowager left $1,000,000 apiece to both of Reggie's daughters and a whole handful of millions to Mrs. Whitney. Nevertheless, the paltry $100,000 lifted Gloria Sr. out of the $112-a-month division, even if acceptance of it did make her appear to be grabbing at a gratuity.

The story of how the elder Gloria hurdled into the Vanderbilt demesne only to be snooted out, begins with the story of the three beautiful Morgan girls, Gloria and Thelma, identical twins, and Consuelo.

Their father, Harry Hays Morgan, was long Consul-General at Buenos Aires and later at Brussels. Morgan, unhappily not related to the monied Morgans, was underpaid, as all diplomats are, but in marrying the former Laura Kilpatrick he married not only a distant kinswoman of the Empress Eugenie, consort of Napoleon III, but one of the cleverest matchmaking mammas society has ever seen.

Never has any single woman engineered so many pretty but undowered daughters into such gilded unions. Consuelo married Count Jean de Maupas of Paris. Later she divorced him and became the wife of Benjamin Thaw Jr., a wealthy young man who chose the diplomatic service as his career.

Thelma's first husband was James Vail Converse Jr., a youthful millionaire banker, whom she married when she was 16. The marriage ultimately proved the springboard from which the twin sister was to bounce into the kingdom founded by old Commodore Vanderbilt. It just happened (or maybe it was neatly prearranged) that the Converses gave a ball at the Beaux Arts in 1922 and that twin Gloria was there looking her best. It just happened (or maybe Mrs. Morgan could tell an interesting story about it) that Reggie Vanderbilt, middle-aged but not by any means out of the ring, was invited. What happened when the bon vivant spotted the unmarried twin is not open to dispute.

He fell head over heels in love and until his death everyone admitted that it was a love match. Daughter Gloria came into the world in 1914, under auspices which could not have been improved by the editor of the Social Register. On May 16 of that year she was baptized in the drawing room of Reggie's home at 12 East Seventy-second street, by Suffragan Bishop Herbert Shipman, eminent Episcopal divine. The event attracted great attention, since the new-born was the great-great-grandchild of Commodore Vanderbilt, a sharer through her maternal grandmother of the blood of Empress Eugenie, etc., etc.

The short time that Reggie had left in this world was spent at Arleigh, his castle at Newport, and at his Sandy Point stock farm in Vermont. It was on the stock farm that he died, before little Gloria was a year old.

IN 1926 threats of kidnaping caused the removal of the child to Europe for a lengthy stay. She returned to grow up under the eye of Mrs. Whitney. One of her constant playmates has been little Emily, daughter of William H. Vanderbilt, whom she still visits at Newport.

In 1927 Guardian Wickersham applied to Surrogate Foley for the right to buy a $500,000 endowment insurance policy for his ward to assure her money in her old age, but the request was denied as involving the illegal use of funds by a guardian. In 1932 Wickersham was authorized, however, to spend $7250 for the child's education for one year, and, of course, this was in addition to the $48,000 a year already spent on her under the $4000-a-month arrangement.

Thelma did not remain married to Converse over long. After a divorce, she went to Hollywood, where her beauty helped her crash her way into a few films. Then she went to England, where the eye of Viscount Furness, shipping owner and one of the wealthiest men in Britain, lighted upon her. They married and Furness bought her the Sunderland house from the Duchess of Marlborough, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt. Thelma has since divorced her nobleman, but is still known as Viscountess Furness. A financial settlement has made her independently wealthy.

It was to see her that her identical twin, Gloria, sailed recently.

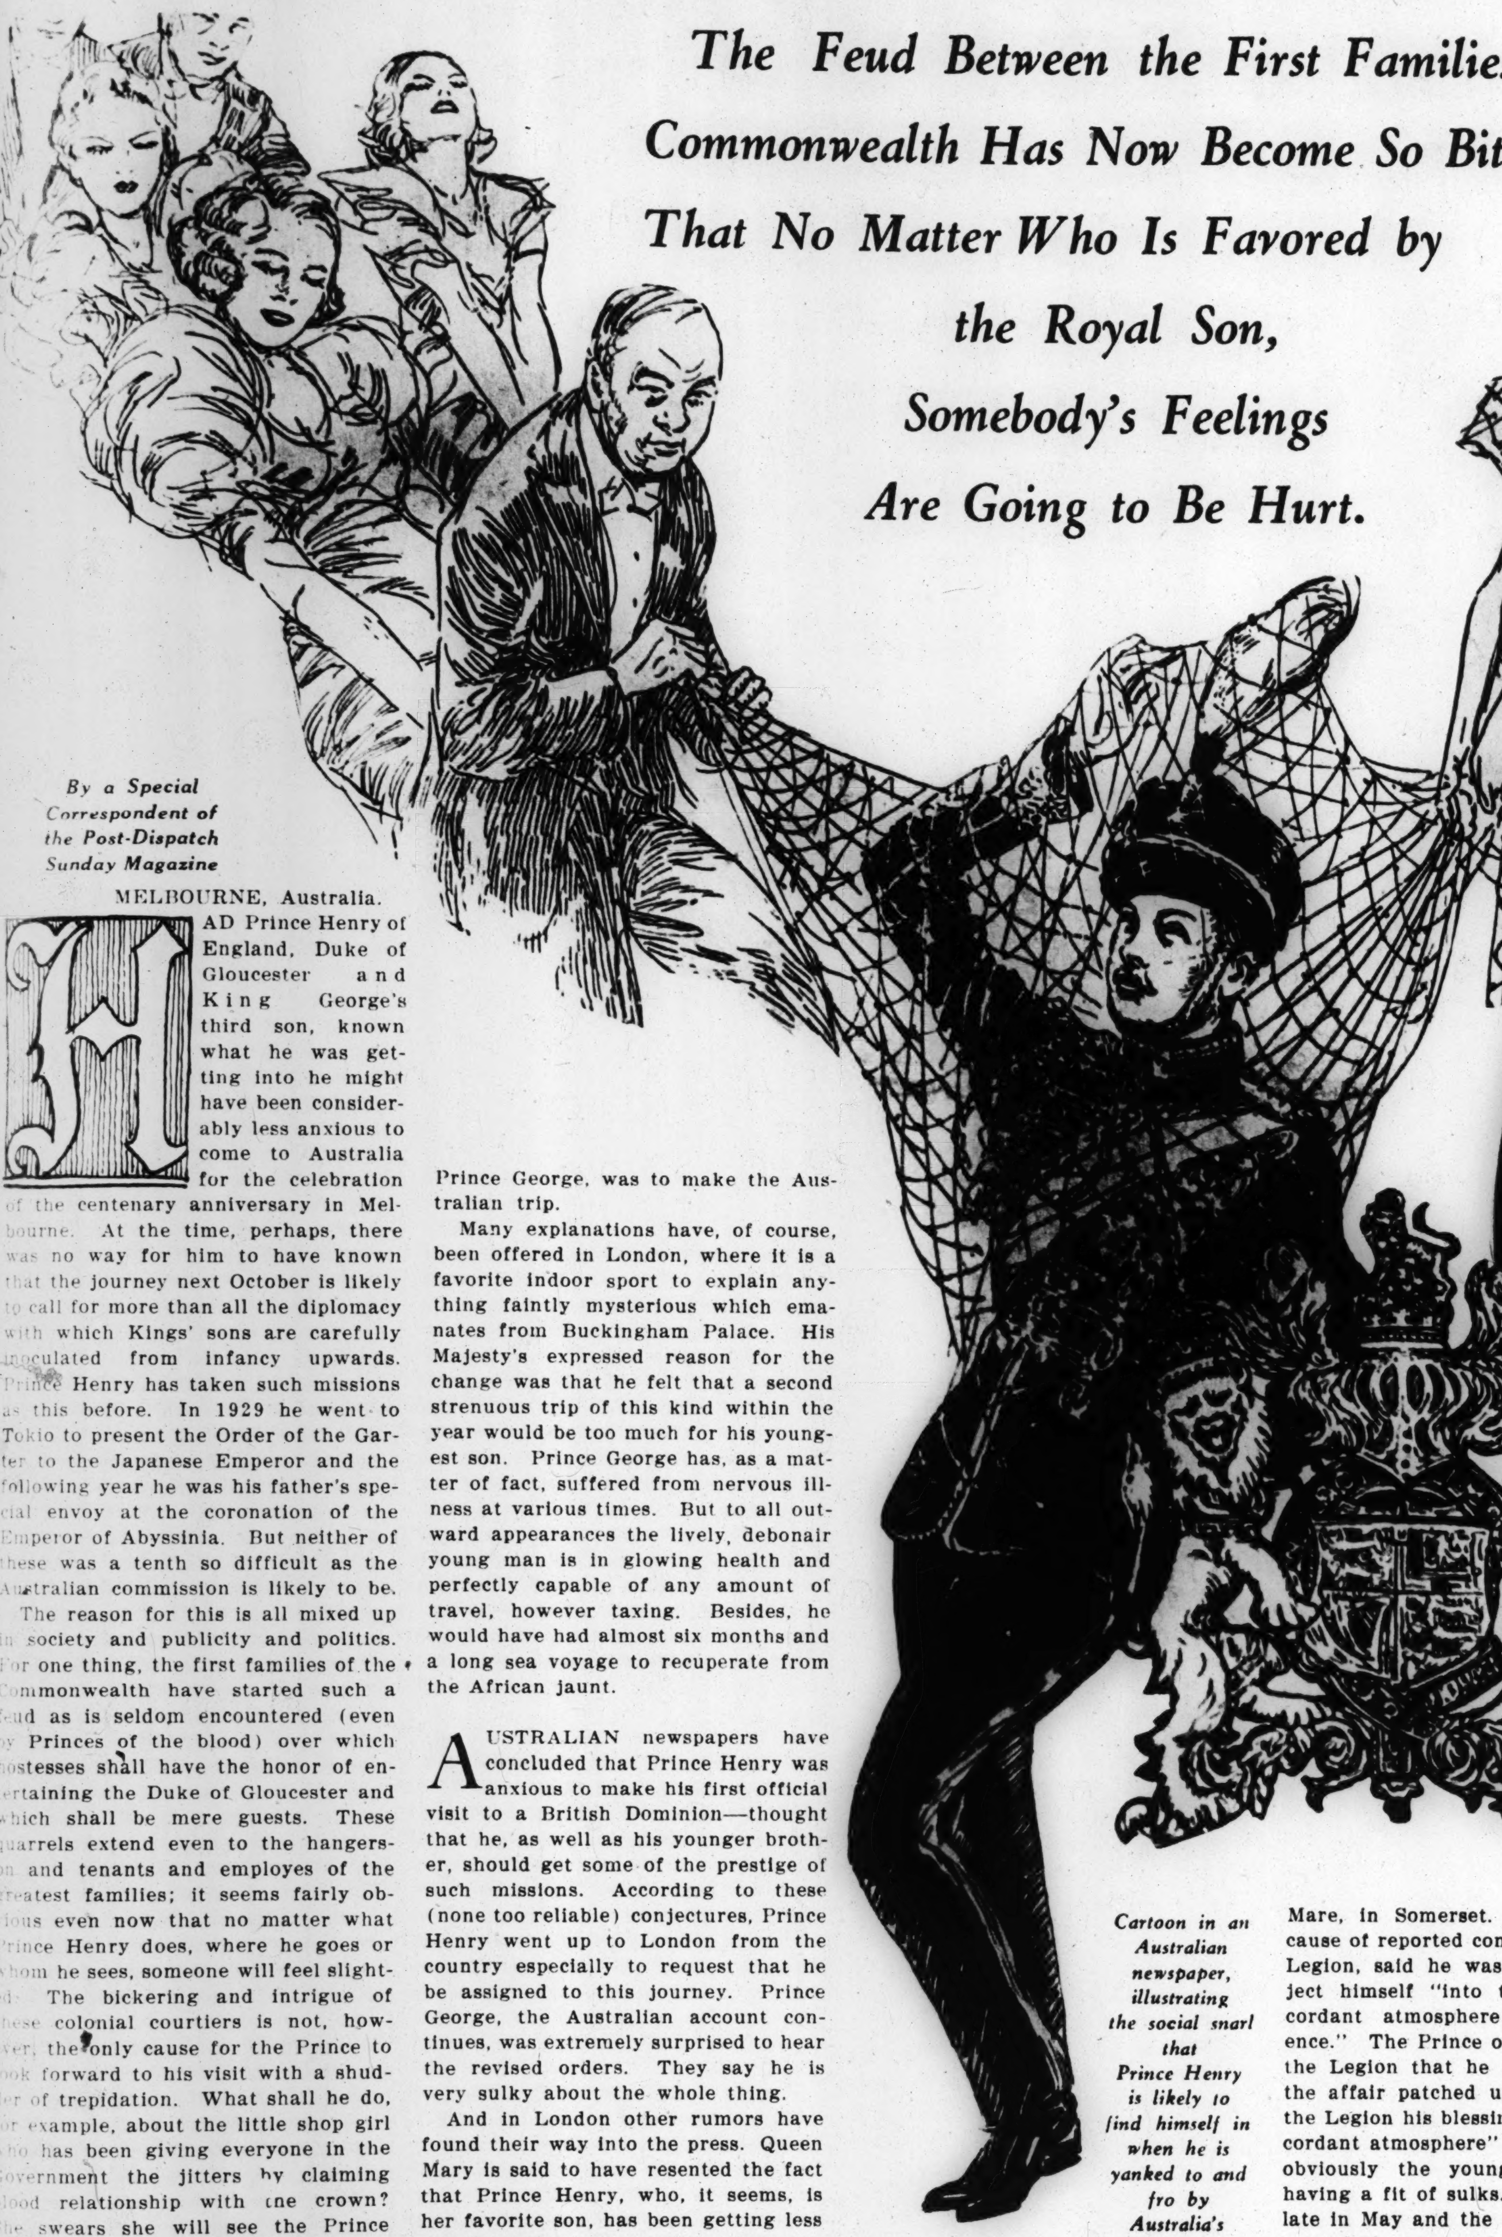
The SOCIAL ROW in AUSTRALIA OVER PRINCE HENRY'S VISIT

The Feud Between the First Families of the Commonwealth Has Now Become So Bitter That No Matter Who Is Favored by the Royal Son, Somebody's Feelings Are Going to Be Hurt.



Cartoon in an Australian newspaper, illustrating the social snarl that Prince Henry is likely to find himself in when he is yanked to and fro by Australia's rival social sets.

MELBOURNE, Australia.

HAD Prince Henry of England, Duke of Gloucester and King George's third son, known what he was getting into he might have been considerably less anxious to come to Australia for the celebration of the centenary anniversary in Melbourne. At the time, perhaps, there was no way for him to have known that the journey next October is likely to call for more than all the diplomacy with which Kings' sons are carefully inoculated from infancy upwards. Prince Henry has taken such missions as this before. In 1929 he went to Tokio to present the Order of the Garter to the Japanese Emperor and the following year he was his father's special envoy at the coronation of the Emperor of Abyssinia. But neither of these was a tenth so difficult as the Australian commission is likely to be.

The reason for this is all mixed up in society and publicity and politics. For one thing, the first families of the Commonwealth have started such a feud as is seldom encountered (even by Princes of the blood) over which hostesses shall have the honor of entertaining the Duke of Gloucester and which shall be mere guests. These quarrels extend even to the hangers-on and tenants and employes of the greatest families; it seems fairly obvious even now that no matter what Prince Henry does, where he goes or whom he sees, someone will feel slighted. The bickering and intrigue of these colonial courtiers is not, however, the only cause for the Prince to look forward to his visit with a shudder of trepidation. What shall he do, for example, about the little shop girl who has been giving everyone in the Government the jitters by claiming blood relationship with the crown? She swears she will see the Prince when he arrives, and meanwhile no one seems to be able to prevent her giving out terrifying interviews to the newspapers, which have already indicated they are out for all the fun they can get out of the embarrassment of persons in authority.

No one knows exactly how Prince Henry happened to be assigned to make this trip. Although he has made them before, diplomatic tours of good will are not exactly in his line. He is an expert polo player, a hard rider and a good soldier. But he seems to prefer having the hectic social cares of imperial diplomacy devolve on his two bachelor brothers, Edward, Prince of Wales, and Prince George, the youngest of the four surviving sons of the royal family. It was the latter who was originally intended to make the Australian excursion. Handsome, charming and popular, Prince George served his apprenticeship as good-will emissary under the expert tutelage of the Prince of Wales, who is now more concerned with good-will missions to the unemployed. These two traveled together in South America three years ago, and early this year Prince George (now 32 years old) made a successful solo tour of Africa.

When he returned his father is said to have congratulated him on the skill with which he "bought golden opinions from all sorts of people." He was invested with a new order as reward for his services. He fully expected to do equally well or better in Australia. He is the only one of the King's sons to enter the Foreign Office—or any other peace service, as a matter of fact. But in April it was announced that Prince Henry, and not Prince George, was to make the Australian trip.

Many explanations have, of course, been offered in London, where it is a favorite indoor sport to explain anything faintly mysterious which emanates from Buckingham Palace. His Majesty's expressed reason for the change was that he felt that a second strenuous trip of this kind within the year would be too much for his youngest son. Prince George has, as a matter of fact, suffered from nervous illness at various times. But to all outward appearances the lively, debonair young man is in glowing health and perfectly capable of any amount of travel, however taxing. Besides, he would have had almost six months and a long sea voyage to recuperate from the African jaunt.

AUSTRALIAN newspapers have concluded that Prince Henry was anxious to make his first official visit to a British Dominion—thought that he, as well as his younger brother, should get some of the prestige of such missions. According to these (none too reliable) conjectures, Prince Henry went up to London from the country especially to request that he be assigned to this journey. Prince George, the Australian account continues, was extremely surprised to hear the revised orders. They say he is very sulky about the whole thing.

And in London other rumors have found their way into the press. Queen Mary is said to have resented the fact that Prince Henry, who, it seems, is her favorite son, has been getting less attention from the public than his younger brother. So she requested the substitution.

Possibly more cogent is the consideration that there was a difference of opinion in the royal family this spring. It had to do with the internal politics of the British Legion, the English association of war veterans. Prince George was scheduled to attend the Legion conference at Weston-Super-Mare, in Somerset. He refused because of reported controversy with the Legion, said he was unwilling to inject himself "into the reported discordant atmosphere of the conference." The Prince of Wales promised the Legion that he would try to get the affair patched up and later gave the Legion his blessing when the "discordant atmosphere" was cleared. But obviously the youngest Prince was having a fit of sulks. That happened late in May and the King's announcement had come at the end of April.

So the Right Honorable S. M. Bruce, High Commissioner in London, and the Right Honorable J. A. Lyons, Prime Minister of Australia, were informed that with their kind permission Prince Henry would make the visit to the Antipodes in place of Prince George. Naturally, they gave their kind permission.

The ramifications of such an announcement are likely to be pretty widespread and unpredictable. Tradesmen and manufacturers were already well along with their preparations for the royal visit. Advertisements and publicity programs which used Prince Henry's name or his portrait had to be scrapped, sometimes at an enormous cost. For example, a candy manufacturer who had almost completed arrangements for launching on the market a line of "Prince George Chocolates" and "Prince George Bon Bons," barely had time to cancel a venture in which he had invested $100,000. It seems the candies were to have been put up in fancy boxes which were intended to be used later as mementos of the Prince's visit. The maker canceled the orders for these boxes only a day before it would have been too late. He might have had to accept them and pay for them—or a breach of contract suit. Another candy manufacturer had to hire artists to paint a mustache on each lithographed portrait of Prince George on the cover of his boxes. The name of the younger Prince was covered by stickers marked "Prince Henry." He isn't sure they will work out very well, but relies on the Australian sense of humor to tide him over.

While there is a great deal of that sort of mix-up going on, the real discord in Australia is of another and more disconcerting order. It has to do with the hostesses who have been busy jockeying themselves into positions where they can make use of the royal visit as a means of fortifying themselves in society. Every kind of string—political, social and industrial—is being pulled in order to get the Prince for a week-end or a tea or a ball. And as for the younger women . . .

THERE is in Sydney a Miss Cheriton, whose position as head mistress of Doone School (a fashionable institution "for young girls of upper-class families") makes her the recognized arbiter of all matters of decorum in the social world of Australia. As soon as Miss Cheriton heard of the prospective descent into the Antipodes of a representative of royalty, she cabled to London for two well-known social butterflies capable of instructing the innocent girlhood of the Commonwealth in the tricky amenities of behavior in the Presence. And she got them, too. Toby Charlton, a popular man-about-town in the Mayfair section of London, with sufficient experience in royal garden parties and such solemnities, came hurrying to the bottom of the world "to teach Sydney girls to behave"—as a headline writer put it. If they wanted to know what to say on being presented, whether to curtsey, and, if so, how to get up again, Mr. Charlton could tell them, and did. Doone School has been inundated by a horde of young women who want to know these things and have flocked from every corner of the South Seas dominions to find out.

Meanwhile, the idea which emerged from Doone School has spread to other sections. Private classes in decorum have mushroomed everywhere, and it seems probable that whatever other things result from the Prince's visit, it will at least cause the islands to look with less favor on insular drawing room manners.

But if debutantes are learning manners, dowagers are unlearning them, editorial writers declare, in their scramble for a place on Prince Henry's entertainment docket. Only the mildest simper may be good taste for the young ladies who will meet Prince Henry, but it seems that anything—right down to inciting riots—is fair play for those who want to ask His Royal Highness up for dinner. Headlines of four-column width announce "The Real Reason Prince George Was Sidetracked," "Three-Cornered Fight to Have Henry Up for the Week-end," "Social Welterweights Battle for Roy-

THEY LET THEMSELVES BE BITTEN by RATTLESNAKES

How the Curator of the San Antonio Reptile Garden Made a Public Demonstration in the Interest of Safety, While a North Carolina Evangelist Made It a Part of a Religious Ceremony.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.

AND now Willis Woolems, curator of the San Antonio Municipal Reptile Garden, has allowed himself to be bitten by a rattlesnake, while hundreds held their breath.

Unlike the North Carolina mountain preacher, who spent a week in mortal agony after letting a rattlesnake bite him, Woolems did not say that "Jesus told him" to do it. Rather, Woolems explained, he meant to show the treatment of snake bite dictated by science and common sense. He expressed some concern that the fervid mountaineer's display might be followed by some neglect of snake bites, and that the neglect might be followed by death or, at least, by effects that might be felt and certainly would be remembered for the rest of one's life.

The demonstrations of evangelist and herpetologist were alike in that both were public as possible. The herpetologist put on his show in the park before a Sunday afternoon crowd of several hundred spectators. The evangelist, Albert Teester, self-ordained, allowed his rattler to bite him at Sunday services in his church, at Sylvia, North Carolina. There the similarity ceased.

Woolems, hardly changing expression, applied the orthodox first-aid treatment with practiced speed and deftness, and never suffered any effects more serious than a slight nausea.

Teester, it is related, ran from the pulpit screaming with pain and lay near death for a week in a mountain cabin, while his whole body swelled, his arm burst and his tongue was so thick he could not swallow. His wife died a few years ago, refusing medical care.

Woolems used a big diamond-back rattler, just caught on the Texas plains and fretful in its new quarters in the San Antonio park. It needed no rehearsal. On a table in full view, it kept its rattlers buzzing constantly so that they could be heard by the remotest spectators in the ring surrounding the snake pit. It drew back in full coil at once, and made plain its readiness to take on any of them, or, for that matter, the whole crowd in a body.

Deliberately, flicking it repeatedly with a handkerchief, Woolems roused it to blind fury. When it was ready to strike at anything whatever, he slowly reached toward it. As his hand passed the edge of the table, the reptile lunged two-thirds of its full length and struck.

Without evidence of fear or concern, Woolems shook off the snake, which had buried its fangs in the fleshy part of the hand. He held up his hand so spectators could see the marks, while assistants caught the snake and pried its mouth open to show the fangs.

LOSING no time, since his life depended on it—every Texan respects the diamond-back, and the rarity of fatalities from its bite is slim reassurance—Woolems flicked open a little first-aid kit and went rapidly to work. First, he fastened a rubber tourniquet around the wrist, to trap the venom in the hand. Second, he slashed the wound to let the blood flow. Third, he drew out the poison with a little suction pump. That was all.

And while he worked, he talked. The first-aid measures must be applied at once, he explained—certainly in 10 minutes, if possible, after the bite—so that the venom can be trapped and drawn out before it has spread through the system. When it has time to spread it can cause death, and Woolems said death of snake bite was not nearly so uncommon in the United States as might be supposed.

There was no part of the country without danger, he insisted. While snakes were seldom encountered in some regions, one was enough. And the universal use of automobiles, with the growing popularity of picnics and outdoor holidays, led pleasure seekers further afield and increased the likelihood of encountering poisonous snakes. Hence, he felt, every adult, and especially every school child, should be instructed in the first-aid treatment.

Above all, Woolems exhorted, put no faith in the popular fallacy that a rattlesnake always rattles before it strikes. Sometimes it doesn't even have rattles. And it never uses them from any chivalrous motive of giving an opponent a fair chance. If in some cases the rattles give warning, that is far from its quite unsportsmanlike intent.

WOOLEMS did not use serum. He put on his demonstration under controlled conditions, where he was fully able to prevent spread of the venom through the system. Since the circumstances are not so orderly in nature, most snake collectors feel more secure if they have the serum along, "just in case"—— Directions are packed with the serum to guide laymen until they can reach a physician. The serum is effective against all the other native "pit vipers"—that is, against all the poisonous snakes of this country except the coral snake of Florida.

While Woolems depended solely on first aid and other herpetologists lean as far toward serum treatment, some noted collectors, including R. Marlin Perkins of the St. Louis Zoo, prefer a combination of immediate first aid with serum as required. Perkins advises that the tourniquet be kept on for several hours, even if serum has been injected around the bite, and that it be loosened for about 10 seconds every 10 minutes in order not to leave the affected part wholly without blood supply. In that way, any venom not neutralized by the serum reaches the remainder of the body in minute amounts, which the natural defense can overcome.

The demonstration required minutes—one could almost say seconds—and Woolems emphasized that "every second counts." He was completely recovered in a few hours. And when it was all over, he said: "I did it to teach people how to keep from dying unnecessarily."

TRYING to REVIVE a DEPOPULATED CITY

KEY WEST, Florida.

IN THIS quiet little coral island, where nature has been bountiful with beauty and a benign sub-tropical climate seems to promise a pleasant and easy existence, a desperate life-and-death struggle is under way. It is being waged between the forces of economic depression and the citizens of this town, supported by governmental agencies. The life at stake is that of Key West, southernmost city of the United States. The issue is whether this once thriving city shall continue to dwindle away until it becomes an abandoned cluster of ghostly ruins or shall be revived, rejuvenated into new growth and prosperity. The effort that is being made to achieve the latter result is of a unique sort.

Key West has taken a terrific economic beating in recent years. Once a thriving city of 35,000, it has lost three-fourths of its population and of the remaining residents, 80 per cent are on Federal relief rolls. Unless the decline is checked the town seems destined for extinction.

In its prosperous days Key West had a cigar industry which gave employment to some 10,000 persons. It had a large naval base, the district coast guard headquarters and a garrison for its large army fort, all of which directly and indirectly gave work to many civilians and gave the city an importance which was reflected in its commerce.

These supports of business life are gone now. The cigar factories have moved to Tampa. On the tiny island they found insufficient room for expansion, and were also handicapped by lack of adequate local water supply, for since there are no wells on the key, it must depend for water on rainfall and shipments from the mainland.

The military and naval establishments have been withdrawn because the island is no longer important as a coaling point for naval vessels.

NOW that most United States war vessels burn oil and have a great cruising radius, it is not necessary for them to put in at Key West and replenish their fuel supply. And this, of course, makes it unnecessary for a strong defensive system to be maintained there.

Additional crushing blows to the commercial life of the island were administered a few weeks ago when two transportation lines sought permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon their Key West services. The Florida East Coast Railroad asked to discontinue trains between the mainland and the island over its famous ocean railway—a line which crosses the expanse of water on trestles and is in places out of sight of land. And the P. & O. Steamship Company sought leave to move its sea-train terminal from Key West to Miami. As the only highway route to the mainland entails a four-hour ferry ride, abandonment of these services would be little short of annihilating to commerce between the two places.

Even before these late developments, however, the economic situation in Key West had become so critical that the City Council and the County Council of Monroe County declared an emergency and appealed to the State of Florida and the Federal Government to assume the burden of its problem. Representatives of various state departments visited the city, and Governor Dave Sholtz accepted for the State the responsibility of trying to save the city. Officials of the city and county yielded to the State and Federal governments the authority to administer the affairs of Key West until it is able to take care of itself.

Out of this move came a plan for rescuing the city by a drastic reconstruction of its economic life—by changing it from a commercial city into a tourist resort, to be called "The American Bermuda."

Bringing about such a transformation is an enterprise of considerable magnitude, involving a vast amount of labor. But Key West citizens have undertaken the job with enthusiasm.

IN RESPONSE to the call of Julius F. Stone Jr., Florida Emergency Relief Administrator, 4000 of them between the ages of 18 and 65, representing 95 per cent of all the town's available labor, have offered their services for work on behalf of the city. Most of them are recipients of Federal relief. But the volunteers for the work corps include people in various stations of life—doctors, lawyers, merchants, seamen, even Sisters of Mercy.

The average volunteer has agreed to serve at least 25 hours a week on any project directed by the Relief Administration, so that thus far a total of 3,744,000 hours of labor has been pledged to the task of reconstruction.

Abandoned homes will be redecorated and made habitable. Hotels which for years have been silent and dark, steadily deteriorating, will be put in sound condition and made spick and span. Streets, long neglected, will be repaired. Lawns, parks, public buildings will be put in order. The city, in short, like a girl out to catch a beau, will make itself as attractive and alluring as possible. Key West is definitely setting its cap for the tourist trade.

It is the theory of those back of the plan that Key West already has a good start toward its goal because of its natural advantages. They cite its pleasant climate, its graceful palms, the fragrance of its jasmine and oleander, its good harbor and the romantic splendor of the blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico that wash its coral shore. Its geographic situation, 90 miles from Havana and 125 miles southwest of Miami, makes it easily accessible to traveling Americans. It is believed, too, that its historical associations can be invoked to advantage, particularly the fact of its being in a region which once was a haunt of pirate crews.

The Desolate Fadeout of the 'Wickedest Woman in London'

Once the Premiere Danseuse of the Russian Ballet, Dolores Later Became the Most Famous Model of Her Time and the Ruin of Many Men.

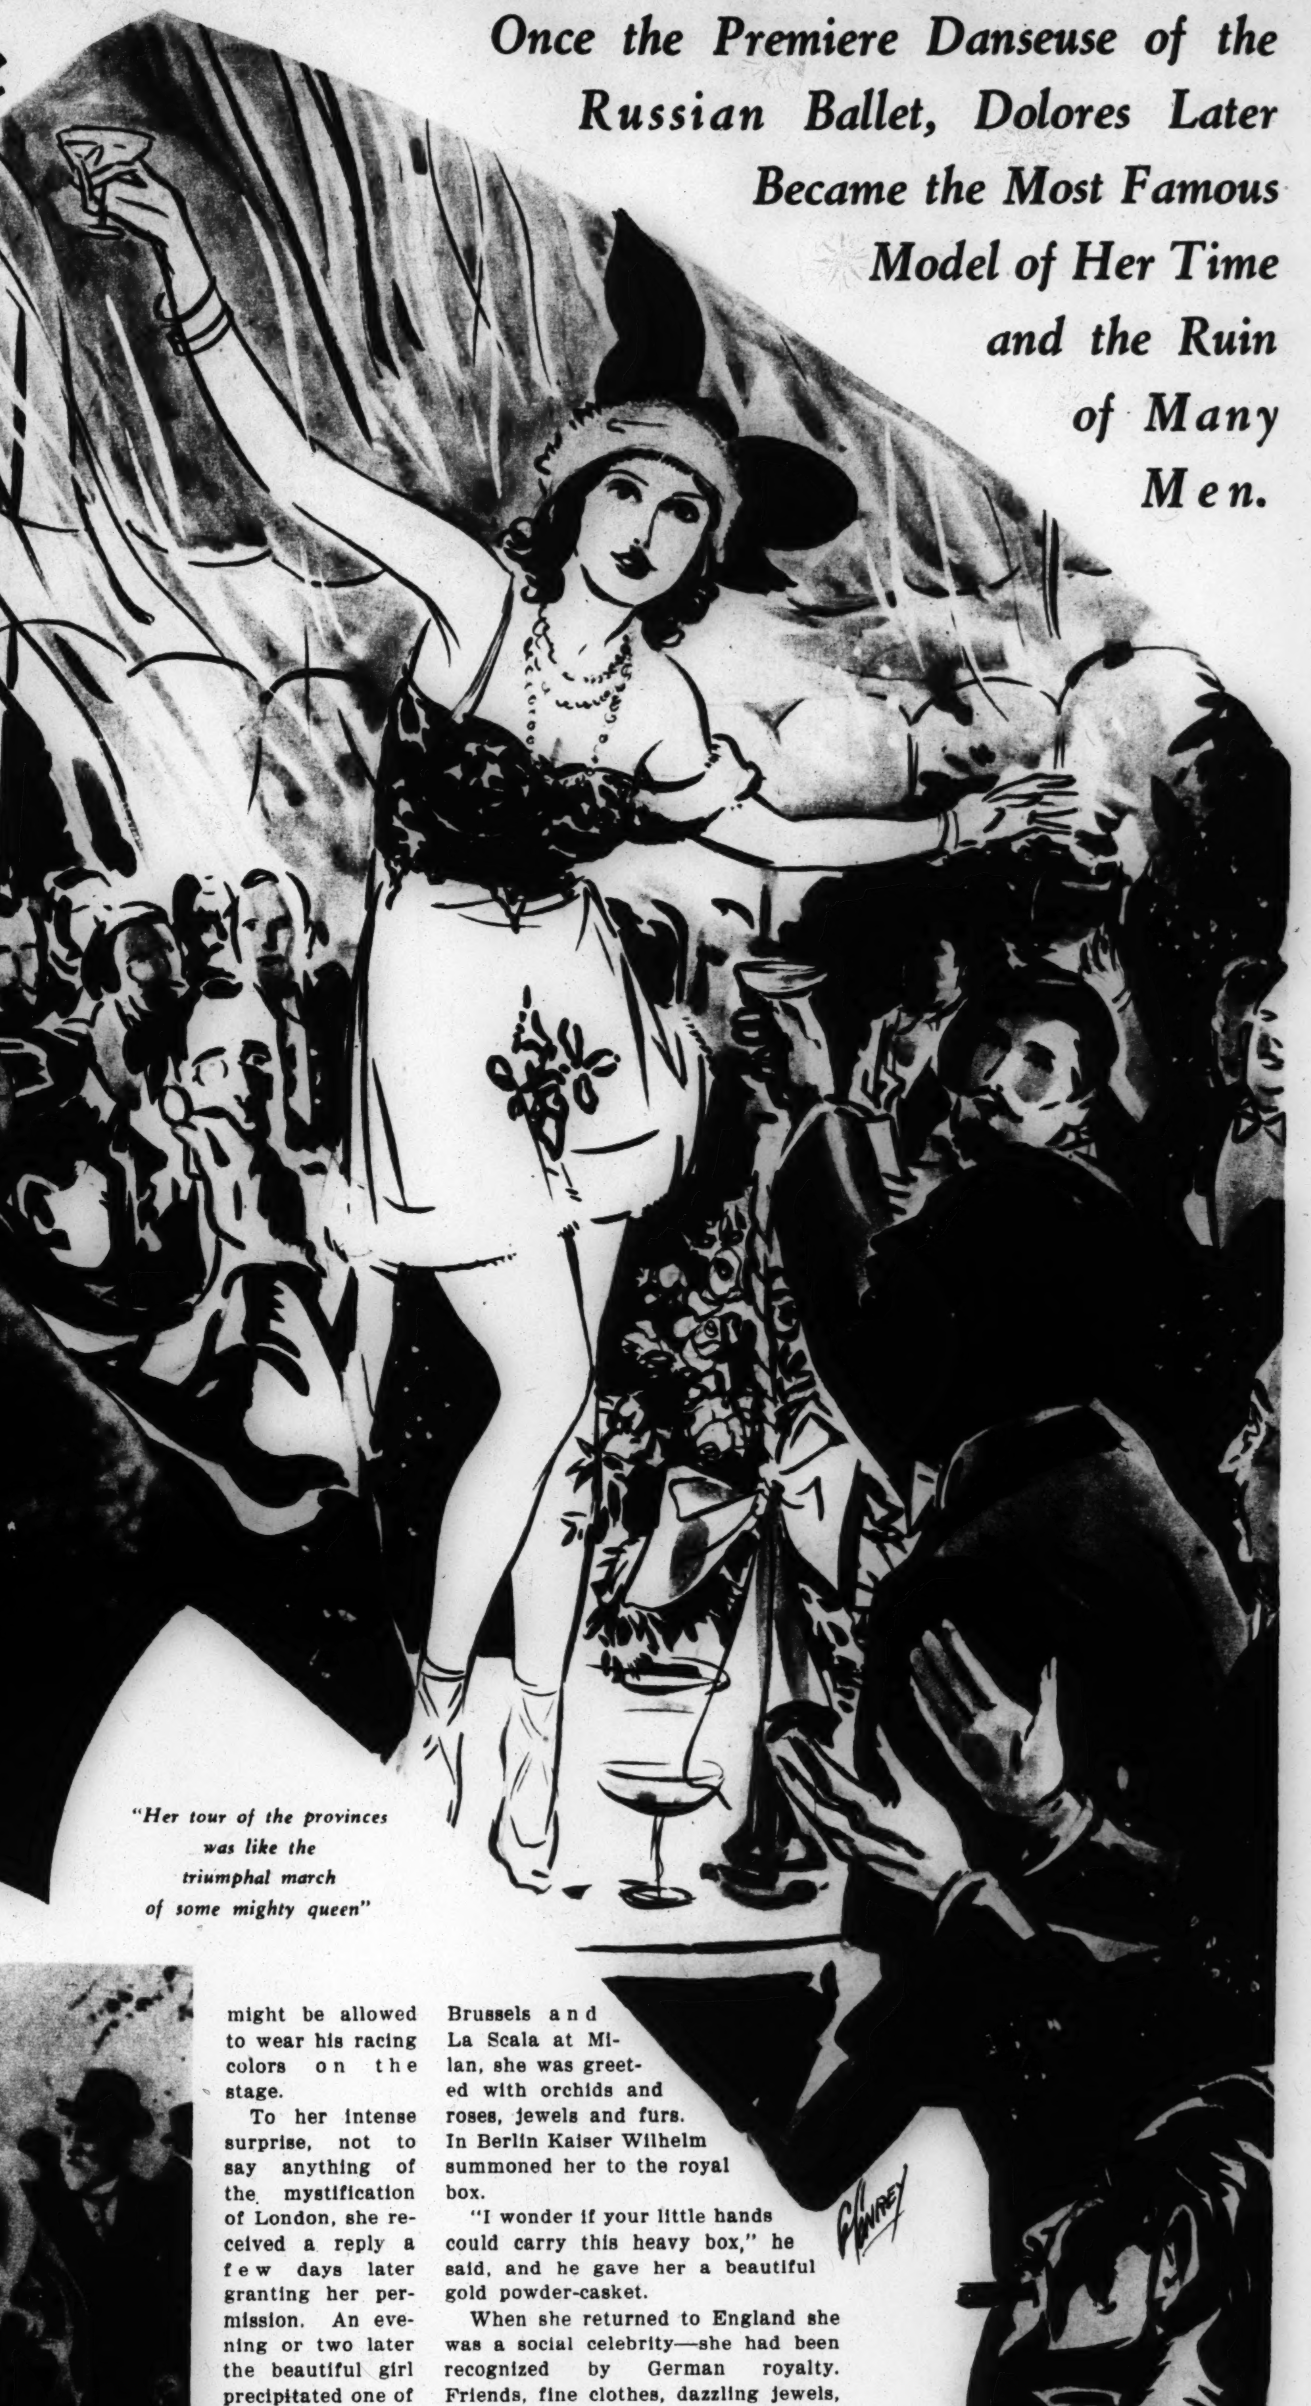
LONDON.

DOLORES, most famous model of modern times and "wickedest woman in London" by her own gay boast, died of cancer the other day in a London hospital, alone, penniless and forgotten. With startling precision she embodied in life the mythical vampire, "a lovely peril" and "a flashing desolation." Though they knew that behind her kisses lay a touch of shame and death, famous and titled men fought for the reward of ruin at her warm, acquisitive hands.

Once she was the premiere danseuse of the Russian Imperial Ballet. She was immortalized in stone by Jacob Epstein. She won the favor of royalty. She drove many men to bankruptcy, one to insanity, three to suicide.

And then, sure and fateful as Greek tragedy, age and disease and the shame of her own deeds caught up with her, robbed her of all the ghoulish loot she had taken with soft laughter on her lips. She was hounded by Scotland Yard. She was barred from the studios. She shivered in a London attic, and later, in the public parks, slept on a bench. A little while before she entered the hospital, she begged for the opportunity to show herself for pennies as the "fasting woman."

Dolores.



"Her tour of the provinces was like the triumphal march of some mighty queen"

Her origin is one of the mysteries of London. Mysterious, too, is the marital career of this enigmatic creature, though report has it that she was wedded four times, and that each of her unions ended disastrously. In her latter days she was best known as Norine Lattimore, wife of George Lattimore, an American Negro employed by a film concern. From him she has long been estranged. It was this marriage that brought her under the eyes of Scotland Yard, the officials of which made life miserable for her through their insistence that she register as an alien every time she changed her domicile in Great Britain. Her listing was that of an American by marriage.

It was shortly after the turn of the century that she first flashed across the horizon of the London amusement world as a dancer. She was about 15 years old. She had hair of dark golden brown, regular features, fair skin and beguiling eyes. There was tenderness in her eyes and age-old pity in her mouth, but, the world was to learn, none in her heart. Full-blown, lissome and "with the airs and carriage of a Duchess," she attracted attention wherever she went.

According to gossip, she was the daughter of the Vicomtesse de Fournier. Her mother, by this account, was the daughter of Count Fournier, a General in the French Army, and she had been disinherited for having entered a mesalliance. The father of Dolores was said to be a strolling minstrel of the provincial music halls, though not a few maintained that he was nothing but an hostler of an East End stable.

Jacob Epstein and one of his works.

Even in her teens the girl had a neighborhood reputation as a dancer, and thus it was decided that she should enter the ballet. She was sent to Tiller's Dancing Academy, and began an arduous course of training for her future career.

ONE day a much-jeweled, ornately gowned woman swept into the academy and began talking to everybody at once in voluble, broken English. Suddenly she seized hold of the hands of the child who was to become famous as Dolores, and said:

"You should not be a dancer, my girl, but an actress! It is Gabys Deslys that tells you so."

The girl resolved to follow the advice of the Franco-Hungarian music hall favorite and succeeded in getting a small part in an extravaganza called "Alice in Wonderland." One evening in this production she heard that King Edward VII had just won the Derby.

Timidity was not one of her failings, and, seized with a daring inspiration, she sat down and wrote a letter to King Edward asking him if she might be allowed to wear his racing colors on the stage.

To her intense surprise, not to say anything of the mystification of London, she received a reply a few days later granting her permission. An evening or two later the beautiful girl precipitated one of the liveliest sensations in the history of the British capital. She appeared in "Alice in Wonderland" garbed as a jockey in a royal blue tunic, with scarlet sleeves, white breeches and a black satin cap trimmed with gold braid. It is the only time anyone appeared on an English stage in the royal racing colors.

While King Edward declined to interfere with the costume, the Royal Jockey Club took summary action. Not even the monarch himself had the right to let any other than his own jockey wear the royal colors.

But the publicity proved quite helpful to the beautiful English girl, who now began to regale her admirers with strange and fanciful tales of blue-blooded ancestors. She was clever enough not to let London know that she was a product of its teeming and poverty-cursed East End, and her parents were shrewd enough to keep out of the limelight.

Though her role in "Alice in Wonderland" was a minor one, she attracted the attention of the director of the Imperial Russian Ballet, which was appearing in the West End. She was asked to join the ballet, though she was, as yet, untrained.

Through hard work, she was soon acclaimed as a finished dancer, and eventually she appeared at Brussels as premiere danseuse. At last she was on the road to fame. The most illustrious men of the Continent, even Emperors, were to worship at the shrine of her beauty.

As prima ballerina at the Opera in Paris, the Theater de la Monnaie in Brussels and La Scala at Milan, she was greeted with orchids and roses, jewels and furs. In Berlin Kaiser Wilhelm summoned her to the royal box.

"I wonder if your little hands could carry this heavy box," he said, and he gave her a beautiful gold powder-casket.

When she returned to England she was a social celebrity—she had been recognized by German royalty. Friends, fine clothes, dazzling jewels, "influence"—all were hers. Her admirers were willing to be scorched, so long as it was she who lit the torch.

Her tour of the provinces was like the triumphal march of some mighty queen. Men with ancient titles, playboys of Mayfair, distinguished leaders of the professions, politics and industry, followed in her wake. An Earl begged her to become his wife. She declined the offer of marriage, but accepted his gifts and laughed when he was posted as a bankrupt.

England was beginning to whisper that she was made to ensnare, and never would herself be trammeled in matrimony, when she created a great sensation by eloping with an Egyptian illusionist.

HE DESERTED her. Calamity was now to dog her every move. That year her mother died.

She married a wealthy London haberdasher, but the clash of temperaments parted them after very few weeks.

In 1914 the troops of the Kaiser, the Russian Czar and the Austrian Emperor began to move across forbidden frontiers, and Europe was in the throes of a mighty conflict. To France journeyed Dolores. There she ran a cinema for the British troops until the armistice.

On her return to London, the prima ballerina of the Imperial Russian Ballet had been forgotten. In the awful cataclysm the great organization itself had gone under. But Dolores was still a beautiful woman. Men whose names were well known in society and art began again to buzz about her.

One day while she sat in the Cafe Royal, debating whether she would continue her work as a model or attempt a return to the stage, Jacob Epstein, the world-famous sculptor, came in. At the time Dolores was under contract to many well-known artists, including Augustus John and Jacob Kramer. She was unwilling to accept any more engagements to pose. She heard the stage calling her. She thrilled to the plaudits of a London audience.

It was a pleasing reverie, but Epstein, the Titan of the British art world, said he wanted her for a model. In an instant her dreams of theatrical fame had fled, for to serve the London sculptor would, indeed, make her name known throughout the world.

Epstein was so enthusiastic about her possibilities as a model that it was not long before he insisted that she come to live in his home. He wanted a perpetual source of inspiration.

The one-time prima ballerina settled down to a life of endless travail. Epstein at work spares neither himself nor those around him.

Terrific were the demands made on the model.

And under the eye of the sculptor she always had an uncanny feeling that he was transmuting her very soul into the stone under his chisel, and that never again would it be her own.

In 1923 the art world was thrilled when Ep tein placed on exhibition "A Bust of Dolores." The very boldness

LOVE ON LOCATION

By NARD JONES

PRESTON, population 476, elevation 2158 feet, was extremely excited. Not mildly excited, as when the railroad had widened the arc of a nearby curve, to include the town in its timetable. Not moderately, as when Creston was nearly chosen as the site for a new normal school, but wholly and definitely excited.

For Hollywood had come to Creston. Straight out of the glamorous cinema city, a party of six actors, one actress, a director, a script girl and a whole parcel of sound technicians, had arrived to film scenes for "Love in the Wheat." The errors of movie executives have been made the theme of many a song and story—but in this instance the executives were eminently correct. There was no better locale in which to film a wheat harvest and, with suitable modesty, Creston County was aware of this.

Accepting the compliment in hospitable fashion, a number of Creston citizens had rented Memorial Hall and held a party for the Hollywood visitors. They assumed that the languages of food, drink and modern dance music are universal, and so provided all three. It was never quite clear whether Mr. Pursley, the director, was invited to make a speech, or whether he insisted on it. But, in either event, he made one.

Seated close in a corner of the hall, Logan Digby and Ann Creswell listened with interest to Mr. Pursley. They did not think of the harvest as either exciting or spectacular. This may have been due to lack of dramatic instinct. Perhaps it was because they had been born and raised in Creston County. Possibly it was but a temporary lapse of appreciation, growing from the fact they were in love. Spectacular and exciting! thought Logan Digby in dry mockery.

BUT Mr. Pursley appeared to believe it was more than both. The big combine threshers, moving in stately but noisy fashion through the wheat, were, he pointed out, nothing less than epic.

"This," he said, waving his arms in a gesture calculated to embrace all that he had seen in Creston County thus far, "is epic. Colossal. It is gripping and primary. And this picture we are making, 'Love in the Wheat,' will immortalize you people and your tasks."

At the thought of being immortalized the crowd stirred uneasily. "He talks," whispered Logan Digby, "like the ads for The Bijou Theater." Ann said, "Hush, Logan. I think he's interesting."

"Tomorrow," went on Mr. Pursley, "we will begin filming a few background scenes. By the end of the week we will require the co-operation of some kind rancher in order to take scenes of harvesting operations for the picture. I hope to be able to announce the location tonight, and you will all be invited to watch. In fact, there'll be a chance for some of you to take part and later see yourself on the screen."

There was a murmur. Mr. Pursley held up his hand. "And now I want to introduce you to the little lady who is star of this production. She takes the role of the farm wife, Julie. I present . . . Miss Elissa Montez."

Svelte, fragile, unutterably sure, Miss Montez arose and smiled graciously. "I can't tell you how happy I am to be here, how happy this party has made me . . ."

"She doesn't look like a farm wife," said Logan. Ann noticed that he was just a bit breathless. "Oh, I don't know," she whispered. "If she changed that dress for a Mother Hubbard and stood over a stove I think she'd make it."

But Logan scarcely heard her. "She's certainly a peach."

"Maybe," Ann said, "you'll get to dance with her."

Logan did. He danced with Miss Montez three times, but the first didn't count, for he was so nervous he hardly knew what was happening.

He danced in silence, wondering if he should say something; and when he did manage to say something he wondered if perhaps he should dance in silence. But at last his good sense gripped him, and he blurted out: "I'm as nervous as a cat, Miss Montez. And I don't know why I should be. After all, you're just a pretty young woman, aren't you?"

Elissa laughed deliciously. She answered lazily, modulating: "Yes . . . just a woman, after all, Mr. Digby. You are nice to say I am a pretty one."

She found it more than pleasant to be dancing with this young farmer. He was a type she hadn't encountered. Big men, yes, and men with a deep tan like Digby's. But nobody with the same things beneath the tan.

He had come with the little dark girl who was dancing now with Pursley. Engaged probably. Destined to marry and have children and raise wheat in this dull and stuffy country. Miss Montez was faintly amused, not because she was either genuinely sophisticated or wholly intelligent, but because she had learned to be amused by sincerity, just as she had learned to speak correctly for the microphone.

With a smile she remembered Papa Jannsen's warning as she left Hollywood. "This time on location behave yourself, Elissa. The last time you were a very bad girl and got into the newspapers. You think it makes no difference in these villages, but news about a star travels fast."

She remembered Papa Jannsen's fat forefinger, wagging at her. "No liquor, Elissa. No speeding in automobiles. No fooling with fellahs who maybe don't see a movie actress every day and so don't know nothing yet."

PAPA Jannsen was a monkey. Ye gods! how amuse one's self in this place for two weeks if not—well, if not with this tall young farmer who trembled when he danced with her, and then blurted out that she was a pretty woman?

"I suppose," she asked, "you own a big ranch, Mr. Digby?"

"Well . . ." Logan's voice held a note of pride. "I've got quite a place. Some say it's the best wheat land around."

"And you will be harvesting soon?"

"We pull into the north quarter tomorrow."

"Why don't you let Mr. Pursley take his scenes there, on your ranch?"

"Why—why, yes, I'd be glad to."

"Good, then!" She stopped dancing, took Logan by the hand and dragged him to where Ann Creswell was watching Mr. Pursley alternately talk and drink punch, which somehow had been generously spiked. "Oh, Mr. Pursley," cried the actress. "Mr. Digby will let us shoot on his ranch. It's the biggest in the State."

Blushing before Ann's direct gaze, Logan had no chance to protest the exaggeration. The director slapped him on the shoulder, heartily. "Mighty grand of you, Digby. Mighty grand. I'll need your advice on the technical stuff, too."

On the way home Ann Creswell was ominously silent, making Logan recall uneasily that he had paid much more attention to Miss Montez than to her. Turning from the wheel, he said: "Have a good time?"

"Yes, Logan. Of course, I don't need to ask about you."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean you had a perfectly lovely time—with Elissa Montez."

"Good heavens, Ann. You're not jealous of"——

Ann flared. "Jealous? Jealous of a painted monkey like that?"

"Well, I only thought"——

"You thought if you let them take pictures on your ranch you'd get to see her oftener. Perhaps you can save her from falling off a combine, or maybe she'll let you empty the dust out of her shoes. I'd like to see her walking across a stubble field. I'd just like to see her."

"Then," said Logan, in a huff, "come out to the ranch next Thursday."

The remaining mile to the Creswell place was covered in silence, and at the gate Ann got out without a word—giving the sedan door a husky slam as she did so.

But nevertheless Ann was among the crowds at the Digby ranch that next Thursday. "Not," she told herself, "that I care. But I just want to see how movies are made."

It would be difficult to explain how any harvesting, outside of that on Digby's ranch, was accomplished in Creston that week. Apparently everybody within a radius of 30 miles had driven there to watch. They crowded along the fence line, keeping a respectful distance from the sound technicians with their miles of wire and their strange-looking boxes—and their frequent signals for silence with a capital "S" and an exclamation point.

Pushing through the curious onlookers, Ann saw two cameras trained on Logan's combine and its string of mules and horses. Mr. Pursley was studying them with obvious care. Not far away was Elissa Montez, relaxed in a canvas chair which had her name lettered across its back. She was, Ann saw, smoking a cigarette.

Nobody but a fool would smoke a cigarette in a wheat field in July, and Ann had half a mind to tell the actress so. She wondered why Logan hadn't warned her. But he'd probably let his wheat burn rather than deprive Miss Montez of her pleasure. And if he saw Ann Creswell in the crowd he gave no sign of it.

"Mr. Digby!" the director yelled. "Mr. Digby, are you always the driver on your machine?"

A long, gaunt rancher spat over the fence meditatively. "They call 'em 'skinners,'" he advised.

Mr. Pursely turned to the bobbed-haired script girl. "Make," he said, "a note of that, Miss Ferris. . . . No, don't make a note of it, either. We can't call him a 'skinner' in the dialogue because outside the wheat country they wouldn't get it."

He returned his attention to Digby. "What I was going to say is, you don't seem to have enough trouble driving all those horses. There are a lot of horses there, and I want you to show the strain—the drama."

"It's no strain, though," said Logan from his perch. "It's easy."

"ALL right." Mr. Pursley sighed with resignation and for lost drama. "Now I want the machine to come up the field to the fence line here. Then Miss Montez will run out and wave her arms, and the thresher will stop. You see, she's just shot her husband at the house and she's running out to get help from the men."

"I'll have to make a round over the field," Logan told him. "Can't circle this outfit so close to the cameras."

"Okay." Mr. Pursley slumped in his chair and mopped his forehead.

As the noise of the machine's revolving threshing-heads grew fainter Ann Creswell turned to find Mrs. Henry Prendergast beside her. "Well," said the meddlesome old lady, nodding her head brightly, "Logan's quite an actor, ain't he?"

"Yes, indeed, Mrs. Prendergast."

"Mr. Pursley and some of them are staying at my place, you know, while they're takin' pictures out here," Mrs. Prendergast went on. "I heard 'em say that Logan photographs real well, and that Miss Montez wants him to go to Hollywood and try out to be her leading man."

"Is that so?" said Ann, feeling weak as water. "Is Miss Montez staying at your place, too?"

"Her? Indeed not! She's staying at the Digby's, if you please. Her and that girl with the eyeshade out there. I wonder what Logan's mother cooks for 'em?"

"It's absurd to think Logan would leave his ranch for a crazy thing like going into the movies," replied Ann stoutly.

"MAYBE you know him better than I do. But if you figure to marry him you better keep your eye peeled. He's been comin' by my place o' nights, takin' her for rides."

"What makes you think," said Ann icily, "that I figure to marry him?"

The noise of the threshing heads grew strong again, and through tear-dimmed eyes Ann saw the big machine being drawn up the field. Mr. Pursley sprang from his chair and braced himself. Then he turned and waved a hand toward Miss Montez.

At this signal the actress rushed into range of the cameras, waving her arms at the moving combine. She stood directly in the path of the horses, but quite evidently she misjudged the time necessary to stop 27 mules and geldings. Logan Digby stood up and pulled at the lines with the strength of his arms and the weight of his body, while the girl stumbled back. Then, just as the animals stopped, she slumped to the ground.

Ann saw Logan leap down even without wrapping the line around the seatpost, saw him pick up the actress and carry her to her chair. She saw, too, that Miss Montez was not so unconscious she couldn't grasp Logan around the neck with one graceful arm.

Ann had enough. She turned and fought her way through the crowd. She rushed to her tiny roadster, climbed in—and there on the seat beside her was the script girl, calmly enjoying a smoke!

"Sorry, sister. Did you want to use the buggy?"

"Why, I"——

"I knew she was going to pull a faint." The cigarette waved cynically toward the field. "As soon as I saw that big, handsome farmer lad I knew she'd do it. It'll be at least an hour before she 'gathers her nerves,' as she calls it."

"Do you think—that is, will Mr. Digby go to Hollywood?"

The girl shrugged. "How do I know? He's a looker, and maybe he could be taught to act. Especially if Montez puts up a yell for him to be her leading man."

THE girl turned to Ann with a quizzical smile. "You interested?"

"In what Logan Digby does? I should say not!"

The girl nodded. "Of course not." She gazed at Ann thoughtfully. "You're a sweet type yourself, sister. Why don't you have Pursley give you a test while we're here? Papa Jannsen likes to see tests from the sticks. He's nuts about finding talent under bushels or something. Why don't you?"

"I couldn't. I wouldn't want to. Not if—if"——

The script girl patted Ann's knees. "I get it. You're wise not to want to. Wouldn't it surprise the boy friend, though, if you made it?" She got out of the car and stood beside it, looking at Ann.

"Don't lose any sleep over this thing, sister. Papa Jannsen told me to keep an eye on Montez's funny business this trip. I've got an idea it'll come out all right. Only if anybody asks you a funny question, just answer it 'yes.'"

With that she started across the road. Puzzled, Ann started the car down the dusty highway. "If anybody asks you a funny question, just answer it 'yes.'" What had the girl meant by that? Hollywood jargon, Ann supposed, meaning nothing in particular. They talked a language of their own.

Her thoughts flashed back to Mrs. Prendergast's revelation. So Logan had invited Miss Montez to stay at his own house! She supposed it was decided between them about Logan's new career. Angrily, Ann pressed her foot against the accelerator.

NEXT day the news was all over Creston County that Logan Digby wasn't going to be a farmer any more. He was going to be a movie actor, and possibly marry this Elissa.

A week passed before the picture outfit was ready to go south again. Ann did not see Logan, or hear from him. And she told herself angrily that she would not go down to see them leave. She stayed at home.

Suddenly she could not believe her eyes. A car—a very familiar car—careened up to the gate and stopped with screeching brakes. Logan propelled himself from it, and in little more than three seconds had thrust himself into the hallway without so much as a knock.

"You can't do it," he said, grabbing her by the shoulders. "Do you hear me?"

"Can't—do—what?"

He relinquished his grasp. "Oh, so you intend to be crafty about it—do you? Well, you needn't try. I know all about it." He fished in his pocket and brought out a rectangle of yellow paper. "What about this? Miss Ferris, the script girl, gave it to me."

Bewildered, Ann took the proffered telegram. It said:

"Have just seen screen tests of Ann Creswell. Looks like a sure winner. Urge you bring her here and will have contract ready. Irving Jannsen, Acme Pictures Corp."

"Screen tests?" faltered Ann. "But I didn't"—— She stopped, remembering the admonition of the script girl, that day in the car.

"Well . . ." She brought her words out slowly. "If you can decide to go to Hollywood, I don't see"——

Logan grabbed her by the shoulders again. "Neither of us is going. We belong here—together. Maybe I went a little goofy for a while, but I'm not goofy now. We stay here where we belong, and we get married. Today. Do you hear me?"

"Yes," said Ann weakly. "I h-h-hear you. But p-p-please stop shaking me, Logan. It's no way to treat a girl you're going to m-m-marry."

Making the 'Police' Dog a Federal Prison Guard

German Shepherds Have Proved Their Merits at Four Government Institutions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE Bureau of Prisons of the United States is conducting an experiment in the use of German shepherd, commonly called "police," dogs to patrol prisons and prevent the escape of prisoners. Two groups of dogs have already been purchased for the work, and it is planned to train a third group later this year.

The dogs purchased by the bureau were trained at the Fortunate Fields Kennels near Morristown, N. J., where the "seeing eye dogs," taught to lead the blind, are trained for their work.

Sanford Bates, Director of the Bureau of Prisons, explained that he was using dogs in Federal prison work because of their success in prisons in New York and Pennsylvania. He said they had been particularly successful at the Greaterford prison in Pennsylvania and that guards there praised the dogs' faithfulness and perseverance at risk to themselves. The dogs used at Fortunate Fields are imported from Switzerland.

Some of the dogs now in Government service and their trainers.

Intensive training of the dogs begins when they are about a year and a half old, and after several months of such instruction they are ready for a final month of training with the person or persons with whom they are to work. Each of the dogs trained for the Bureau of Prisons was taught to work with two guards.

Bates described the "graduation exercises" held when the second group of dogs completed their training course in June. He said the dogs were taught to mind nobody except the guards with whom they were trained. To try out their obedience he held out meat in front of their noses, but they refused to eat it.

In another test they proved able to go over a seven-foot wall, which is not unusual, for German shepherds sometimes jump higher than ten feet. Further to test their ability, two men dressed as prisoners jumped over a wall and started running in opposite directions. A dog and the guard with it had to catch both men. The dog ran after one, caught him and held him until the guard got to him and then pursued and caught the other fugitive.

Bates cited this as an example of the occasions when a man and a dog can work more effectively than two men. He said another advantage of using the dogs was their ability to hear and smell better than men. He asserted that a dog on patrol at night might smell or hear an escaping prisoner when a guard would be unaware of his movements.

The prison director said that the dogs are not vicious. They are trained to run after a prisoner, to pull him down to the ground and then to release their grip. If he does not get up or try to get away they will let him alone. But if he gets up they are trained to pull him to the ground again.

Bates pointed out that the dogs are not primarily used for trailing, although they do that excellently.

He declared that they have never attacked any person without provocation and that there have been no untoward results from their use.

Training of the first group, consisting of six dogs, was completed in January. Two of them were sent to the Federal Industrial Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio; two to the new Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, and the remaining two to the Southwestern Reformatory at El Reno, Oklahoma. All six turned out well and have performed their duties in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

THE eight dogs which "graduated" in June were shipped to the Federal prison at McNeil Island, California. Two died of distemper; four were sick or did not respond to further training; while two were able to do the work expected of them.

Bates attributes that result to the prevalence of distemper in that section and the effect of the change in climate on the dogs.

The result of the first six months of the Bureau of Prisons' experience with police dogs, Director Bates said, showed a saving in money—an important argument for their use. He pointed out that the dogs cost $350 each, while the salary of a guard is $1680 a year.

The average length of usefulness of the dog is from six to eight years, it is estimated.

The Fadeout of the 'Wickedest Woman in London'

of the creation started tongues wagging. It even became a question as to whether the model was making the sculptor famous or the sculptor making the model famous. Henceforth, the world was to know the model as Dolores.

For seven years the association between Epstein and Dolores continued. The wine of success went to the head of the beautiful woman. She was dizzy from her triumphs, and soon began to regard herself as a Circe whose every whim should be gratified. About the studios of Chelsea, London's art colony, her escapades were now attracting the attention of Scotland Yard. Every now and then there would be a suicide, a bankruptcy or an embezzlement, and the name of the unhappy victim would be linked with that of Dolores.

She had a way of making a laughing stock of admirers when she was tired of them or had pumped them dry. One day an Indian Prince, who had always been a popular figure in England, implored her to accompany him to the theater. The occasion was a command performance, which their majesties, King George and Queen Mary, would attend.

She refused at first, then laughed and said: "Very well, provided you will walk down Regent street with me in your robes of state at 3 this afternoon."

SHE appeared, the night before, at an artists' ball attired as a gypsy. She dressed again in these rags, seized a tambourine and met the potentate. What the Maharajah's feelings were as he walked down the great shopping thoroughfare with London's most notorious woman probably no one will ever know. And then her part of the bargain was unfulfilled. Scotland Yard intervened and saw to it that Dolores did not attend the command performance. Dolores explained that she was weary of him and resorted to public humiliation to be rid of him.

The attentions of another suitor had a more ghastly finish. A well-known journalist, one of the ablest political correspondents of his day, became infatuated with her to such an extent that his work suffered. Often, out of sheer pity—a trait few people suspected in her any more—the beautiful model would sit in the lobby of the House of Commons until midnight or later, so that he would carry on with his job. Finally his love turned to frenzy, and now he is in a lunatic asylum.

Even Dolores was driven to speculate on the fatal nature of her attraction for men. She wrote:

"I have now arrived at the definite conclusion that my lure is part of a survival from the undying past which I am occasionally permitted to glimpse; and I know that my reincarnations will continue in this old-time aspect. What was I in those days of beauty? Was I Venus, or did I, who have never yet found the ideal love, only embody the torturing desires and rapturous fulfillment of passions? I know not."

But whether she was Venus or all the furies, the scandals in which her name was now constantly linked had the inevitable result. First, she broke with Epstein, and it was not long before she found it difficult to obtain work.

Then came a day when London reeled in horror before the woman's callousness and cruelty. It was the Atkinson affair.

A YOUTHFUL British painter, Frederick Atkinson, well on the way to fame, fell in love with the siren of the studios, despite the fact that she was quite a few years older than he. She stripped the lad bare of all possessions, then cast him aside.

In a frenzy of despair, the young painter begged Dolores for one final interview. She agreed to visit his studio in Chelsea one afternoon at 5 o'clock. All afternoon and into the evening, he anxiously awaited her coming, for she had promised. But she failed to keep the appointment. There was more life at the Cafe Royal than in trysting with a love-maddened boy. Anyhow, there was nothing more to be had from young Atkinson.

Sipping her champagne at the Cafe Royal with another admirer, she was roused by the shouts of the newsboys—"Another Dolores suicide!" Atkinson had been found gassed in his studio after an overdose of a sleeping draught.

Dolores at the inquest testified that she had not gone to his studio because she feared he had made up his mind to kill her.

"I am the wickedest woman in London," she laughed as she left the Coroner's court. There was no dissent.

Atkinson left this note:

O child of pain,
Dolores,
Thy fatal star doth beckon on to doom;
Smile thou not, for tears are all thy store
And sadness is thy treasure
evermore.
Seek not thou for happiness;
For in the book of time,
Stained with the tears of blood and martyred
Is set a seal,
And on it fixed thy name,
Dolores.

London had tired of her. The Atkinson suicide roused the fury of the decent and law-abiding men and women of England. There was a hue and cry for the cleansing of the "cesspool" in Chelsea. The "fatal woman" must no longer be tolerated in Bohemia.

But Dolores was to have still another affair, this time with Philip Yale Drew, an American actor, hailing originally from Marshfield Hills, Massachusetts. These two crossed each other's path when Drew came under the eye of Scotland Yard as possibly having some knowledge of the slaying of Alfred Oliver, a tobacconist of Reading, England.

Although Drew was completely cleared by a Coroner's jury of having any connection whatsoever with the crime, the "cat and mouse" game to which he had been subjected by the Yard left him a broken man.

Drew and the model sought to be married, despite the fact that Dolores was still the legal mate of her fourth husband, an American. The Massachusetts man was so persistent in his demands for the ceremony to be performed that he was threatened with arrest. He next clashed with the police over the orders issued to Dolores that she report herself as an alien, since she had forfeited her British citizenship through marriage to the American, Lattimore. Drew was told by the authorities to cease advising Dolores as to her citizenship, unless he wished to go to jail for a violation of the Defense of the Realm Act.

Fate was now to deal the cards from a new deck for Dolores.

She was to starve among the down-and-outs of London. She was to pass night after night on the Embankment with the homeless and the hunted of the metropolis.

In a London attic, cold, hungry and forgotten, living upon the charity of her slum neighbors, she was found, on the very day that the newspapers were acclaiming the sale of "A Bust of Dolores," at Sotheby's, for a fortune. Only 10 years before she had led the luxurious life of the world's greatest and highest-paid model. Now hunger drove her to sit on exhibition in a "dime museum" in Tottenham Court road.

IN THAT London thoroughfare she sat in the very barrel in which the unfrocked Rector of Stifkey had once been on public view. The scum and dregs of humanity came to gaze, to jeer and ridicule, while not a few came to appraise the creature whose kisses were once sought by the great.

Four cents was the fee.

Outside of the museum hung a poster, "Dolores, Epstein's Famous Model." Epstein, in a towering rage, called and demanded that his name be omitted from all advertising in connection with the woman.

"Dolores is not my model," he cried. "Your advertisement is misleading, and I demand that it be changed."

And the name "Epstein" was withdrawn. In a few days it was restored with the word "late"—"Epstein's Late Model."

Death was beckoning. She had no fears, for during her last years life had been a series of torments by disease.

So Dolores, who enjoyed the adoration and mad woolngs of many men, died the other day, alone and forgotten, in a London hospital. Before she died she turned to her nurse and said:

"Tell my friends, who have shared my joys and sorrows, not to mourn for me—for I am immortalized in art."

The Social Row Over Prince Henry's Visit

In the State of Queensland, where the Prince will spend his first week-end, lives the family of Scott McLeod, which is socially prominent in that part of the world. When it was announced that Prince Henry would favor this family by accepting its hospitality during the first Saturday-to-Monday of his Australian sojourn, war was declared by two rival families, the Bells and the Collinses. The State Government of Queensland favored the McLeods and announced in veiled terms to the Prime Minister that if he decided to change his mind about sending His Royal Highness to their house at Terrica Station, the act would be interpreted by them as political suicide.

So the two rival families had to concentrate their attentions on the struggle for the second week-end.

According to latest reports no solution has yet been arrived at. Their political affiliations make it seem likely that the Collinses will win out, but the Bells are exerting pressure to induce the Aldermen to back them up in their requests.

Newspaper accounts say that the feud which has raged between the Bells and the Collinses for many years might conceivably lead to violence on the part of the supporters of these modern Montagues and Capulets before it is over. Thus far the honors are about evenly divided. When the Collinses built an enormous ballroom at their house, "Tamrookum," for the Prince of Wales' visit, the Bells had him for a week-end at their house, "Cooch-in-Coochin." Later the Duke of York, who took exercises in voice culture to cure his unfortunate habit of stuttering while he was en route to Australia, took his Duchess to stay with the Collinses.

It was on the occasion of the Prince of Wales' visit that the partisanship of the Collins supporters manifested its greatest virulence. One such henchman, a shop keeper, plastered the windows of his store with insulting placards. He was arrested and tried for libel; the police tore down his placards.

YET this particular duel is only one of a number that are raging throughout the Dominion. Social leaders all over Australia and New Zealand are waging war in the same spirit.

That is what the Prince faces on his arrival in Australia, and all his courage on the hunting field and all his experience as a Captain of the Tenth Royal Hussars won't help him through it. In all probability he would give a lot to have his young brother down there in his place, for Prince George might be able to get through social difficulties as easily as the Duke of Gloucester could get through a line of infantry. The former has a calm temperament; he preserves it by indulging in a little quiet knitting and crocheting when the paths of society are beset with such terrors as the Australian journey holds. Yet, if it be true that he was sulky about the announcement of his brother's commission at first, he now has cause to thank his lucky stars that he will not be asked to deal with such problems as Mrs. Scott McLeod and Miss Pansy Caroline Fitz-George can think up for him.

The latter is the shopgirl who says that King George is her cousin. Originally from New Zealand, Miss Fitz-George goes by her mother's maiden name, Reid. She has documents seeming to prove that she is a granddaughter of the Duke of Cambridge, a cousin of Queen Victoria's. While this would not make her a particularly close relative of the Prince's, it is doubtless a closer connection than can be boasted by any of the Bells, the Collinses or the McLeods. She has convinced newspapers and their readers of the validity of her claims and, though provincial governors may shudder in their wing collars, she intends using her precedence for what it is worth.

Prince Henry William Frederick Albert Windsor, Duke of Gloucester, Earl of Ulster and Baron Colloden, Aide to His Brittanic Majesty, King George V of England . . . will arrive at Fremantle, Australia, on October 4. He will be greeted by joyful crowds and flying flags. A band will shake the windows as it blares out the strains of "God Save the King." And someone in that crowd may murmur with a touch of sympathy, "God save the Prince."

Where the Medieval Jousting Tourney Still Survives

Maryland and the merits of her manhood and womanhood. There were graceful phrases concerning beauty and love and such things. It was a satisfactory speech. Senator McIntosh, once a candidate for Governor, knows what's wanted on such occasions and is no slouch at fanciful allusions.

The lists were cleared, and after trial rides, the competitive part of the tourney got under way. The marshal shouted: "Knight of Ivanhoe, prepare to charge!" The Knight of Ivanhoe, in private life John H. W. Ward of Randallstown, gray-haired, spare, tanned and vigorous, one of the promoters of the tournament, got his horse in position at one end of the lists.

"All right, Sir Knight," the marshal called, and the Sir Knight set his mount to the charge. Under the three standards he rode, taking a ring neatly at each one. They were inch and a half rings, and offered little difficulty to this veteran jouster. As he rode back down the course, escorted by two heralds—taking all three rings in a charge entitles a rider to this escort—the band broke into a lively tune, and the spectators applauded. The marshal called the next rider.

Each knight had three rides at the large rings. Those who survived this test then rode at one-inch rings. The next size was three-fourths of an inch, and for the few who had not been eliminated by that time the final charges were made at rings only half an inch in diameter—about the size of a girl's engagement ring.

There was a fascinating precision in the charges of these expert riders. The horses ran like smoothly-working machinery. The knight stood in his stirrups in a sort of crouch, lance gripped in his right hand and held against his body by his right arm, eyes fixed with intense concentration on the target. So steady and still was his position that one might have thought he was a carved figure moving on greased skids.

Competing on even terms with the seasoned jousters, right down to the final tie, was a boy who quickly won the crowd's approval by his grace and skill. Francis E. Brady of Owings Mills, tilting under the title of Knight of Soldiers' Delight, was a slightly built lad, who looked younger than his 16 years. His tow head was bare. When he rode back down the lists after expertly taking his three rings, and the band and the spectators hailed his achievement, there was an embarrassed but pleased smile on his serious young face that prolonged the applause. Francis wound up with third honors, after missing the second and third of the half-inch rings. It appeared that it was lack of seasoning to support the nervous tension of the final charges rather than lack of skill which caused his misses.

The Brady family, incidentally, was well represented. Six members were in the tournament, and three of them won the first three places. The Knight of Woodlawn, winner of the championship, is Joseph P. Brady of Woodlawn, Baltimore County. His brother, Patrick of Owings Mills, the Knight of Little Bird, was second. Francis is their nephew. John Ward, the Knight of Ivanhoe, took fourth prize.

The Pikesville tournament differed from most of these events, in that it was not divided into amateur and professional classes. All the contestants were on the same basis. The winner received prizes—a silver cup and $25—and also the privilege of choosing the queen for the ball. For second place there was a silver cup and $10, and for third, a riding bridle and $5. There were nine other small prizes, including one for the best costume, won by Ward. The knights who finished in the six places immediately below the champion selected the maids of honor for the queen.

JOSEPH BRADY, the champion, chose Mrs. Robert Hymiller of Pikesville as queen. Her coronation took place that evening at the ball, Congressman William P. Cole delivering the coronation address. Following a tournament convention, the queen, her maids and the knights who had chosen them had the floor to themselves for the first dance.

The Knight of Woodlawn follows the prosaic calling of a produce dealer. But he has had his share of thrills as a veteran of the romantic but bloodless Maryland tournaments. Through his victory here the other day he crowned his ninety-ninth queen. Warwick, the king-maker, about whom history has made quite a fuss, could scarcely tie that.

Riding at rings came into being as an outgrowth of the tourneys of the Middle Ages—probably as a form of practice for the dangerous sport of jousting. In most places it failed to survive the decline of chivalry.

Just how and when it came to America are matters of uncertainty. They say in Maryland that it was introduced in this country in Colonial times. At Prince Frederick, in Calvert County, there is an annual tournament which local inhabitants say was established nearly 300 years ago. Before the Civil War these tournaments were common throughout the South, participation being confined to members of the aristocracy. The war, of course, put a damper on this, as well as many other social activities, and afterward the sport was not revived widely. Its persistence and popularity in Maryland and Virginia may be attributed largely to the fact that in these two states a regard for the past and for romance is combined with an intense and general interest in horsemanship.

BEBE DANIELS

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Bebe Daniels. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by her in these roles in the following movies: Miss Benton in "Registered Nurse"; Lily in "Silver Dollar," and Reginia Gordon in "Counsellor-at-Law."

Next week: Otto Kruger.

Poor Midnight, he had such a splendid idea to catch Red Wily. O Hum was to let Red capture him and then he was to blow smoke from his sleep-producing pipe in the wicked old fox's face and put him to sleep so Midnight and his friends could carry Red off to jail. But alas, Red threw O. Hum's pipe away when he caught him, and when Midnight and his friends went to Red's den that night, they were met by a very wide awake fox, who made them all his prisoners. And we see them tied to a post in Red's cave as

THE PLAY BEGINS

RED WILY—My dear young friends. I can't begin to tell you how your visit has affected me—inside—Ha! ha! ha!

BILLY—My Grandpa Grumpy will pay you a visit that will affect your outsides as well, if you don't let us go.

RED WILY—Your Grandpa Grumpy? Hm-m-m. That's right, I suppose I might be expecting a visit from him. This place would be awful small for all of us if he came. Let me think. Hm-m-m. (And while Red is thinking let us go to the home of Harry Hoarder.)

HILDA HOARDER—(Leaning out of a window.) Harry didn't come home last night, either.

WILMA WADDLER—This is the first time Wally stayed out all night. I'm worried.

TURTLE—I'm worried about Tom, too.

HILDA HOARDER—Let's you and I hunt for them, Wilma, and let Topsy stay here with the children. (And this being agreeable, Hilda and Wilma set out. After hunting a while they meet Grumpy and tell him their troubles.)

GRUMPY—I fell awful sorry for you ladies, but their staying out all night is no affair of mine. (Just then Cheep Cheep comes flying by.)

CHEEP CHEEP—No affair of yours? I saw them all walk into Red Wily's den and Bill was with them.

GRUMPY—(Flying into a rage.) Walk into Red's den? I never heard of anything so dumb. I ought to hit Billy with this club. But I guess I'll hit that old fox a couple of times first. Gr-r-r.

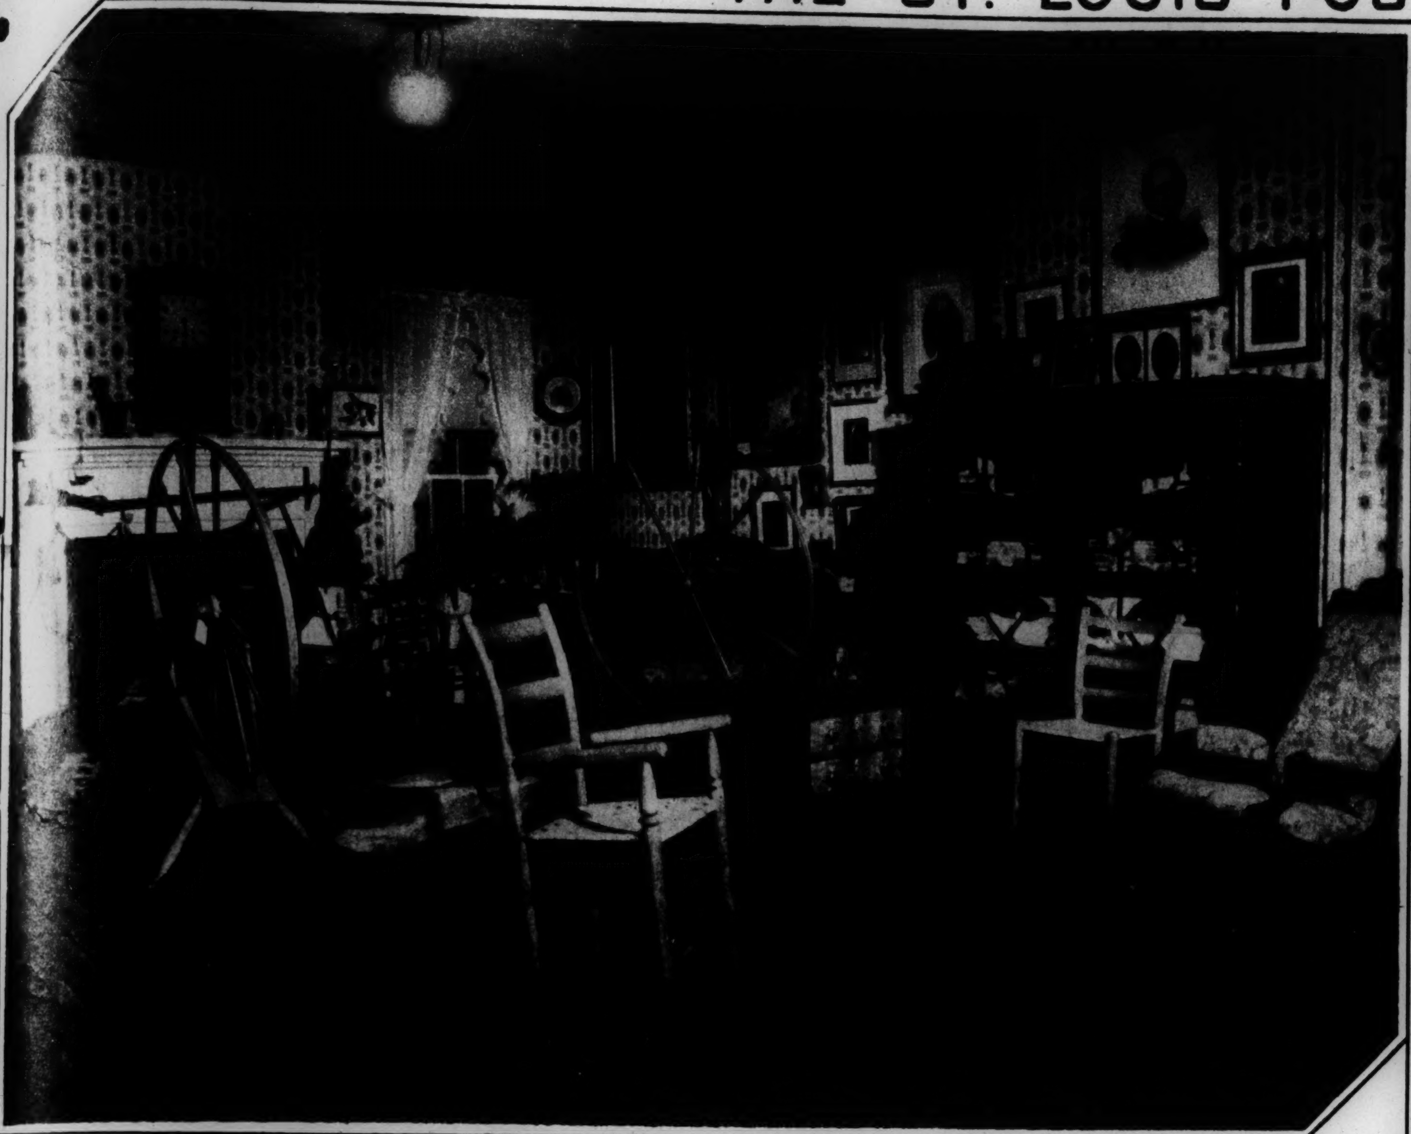
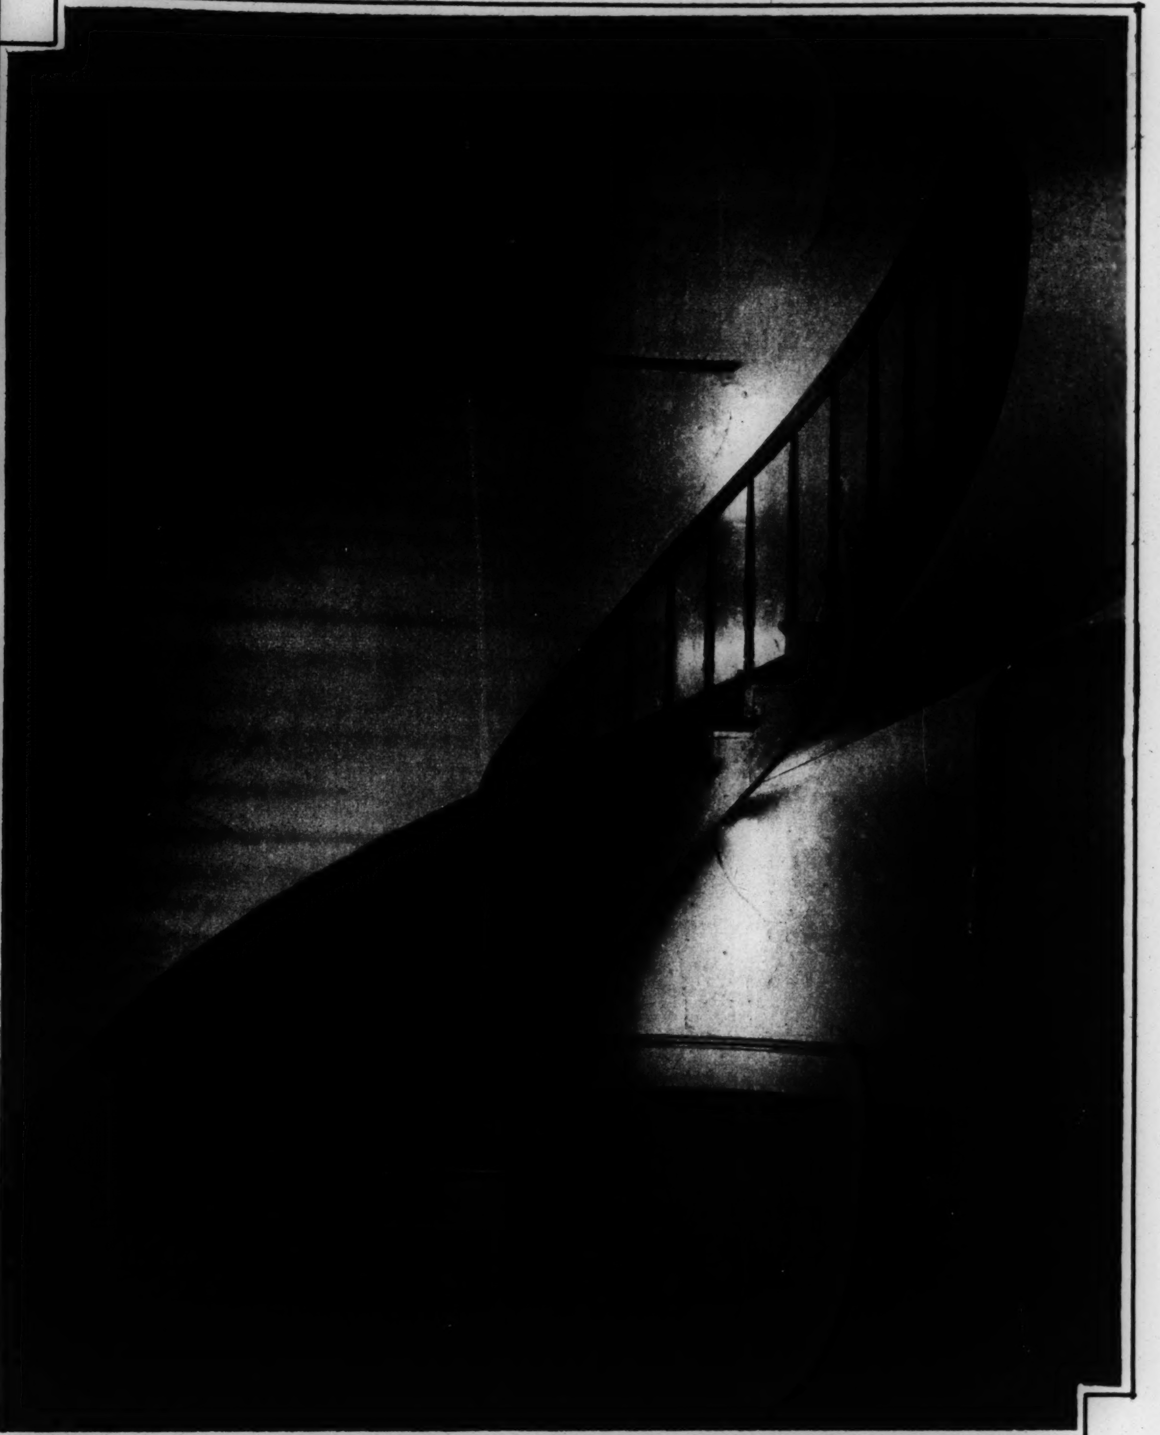
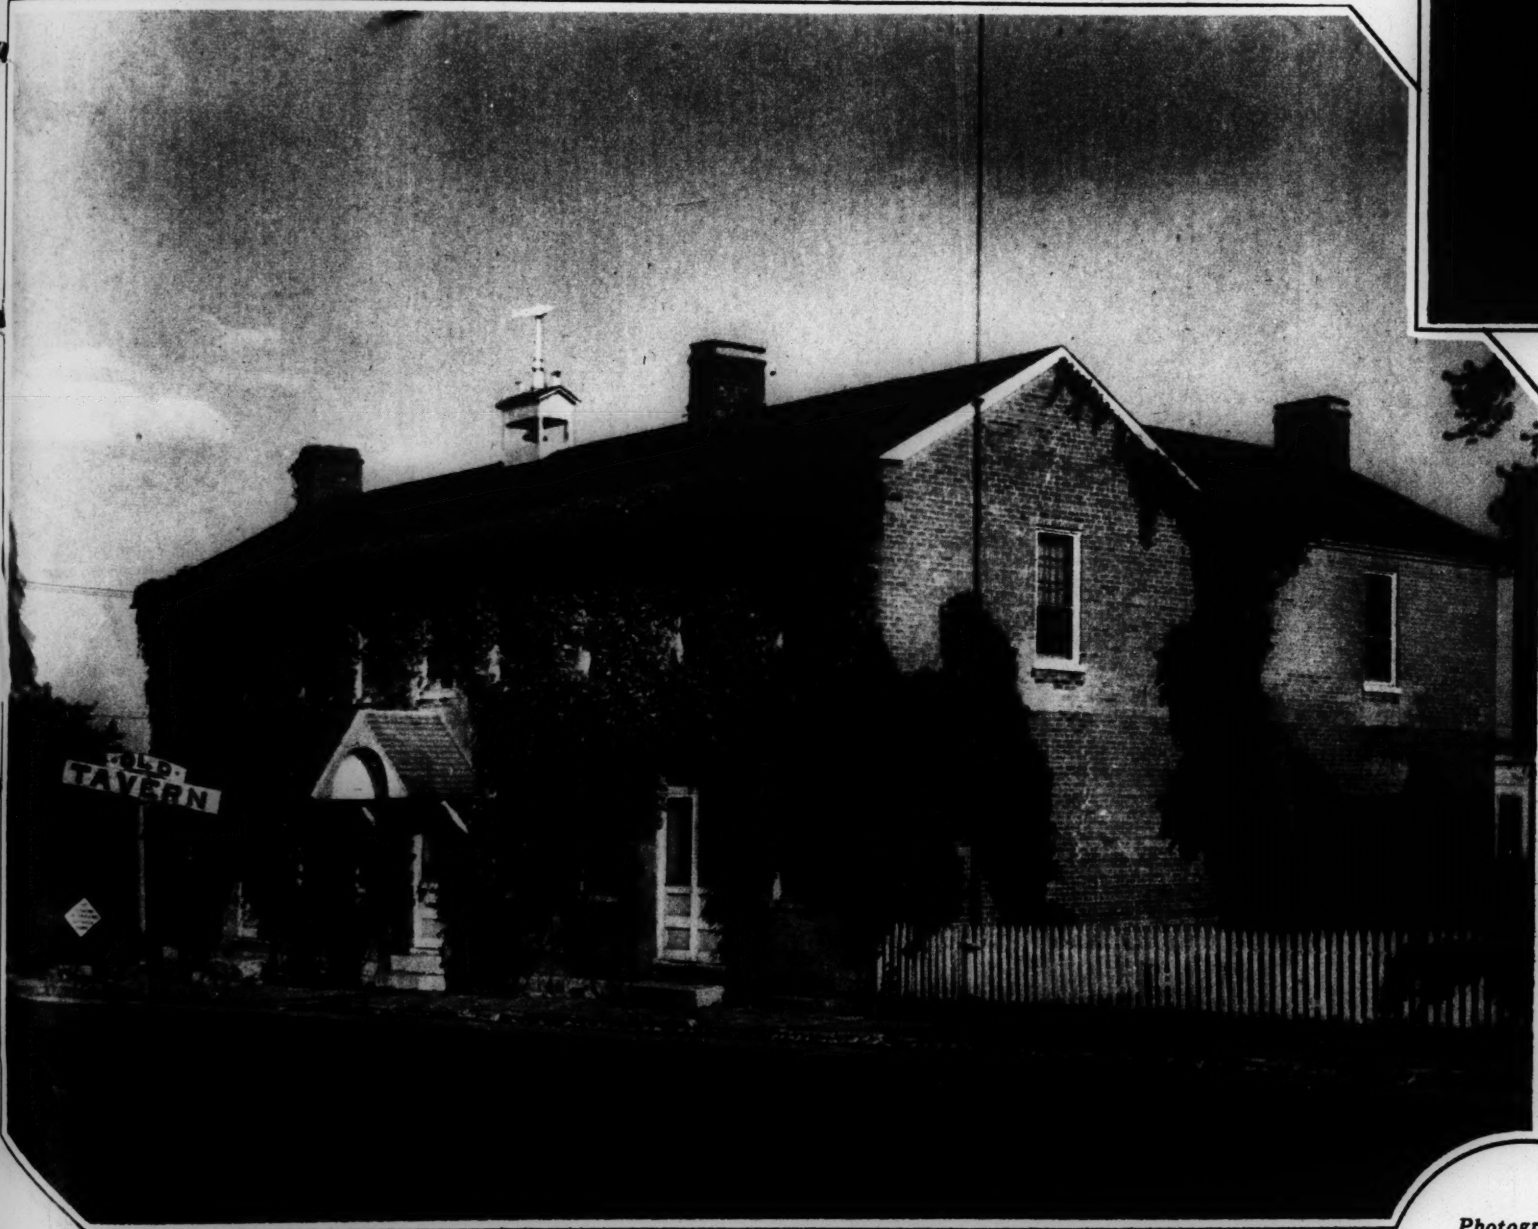
ARROW ROCK, A RELIC OF EARLY MISSOURI



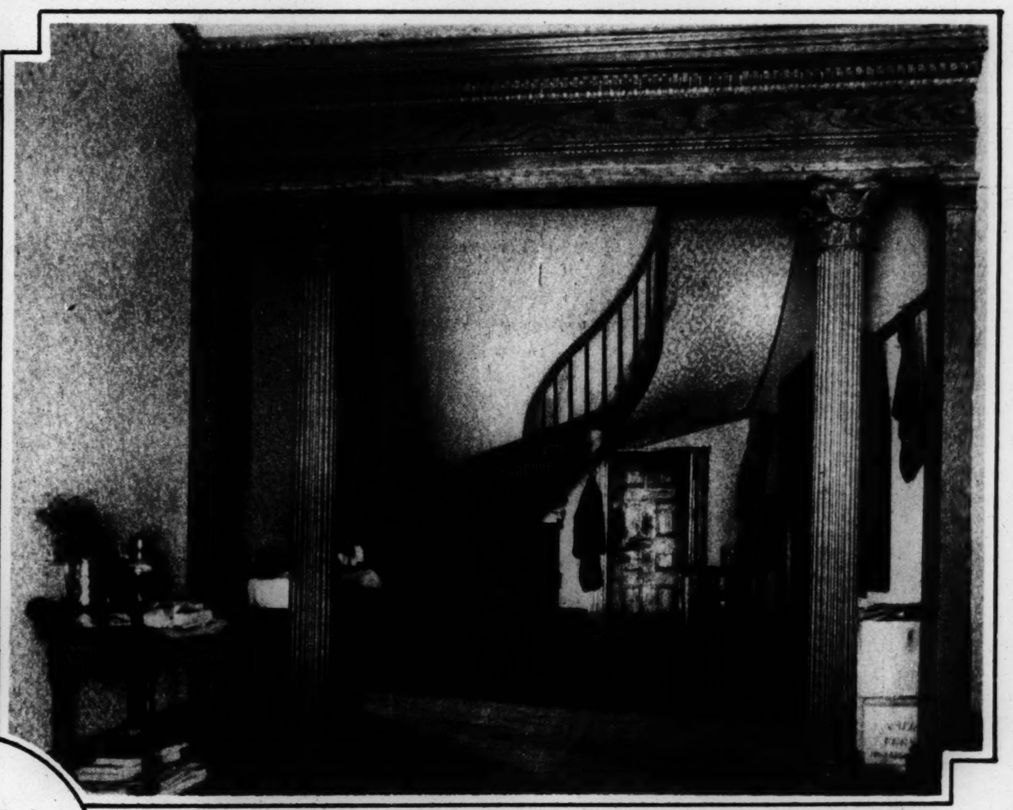
Santa Fe traders met to drink and talk in this room, now used as a museum, for it was the grog shop in the old tavern during the boom days of the overland traffic. Arrow Rock, about 150 miles west of St. Louis in Saline County, was a favorite waystation on the Santa Fe trail.



A gem of Missouri architecture: The old staircase in the century-old Hardeman house, which was built by Dr. Locke Hardeman, a son of Thomas Hardeman, founder of this State's first botanical garden on a nearby Missouri River island.



Though more than a hundred years old and partly devoted to museum exhibits, the old tavern at Arrow Rock is still in operation. Such famous Missourians as Claiborne F. Jackson, Meredith Marmaduke, Dr. Sappington and George Caleb Bingham were its frequent guests.



Entrance hall in the Sappington mansion: Built in 1844, the home of Dr. John Sappington (conqueror of malaria in the Middle West) is an example of the finest native interior decoration of the period and was the scene of many important functions. The woodwork is carved pine.

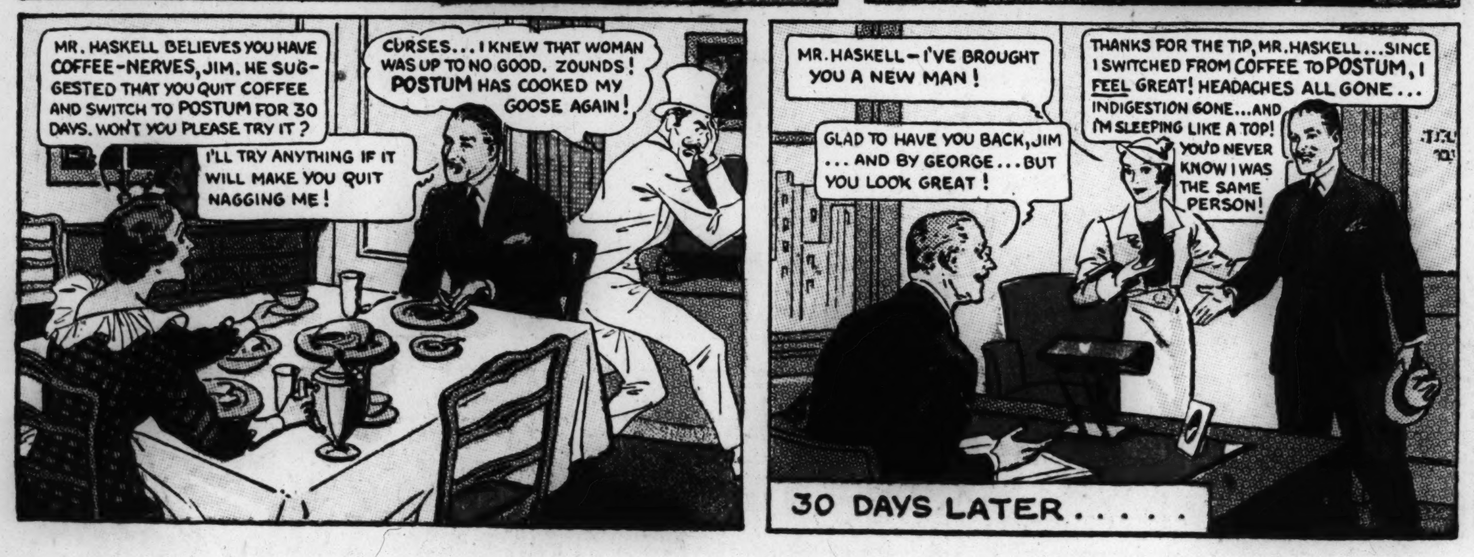
JIM, IF YOU'RE AS CROSS AT THE OFFICE AS YOU ARE AT HOME, I DON'T WONDER MR. HASKELL GAVE YOU A CALL-DOWN!
THERE'S A WIFE FOR YOU - NEVER TAKES YOUR PART. SHOW HER THAT NEITHER SHE NOR HASKELL CAN TELL YOU WHERE TO GET OFF!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
YEAH! - THAT'S WHAT I SAID, HASKELL! I'M NOT COMING TO WORK! I'M THROUGH... GOODBYE!
WHY - WHY - JIM!
GREAT STUFF, OLD MAN - THAT'S TELLING HIM!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
JIM - DO YOU MEAN YOU'VE QUIT YOUR JOB?
YES - AND WHAT OF IT? I'M TIRED OF BEING HECKLED BY THAT SLAVE DRIVER! AND I WISH YOU WOULDN'T START PICKING ON ME, EITHER!
ATTA-BOY! TELL HER TO MIND HER OWN BUSINESS. YOU'VE GROWN UP... YOU SHAVE AND EVERYTHING
MR. COFFEE NERVES
I'M WORRIED ABOUT JIM! THEY'VE BEEN SO PATIENT WITH HIM AT THE OFFICE. I THINK I'LL GO TO SEE MR. HASKELL!
LOOK AT HER. SHE KNOWS SHE CAN GET YOUR GOAT BY JUST SITTING THERE AND SAYING NOTHING!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
MR. HASKELL, IF JIM APOLOGIZES, WILL YOU TAKE HIM BACK?
IF JIM COULD GET BACK HIS SUNNY DISPOSITION, HE'D BE OUR MOST VALUABLE MAN, BUT I DON'T THINK I WANT HIS BAD TEMPER AROUND THE OFFICE, MRS. SLOAN.
PRIVATE
IT'S NOT HIS FAULT, MR. HASKELL. HE DOSEN'T SLEEP WELL, HE HAS HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION AND HE'S TIRED ALL THE TIME. DO YOU WONDER HE'S CROSS AND IRRITABLE?
BY JOVE... PERHAPS JIM'S TROUBLE IS A CASE OF COFFEE-NERVES! SEE IF YOU CAN'T GET JIM TO SWITCH FROM COFFEE TO POSTUM FOR 30 DAYS. IF THAT HELPS HIM AS MUCH AS I THINK IT WILL, I'LL WELCOME HIM BACK WITH OPEN ARMS!



MR. HASKELL BELIEVES YOU HAVE COFFEE-NERVES, JIM. HE SUGGESTED THAT YOU QUIT COFFEE AND SWITCH TO POSTUM FOR 30 DAYS. WON'T YOU PLEASE TRY IT?
I'LL TRY ANYTHING IF IT WILL MAKE YOU QUIT NAGGING ME!
CURSES... I KNEW THAT WOMAN WAS UP TO NO GOOD. ZOUNDS! POSTUM HAS COOKED MY GOOSE AGAIN!
MR. HASKELL - I'VE BROUGHT YOU A NEW MAN!
GLAD TO HAVE YOU BACK, JIM ... AND BY GEORGE... BUT YOU LOOK GREAT!
THANKS FOR THE TIP, MR. HASKELL... SINCE I SWITCHED FROM COFFEE TO POSTUM, I FEEL GREAT! HEADACHES ALL GONE... INDIGESTION GONE... AND I'M SLEEPING LIKE A TOP! YOU'D NEVER KNOW I WAS THE SAME PERSON!
30 DAYS LATER . . . . .

"IT SEEMS strange that coffee could have had such an effect on Jim!"

"Why—you know children aren't the only ones who should never drink coffee. Many grown-ups should not drink it either. The caffein in coffee can cause sleeplessness, nervousness, indigestion . . . make people irritable."

"There's no caffein in POSTUM . . . so it gave Jim's system a chance to throw off the ill effects of the drug. Then his headaches, indigestion and nervousness left him, and he could sleep soundly again!"

There are many people who suffer no ill effects from coffee. But there are many others who cannot safely drink it—perhaps you are one. The caffein in coffee may be working to rob you of sleep, to undermine your digestion, or to upset your nerves.

If you suspect that coffee disagrees with you . . . try POSTUM for 30 days. It's a delicious drink, and may be a real help. It costs less than half a cent a cup—and it's easy to prepare. A product of General Foods.
